TECHNICAL SCHOOLS IN MANY PARTS OF CANADA

Technical Education Commission Prepared to Make Report to Parliament on Result of Three Years' Investigation

DOMINION GOVERNMENT SHOULD GIVE GRANTS

Students Should Take Half of Their Course in Technical Schools and Other Half in the Workshop

Ottawa, May 30.—The technical education commission which was appointed about three years ago to investigate the different systems under which technical education is being offered to students in various cities of the United States, Great Britain, and other countries on the European continent, will submit a report for presentation to parliament before the house prorogues next week.

The members of the commission are at present in session here, collaborating on the final details of the report, and hope to complete their work in the course of a few days.

It is understood thta many radical and useful suggestions will be made, but the specific character of these suggestions will not be given out before the report is made public in parliament.

One, however, will probably be that the government make a substantial grant to aid the establishment of technical schools in seceral schools in the Dominion. Another will advocate encouraging students to take half their course in the schools acquiring theoretical knowledge principally and the other half in the practical side of the subject, trade or profession in the workshop or factory or studio. This system is followed with success in Cincinnati, Ohio, Fitchburg, Mass., and in parts of Germany.

GRITTY LADY WHO ACHIEVES RESULTS

Penetrated Secluded Portions of The World and Saw Some Strange Things

London, May 30.—How Miss E. C. Kemp, an English woman, interviewed a Buddhist priest in the mountains that lie between Tibet and Turkestan, was told at the Central Asian society.

The Earl of Ronaldshay, M. P., who presided, referred to the danger of the journey which had been made by the artist. "Even for a man, the road was full of hardships," he said, "but for a lady it was more than ordinarily dangerous. In the journey Miss Kemp would have to cross passes varying from 11,000 feet in height to 17,000 feet. Fortunately Miss Kemp accomplished the journey successfully."

Miss Kemp said that much of the comfort that attended her and her one lady companion was due to the tireless efforts of their servant, a small, wiry Mohammedan.

"He was a real enthusiast," said Miss Kemp. "I have seen him spring among the rocks, snatch up a nestful of young partridges, bring them for me to see, and have them back again in a moment, while the parent bird would be screaming a little way off at the liberty.

"As we came to the place where a great holy man lived in a tent in a valley, we saw a number of people doing a slow sort of a dance around his habitation. They would advance and retreat slowly and with dignity. The holy man—who also took an interest in the world beyond his surroundings—sat enthroned in cushions. Before him, stuck in the ground, were two arrows and the priest was by his side in the tent.

"He offered us tea, and I was given permission to sketch him with the understanding that he was to be given a duplicate. As the light was falling, the work had to be done at once, and it was not the best light to work with. But he got his copy the same evening."

The priest also demanded two paint brushes, she said, and some paper, and in exchange he gave permission to sketch the interior of a temple further on the road.

"FEED THE BRUTES!"

London, Eng., May 30.—One of the most interesting restaurants in the world is one in which the only diners are domestic animals. The restaurant is in Westminster, London. The sign on the window reads:

RESTAURANT FOR DOMESTIC ANIMALS. ENGLISH MEAT ONLY. FRESH TWICE DAILY.

The restaurant is arranged so that the domestic animals which patronize it may be perfectly comfortable while they are getting their meals. Those that wish to do so may sit down while eating. The women who serve the diners are very fond of animals, and know the wants of each particular customer. One of the regular callers at the restaurant, a dog, prefers having his meals in private, so instead of eating his luncheon in the restaurant he walks from his home to the place every day, buys his luncheon and carries it home. He pays his own bill at the end of each week, carrying the money tied in a little wallet around his neck.

Cats, canary birds, goldfish, parrots, monkeys, squirrels and goats are also provided for in the restaurant. There is a branch of the establishment at 123 York Road, Battersea.

GIBSON WILL TRY AGAIN TO PROVE HIS INNOCENCE OF GREENWOOD LAKE MURDER

MRS. ROSA MENSCHIK SZABO — BURTON W. GIBSON

MRS. BURTON W. GIBSON

The second trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer who is accused of murdering Mrs. Rosa Szabo, his client, on Greenwood Lake, N. J., by strangulation after upsetting the boat in which they were rowing, was set for Friday, May 23. This promises to be even more exciting than the first trial, in which the jury failed to reach an agreement. Gibson, who was the attorney for the murdered woman and who had drawn her will, in which he was made the sole beneficiary of the $10,000 estate, shortly before her death, says that he has no money to continue his fight to prove his innocence.

MANY WHITE WOMEN MAKE THEIR WAY TO THE HAREM

London, May 24.—The perils undergone by white women who marry Asiatics were emphasized by Mr. Foster Fraser, the well-known Asiatic traveller, in an interview yesterday. These dangers former the subject of a warning recently issued by the Australian government at the request of the colonial secretary, Mr. Harcourt. This warning primarily concerned marriages with the Pathans and others of the hill tribes of the northwest frontier of India, but Mr. Fraser extends the warning so as to include Mongols and Caucasians.

"It is extraordinary," he said, "to find the number of white women who are in the harems of Persia, for example. They are mostly English and American dancing girls who have met Persians who were travelling abroad, and, fascinated by tales of life in Eastern palaces, have married them.

"When I was in Persia I came across a typical case. It was that of a girl who had been an attendant at a stall at the Crystal Palace. There she was seen by a Persian in the entourage of the late shah, Nasr-ed-Din, when he visited this country. She married him according to Roman Catholic rites and with her sister went to Persia with him.

"Once in his own country, however, he immediately placed her in the harem, where she found herself but one of several wives and was forced to live a life of seclusion, cut off from her own people. She met only the Persian ladies of the royal harem, to whom, curiously enough, she used to translate Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's detective stories, in which they were greatly interested.

"Eventually her husband died and she desired to return to England, but many difficulties were placed in her way, and it was only by the persistent good offices of the wife of the British minister that she was able to depart, taking with her her son, on the strict proviso that he returned to Persia when he was sixteen years of age. Subsequently, I believe, she married an Englishman and now lives at Peckham.

"Marriages between Chinese, Japanese, Egyptian, Siamese or Persian men and white women are rarely happy. The men from these nations who travel are naturally wealthy, and the women who become fascinated by them forget that they will have to live in a totally different atmosphere. An intolerable longing for home comes to them, and escape is impossible."

As an example of the danger of mixed marriages to white women, a recent case may be cited in which it was held that a white woman married in England was no longer the wife of a Siamese after she had been deserted for three months, this process being sufficient for a husband to end his marriage in Siam, and the wife was bound by the laws of her husband's country.

G.T.R. AT LAST CLOSES DEAL FOR DEPOT, IS REPORT

Government and Railway Officials End Negotiations for Transfer of Property in Calgary, Says Ottawa Dispatch; Final Settlement in Few Days

ARCHITECTS ASKED TO SUBMIT BARRACKS PLANS

Mounted Police Will Get New Up-to-Date Home Near General Hospital; Work on Depot to Start Day New Barracks Are Ready for Red Coats

OTTAWA, May 30.—Negotiations betwen the Dominion government and the officials of the Grand Trunk Pacific for the transactions involvink the demolishing of the Royal North-West Mounted Police Barracks in Calgary, and the erection on the site of a depot for the Grand Trunk Pacific, have been practically completed.

The gist of the final settlement will be made public in a few days, the last details being in process of arrangement atp resent.

The negotiations have been carried on for the past year, with the government always in the position of demanding more than the Grand Trunk Pacific people were willing to grant. Meantime, work on the bridge over the Bow river at Calgary, for an approach on the depot on the barracks site has been steadily going on, and the general sentiment has been that the railway people would finally arrive at a settlement which would be satisfactory to the government.

The present terms, it is understood, confirm the first proposition that the Dominion government abandon the present site of the barracks at Calgary in favor of the railway depot, and that the Grand Trunk people erect a new barracks, at an estimated cost of $200,000, near the site of the present General Hospital at Calgary. The fact that the railway officials are at present in communication with the Dominion architects regarding plans and specifications for the new barracks adds confirmation to the report that the final settlement has been made. The new barracks must be ready for the occupancy of the mounted police the day work is started on the demolition of the old structures, so as not to deprive the police of a home for a single day.

The new barracks will have at least two residences for officials of the mounted police, barracks and drill halls for the men, stables, and increased facilities for the handling of prisoners, the present jail barracks having long outlived their usefulness. The government will be a big gainer by the deal, practically swapping barracks years behind the times for a new and enlarged and up-to-date home for the Calgary division of the police.

PARIS TOO SMALL IN AREA

Nearly One-Half of the People Live Under Unhygienic Conditions

Paris, May 30.—Dr. Bertillon says Paris is too small, or too many people try to live there, his estimate being that 1,209,550 of them live under unhygienic conditions.
