Beware Cramp If You Swim After Eating

By Dr. L. K. HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

CHEERED by the milder beam, the sprightly youth speeds to the well known pool. A while he stands gazing at the inverted landscape—half afraid—to meditate the blue below. Then he plunges headlong.

The old swimming hole of boyhood's happy hours has been found in these matter of fact, bacteriological days to be not all that it is cracked up to be. Like the old oaken bucket that hangs in the typhoid infected well and the cakes that mother used to make, the swimming hole is a nest of lurking microbes.

How many a time have you, like the Two Foscari, cloven with arm still lustier and breast more daring, the wave all roughened at the swimmer's stroke?

Who in these lithesome, blithesome hours, be she a swimmer or he only a bather, has not pined for thirst amid the sea of waves. Then comes the thought, as you hatchet and chop the green water, that, however near or far one shore may be to another, the wave which now ripples across your moving foot will soon be on the distant strand.

To swim with discretion means never to venture in the earth-absent deptis when you are the slightest bit below par. You must neither dare the waters after a meal nor brave even the ripples after the loss of a night's sleep.

The slightest indisposition may mean drowning to the best and most venturesome swimmers. "Cramps," as muscular contractions and spasms of the tissues are termed, paralyze the most alert and skilful water nymphs, when they appear.

These usually assail the bold swimmer when he is tired, overfed, underfed, overworked, shocked, or otherwise in want of a complete physiological balance.

"Children are we
Of the restless sea,
Swelling in anger or sparkling in glee;
We follow our race,
In shifting chase,
Over the boundless ocean-space!
Who hath beheld where the race begun?
Who shall behold it run?

The waves are full of whispers wild and sweet;
They call to me—incessantly they beat
Along the side from stern to curved prow."

Answers to Health Questions

A. N.—My hair is falling out. Please recommend a growth promoter and a dandruff cure.

Loosen the scalp with the tips of your fingers twice a day, simultaneously rubbing in this:

Castor oil	2 ounces
Sulphur	½ ounce
Cocoa butter	½ ounce
Salicylic acid	10 grains
Beta napthol	10 grains
Balsam Peru	½ dram

Take two grains of thyroid gland three times a day for one week, then stop one week, and so alternate for two months. If palpitation, nervousness or other disturbances appear do not take it.

MARY McL.—My head aches every morning, and I have fever with it. When I kneel down I feel as if my head would come off, and after I stand up I feel as if I would fall down. I snore when asleep very loud. A thick phlegm comes in my throat and chokes me, and a bad feeling goes up my back to my head. I get short of breath when I go up two flights of stairs. Am 59 years old and have had seven children.

You need a good rest and relief from all responsibility. If your oldest children and others of your family will allow you a month or two away from them, and if you will expend much of the time in bed, eating green vegetables, fresh fruits and thinking only of pleasant things, taking purgatives daily, you will be quickly improved.

very minute instead of mooning around thinking how beautiful it would be if the bell should ring and you should go to the door and he should stand there with a big bunch of roses and a box of candy and an engagement ring in his pocket, and couldn't wait until the door was shut before he clasped you in his arms?

Oh, of course, you'll have to go through it; you can't escape it any more than you can escape the measles; but try to have as light an attack as you can.

In six weeks from now you won't be worrying about this boy at all. It will be some other boy—and that's a good thing; that's just the way it should be at your age.

Be happy, Sweet Sixteen, you're at the right age for that anyhow. Bless your heart, be happy.

NO LONGER EXEMPT FROM MILITANTS

"MadWomen" Evade Sentries at King's Palace and Smash Windows

LONDON, May 29.— Buckingham Palace is to be no longer exempt from the window smashing raids of the suffragettes.

It leaked out last night that between 11 and 12 o'clock two militants succeeded in evading the sentries outside the palace. Entering the quadrangle they began throwing stones at the windows and had smashed two of them when the sentries seized them and took them to the police station within the precincts of the palace, where they gave their names to the police. The master of the royal household refused to prosecute them and they were released after a few hours' detention.

Cheer Announcement.

At a meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union last night, when Mrs. Mansell told of what the two women had succeeded in doing, the audience burst into cheers lasting several minutes. The suggestion that the Queen must be horrified at the treatment meted out to imprisoned suffragettes was received with loud cries of dessent.

Mrs. Mansell strongly protested against the action of the Archbishop of Canterbury in "refusing sanctuary" to Miss Annie Kenney, adding that the archbishop would be allowed no peace until women obtainod the vote.

Miss Barbara Wylie, alluding to the raid on Buckingham Palace, said that "Red Thursday" would have results more widespread than had yet been seen. One result would certainly be that the women would become more and more determined to cast off their chains, hold up their heads and blow down to neither the Government nor the King.

THE HEART SONGS OF 90 000,000 PEOPLE

Many of these songs cannot be found in any other collection. They came in yellow, time-worn, tear-stained sheets—that had been sacredly treasured from childhood—others were written out from memory—some were given by titles only—or remembered verses, involving a long search to obtain the whole.

Of the thousands received it is safe to say that the several hundred selected—as having the largest number of votes and the highest endorsement—represent to-day the taste of the Canadian people in their choice of music.

We believe that the distribution of this unrivalled song collection will bring more happiness into the homes of our readers, will do more to make them attractive to young and old; do more to inculcate a love for music; to soften, elevate and refine the home life; to cultivate the nobler and higher virtues of the fireside—than any other means we could adopt.
