THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 18, 1898.

Agriculturists to Hold a Meeting.

We perhaps too little appreciate the debt which we owe to the farm. Every class of society is affected by the sowing and the reaping. Good crops make good times, not only to those who gather them, but to those even who never see the green fields, or the golden grain. The most profitable mine is the farm. Its output is more valuable than that of all other mines combined. It's treasures are precious indeed for they are the nation's life. The farmer feeds us. His flocks and herds clothe us. The din of the busy mills and factories, the hurry of the restless business world, cease not because the farmer's toil supplies that which maintains the untiring activity. The world would be poor, indeed, but for the work effected by some classes of society. The work of the farmer, however, is indispensable. Without the fruits of his labour all activity would cease. Let the farmer prosper and the whole country will be benefited Let his fields bring forth scantily and all classes will be poorer. No subject, then, should be more interesting to the general reader than that which relates to our agricultural interests. Anything that can be done to further these interests should receive the earnest consideration of all. Especially should all commercial organizations do what they can to further agricultural interests. No one realizes more than the farmer himself how far inferior are the agricultural methods of our province to those of some of the other provinces, notably Ontario. There is a strong feeling that these methods must be improved. Entirely too much of our products grown is of a low average quality. Poor goods keep down prices. The conviction has been in the minds of many of our prominent agriculturists for some time that the hampered condition under which the farmers are working can not be borne much longer. The people demand that agriculture be placed in its proper position and receive the support it deserves. The need is being felt of all classes uniting and advancing the work. This matter is at present receiving a very practical turn by the calling of a mass meeting of agriculturists which is to take place in our town on Nov. 25th. A highly interesting and suggestive programme is promised. Questions such as the following will be discussed: How Agricultural Schools may Reach and Influence the People. What can be done in the Common and High Schools to Train the Pupil in Agriculture? &c. A number of able men will give addresses and many of our practical farmers have signified their willingness to take part in the discussions. We hope to see this meeting largely attended and much good result from it.

Science in the Schools.

At the annual meeting of the Institute of Science, held at Halifax last Monday, the President, Supervisor McKay, in his address, made some practical suggestions regarding the study of science in our schools which well deserve the consideration of our educationists. It is well known that science receives far too little attention in our schools and colleges. Between Germany and our own country a striking contrast is seen in this respect. As a result of the attention given to theoretical science in that land, technical education has received an enormous development. In the small kingdom of Saxony, considerably less than one third the size of Nova Scotia, there are 111 technical institutes. Prussia has 200 such schools with 12,000 pupils. Hesse, with a population of 1,000,000, has 33 schools of design, 43 of manufacturing industries, and many others for artisans of various trades. England, slow in adopting reforms, has at last awakened to a sense of the danger in which she stands of losing her industrial supremacy unless she gives more attention to the study of science, both theoretical and practical. Mr McKay in discussing what measures must be used to secure for science the place which it should have in the actual work of the schools and colleges, makes the following excellent suggestions: (1) Make science an imperative subject in the college matriculation examination for B. A. The colleges more than any other agency determines the character of the education given in the schools below them. High schools and academies aim to produce the kind of students upon which the college is the most likely to set the seal of its highest approval. (2) The present grade "A" work in the academies should be discontinued and its place should be taken by a more thorough practical science course for grade "B". (3) The professional training of academic teachers should be part of a college course. Their professional training should be a post graduate course, at least in part, and should be as thorough as the post graduate training required in the other professions. (4) Examinations in science should be a test of the student's ability to perform and interpret experiments and examine and classify mineral, plant and animal specimens. If these suggestions were carried out, our school system would be revolutionized.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14th.—The post office department is advised that the postal union convention concluded at Washington in June, 1897, comes into force on January 1st next. Under it important changes are made in the postal regulations in force between Canada and other countries.

The New Gov.-General.

Lord Minto arrived at Quebec Saturday and was sworn in Governor General of Canada, Lord Aberdeen vacating the throne to make room for his successor. Lord Aberdeen then introduced the members of the government, Supreme Court and a few others. Mayor Parent then presented the Governor General with an address from the citizens of Quebec, after which Lord Minto replied in French and English. He said he retained many pleasant recollections of his residence in Canada fifteen years ago. A few minutes were spent in conversation and Lord and Lady Aberdeen retired to Spencerwood, where they were entertained until the arrival of the Labrador, in which they sailed on Sunday evening. A guard of honor of the 8th Royal Rifles and the premier and his colleagues were present. The band played "Home, Sweet Home," as Lord and Lady Aberdeen boarded the steamer. Lord and Lady Minto returned to the Scotsman, proceeding on her to Montreal.

A meeting of the federal cabinet was held at Quebec Saturday afternoon, and the last official act of Lord Aberdeen was to sign an order-in-Council placing $25,000 at the disposal of Mr Fielding to be expended for the relief of the sufferers by the West India hurricane.

The first order-in-Council signed by Lord Minto was one giving the chapel which Lord Aberdeen built at Rideau Hall, at his own expense, as a gift from him to the Canadian government.

A November Wedding.

MACDONALD—SMITH.

At 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, 15th, two young people launched their bark on the matrimonal waters of life to weather the storms and enjoy the calms as one. At the above hour the words were said by Rev. Henry Dickie, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Windsor, where the bride attended services regularly, that united Mr Joseph MacDonald, Wolfville, and Miss Mabel Smith.

The interesting event was consummated at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs J. C. Smith, Gerrish St., in the presence of the family and a few relatives. The bride was becomingly attired in a blue costume of the new shade and wore a blue hat. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was partaken of. The popularity of Mr and Mrs MacDonald is borne ample testimony to by the large number of costly wedding presents from their numerous friends, including several from the United States. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch. Mr and Mrs MacDonald were driven to the station in Mr Jenkins' handsome barouche drawn by his pretty pair of grays, where they took the Bluenose for Yarmouth, en route to Boston, where they will remain until Sunday. On their return they will reside in Wolfville, where Mr MacDonald has purchased a house. A large number of friends of both the bride and groom gathered at the depot to extend congratulations and good wishes. Torpedoes were in evidence as the train moved out. Mr MacDonald has for some years been the efficient and obliging station agent of the D. A. R. at Wolfville. His many friends in that town, here and elsewhere, will join the Journal in extending congratulations to this popular couple.—Hants Journal

The ACADIAN joins in wishing Mr and Mrs McDonald every possible happiness.

1899 Columbia Calendar.

The 14th Annual edition of the Columbia Desk-pad Calendar, issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Hartford, Conn., is being distributed. This calendar occupies an unique place among advertising devices. It may be said to be largely the product of the Pope Company's own customers, whose contributions in the shape of fitting testimonials to the merits of Columbia product, or clever bits of verse about bicycling in general appear at the top of the various pages over the names of the contributors. The pages for Sundays, the first day for each month, and holidays, present appropriate selections from well-known authors.

Any person may obtain a copy by applying to the nearest Columbia dealer or by sending five 2-cent stamps to the Calendar Department, Pope Mfg. Co., Hartford, Conn.

THE NEW REMEDY.

Nature is full of hidden forces that are being utilized and yet to be utilized for the benefit and upbuilding of mankind. One of the most important of these of recent date is Prof. Warner's Liquid Ozane. People are talking about it wherever it has been introduced. It is selling more readily every day, and even in places where it has not been advertised, from one person telling another of the benefit received. It is a great tonic and builds up the system and thereby throws off disease. It is good for almost any complaint, but particularly effective in Dyspepsia, and general debility, and is also a great remedy for sore throat, bruises, etc. It is not a drug but the vital principle of life, and the most delicate can take it without harm.

Now is a good time of the year to take it, and fortify the system for the winter. Get a circular at the druggists', which tells all about this wonderful remedy, and try it, and you will see that it all or more than is claimed for it.

The Academy Home, Wolfville.

Dear Sir,—Another "brief communication under the above caption appeared in your paper of Nov. 11th in the interest (?) of that institution." It is by the same author as the former article, our local scribbler and poetaster.

Now it is bad enough to be assailed by the above writer, when he uses only pure nonsense and perversion of truth, but when to these he adds the sin of bad grammer we as students of pure English cannot let it pass in silence.

When "Homer smote his blooming lyre" any deficiencies in grammar were excused on the ground of poetic license, so when our modern poet "smites his blosted lyre," and throws the suffering muse into convulsions, we are perfectly ready to excuse faulty construction. But when he descends to anything as prosaic as eggs, and eggs too that narrowly escaped fulfiling their destiny of producing chicks, we are at once prepared to take offence at a lapse into any such poetic form as bad grammar. In the issue of Oct. 28th our literary friend referred to the "abundance of chicken." In that of the 11th of this month, he refers to eggs. I wonder if the writer saw the relation between those eggs eaten two years ago and the chickens eaten this year? We at once see the poetic nature of the man here, in the use of the word chicken. What imagination and play upon words! but a "rose by any other name would smell as sweet" and I suppose a "Hen by any other name would be as tough." Although the chicken question may be passed thus briefly, the egg question is of much greater moment, the follower of Virgil sees in the eating of fifteen eggs at a sitting a grave drain upon the egg supply of the Baptist Denomination of these provinces. Admitting the gravity of the side of the question thus brought to light, we sincerely hope that despite the alarm raised by our economical friend, the commissariat of the institution will not hold the eggs any longer than is absolutely necessary. It is to be hoped the egg crop of this year is up to that of former years, as it would be a cause of regret if the demand should cripple the resources of the denomination.

Regarding the statements of the "actual cost" of each student, we accept them for what they are worth, but we are not yet satisfied upon this point, although our informant may have access to information that we have not. Lastly, this writer of Epic, Georgic and Philipic advises that the "aspirant for literary honors" be sent home and other horrible things done to him, thus cutting off, perhaps, a budding genius. Had this been done in the rev. gentleman's case when first he timidly (?) put forth the maiden product of his pen to a cold world, we shudder to think of the loss to classic literature, and of the numbers still tossing upon beds of sleeplessness and pain who have been lulled to rest by the dreamy rythm of his blank verse. Virgil wrote pastoral poems, so has our friend. Tennyson wrote In Memoriam, so does our friend. But Virgil and Tennyson never descended to such prose as our modern poet, or used such undignified language, and some day, perhaps a thousand years hence when the pastoral and lyric poems of Mr Parker are being eagerly read by an entranced world, as he sits upon the edge of a golden cloud writing poetry with a quill from his wing, he will regret the prostitution of such transcendental gifts and wish that while on earth he had not descended to abusive prose, but that he had written a few more barrels of poems on "How to plant beans," or "How to make hens lay," or other themes more in keeping with his pastoral gifts. STUDENT.

Last year Charles Dana Gibson illustrated "The People of Dickens" for The Ladies' Home Journal. The pictures were so successful that this year, and during next year, W. L. Taylor, the New England artist who has made such rapid strides in his art, will illustrate "The People of Longfellow"—also for The Ladies' Home Journal. The poems selected are "The Psalm of Life," "Hiawatha," "Evangeline," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," "The Children's Hour," "The Village Blacksmith," and others.
