BAYLEY'S.

HE MURDERED AT LEAST FOUR

That Is Charge Laid Against an Aged Farmer.

BODIES OF TWO VICTIMS FOUND

Robbery and the Desire to Avoid Paying Debts Given as Motives for the Atrocious Deeds.

Colchester, Conn., Aug. 31. — That Gershon B. Marx, now held in the Norwich county, jail is the perpetrator of a series of cold-blooded murders probably without precedent in the history of Connecticut, is the belief of the state officials who today began a systematic search for bodies on the Marx farm. Four murders and an attempt to poison another man can, it is believed by these officials, be traced to Marx. The bodies of two of Marx's supposed victims, Joe Pavol and Joe Palm, have been found. Marx is awaiting trial charged with the murder of Pavol, his wife being held as a witness for the state. The two bodies for which the search was begun today are those of an 18-year-old boy and a Hebrew peddler.

The boy, who was known as Harry, arrived in New York from Russia, about three years ago, and came here soon afterwards to work for Marx. He worked on the farm for about six months, and then suddenly disappeared. Marx was asked to explain the lad's absence, and said he had gone to Hartford, to find employment. Beyond that he would not talk about the boy. The Hebrew peddler went to the Marx home one evening two years ago, and he has not been seen alive since, so far as known.

These two men, in the opinion of State's Attorney Lucas and Sheriff Jackson, met their death in the same manner as the two farm hands, and to obtain positive proof supporting their opinion, efforts will be made to unearth the bodies.

A Polander, known as "Joe," today made a statement to Sheriff Jackson in which he accused Marx of attempting to end his life with poisoned whisky. "Joe" took the whisky, but was afraid to drink it and put it away. When the body of Pavol was found "Joe" mentioned the matter to a constable and gave him the whisky and the constable turned it over to the jailer of the county jail, who promised to have it analyzed. Marx made still another attempt on "Joe's" life when the latter discovered the body of Pavol, it is claimed. After he had exhumed the body "Joe" went to the house and accused Marx of murdering Pavol and said he intended to notify the authorities. Marx picked up a scythe and said if "Joe" attempted to leave the place he would cut his head off. The farmhand escaped, however, without injury despite several vicious lunges made at him by Marx, according to the statement.

The motive for the crimes can only be traced to an insane desire on the part of Marx to escape paying money to persons to whom he was indebted. The two men whose bodies have been found were six months behind in their wages, as was the young boy Harry, of whom no trace has yet been found.

The manner in which these men met their death appears to be plain. Marx always slept with his hired man, his wife and four children sleeping in an adjoining room. It is said that he drugged his victims when they pressed him too hard for their wages and then crushed their heads with an axe or some blunt instrument, after which the bodies were dismembered and buried. Each of the bodies already found bears a phastly hole in the forehead.

The case of the Hebrew peddler appears to have been one of robbery and then murder. The peddler went to the Marx home with a large quantity of articles, including clothing, cheap jewelry, etc. The Hebrew reached the Marx house late in the afternoon two years ago and was never seen again. A few days after this event Marx hitched up a horse and wagon and drove to the home of John Marx (no relation of the alleged murderer), and tried to sell him a miscellaneous collection of clothing, some new and some second-hand. This clothing, it is believed, was the property of the peddler.

There seems to be no doubt that the other two bodies will be discovered. Marx had two farms, one of 165 acres and another of 105 acres. On the first farm was found the body of Pavol and on the second one the body of Palm.

There seems to be a prospect that Marx may defraud the state of an opportunity to pass upon his guilt or innocence of the murder of these men who have disappeared on his farms. The prisoner is a man 80 years of age and was not too vigorous when arrested. His health has been broken by confinement in the jail since last spring, and the natural nervous worry of a man to be tried for murder.

A RAILROAD DISPUTE

I. C. R. Says the G. T. R. Did Not Live Up to an Agreement.

Montreal, Aug. 31. — E. Tiffin, general traffic manager of the Intercolonial Railway, was the chief witness today in the investigation which is going on into matters in dispute between the Intercolonial and Grand Trunk Railways. He stated that since he went with the I. C. R. in 1901, the matter has been a source of frequent correspondence between himself and Mr. Loud, the freight traffic manager of the G. T. R. In the course of his evidence it transpired that one of the chief troubles was that the I. C. R. charges the G. T. R. with handling over freight traffic of the C. P. R. at Lennoxville for Lower Province points, whereas, according to an agreement between the Government road and the G. T. R., all traffic is to be handed by the G. T. R. to the Intercolonial. Mr. Tiffin produced a circular showing that the G. T. R. asked shippers to send their freight by the G. T. R. and C. P. R.

LEFT VERY WEAK BY LONG ILLNESS

And Suffered From Palpitation of the Heart—Gained in Weight and Strength by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. J. B. Lee, 129 Sydenham street, London, Ont., states: "Last spring I had a severe illness, which laid me up for several months and left me in a very weak and rundown condition. I also suffered from palpitation of the heart. Since using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have not had a single attack of heart trouble. I was soon able to return to work feeling strong and healthy, and also gained considerable in weight. I think that this is sufficient evidence of the virtue of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a builder-up of the system."

RUSSIA FAR FROM BEATEN

Lewis Nixon Says Her Resources Are Almost Inexhaustible.

New York, Aug. 31.—The Herald this morning says: Lewis Nixon, the former president and technical head of the United States Shipbuilding Company, returned yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. from a visit to St. Petersburg. While there he had been invited by the Czar's advisors to confer in regard to replacing the naval vessels lost during the present war for supplementing the imperial navy with the latest and most powerful types of warships.

"How is the war regarded in Russia?" Mr. Nixon was asked.

"With what impressed me as a dignified, but calm and patient confidence."

Mr. Nixon does not feel at liberty to discuss at present the probable purposes of the Czar's war minister, either in regard to the upbuilding of the Russian navy, or as to the outcome of the present conflict with the Japanese, but he does intimate that the capture of Port Arthur would by no means indicate the end of the struggle. With the nations of the world guaranteeing the neutrality of China, there is a feeling of quiet exultation over indications that China may be tempted to serve as an ally of Japan. In that event there could be no reason for Russia to defer sweeping into Manchuria by way of retaliation, and she would herself be well within her rights in doing so.

Russia is only just beginning to call upon her reserves, Mr. Nixon observed, and tremendous agricultural and mineral reserves, besides the enormous store of gold in her vaults and her great population make the present moment only the beginning of the conflict for the supremacy of Eastern Asia.

The birth of the heir to the throne is having a very far-reaching effect, Mr. Nixon believes.

THREE DAYS OF HARD FIGHTING

Before Japs Could Drive the Enemy From Anshanshan.

WON BY MIDNIGHT CHARGES

Mikado's Troops Finally Drove the Wedge into Russian Center, Compelling Them to Retire.

Tokio, Aug. 30, 5 p.m. — Details of the operations against Liao Yang from Aug. 25 to Aug. 28, which include an account of the desperate three days' battle in the neighborhood of Anping, and the abandonment of Anshanshan, reached Tokio today.

The first Japanese army was divided into three columns and moved against Anping, where the Russians occupied a steep and well-fortified eminence, which they had spent months in strengthening. The Russian position to the east and south of Anping extended along a ridge north of Taishukou to Hungshaling, through Hanpolin and Taijen Tsu. The advantages were with the Russians. The Japanese were not able to secure good positions for their artillery, except along the Liao Yang road.

The Japanese left column moved forward Aug. 23, driving back a small force of Russians, and on the 25th took possession of a line on an eminence north of Erkhtaokou and south of Pelingtzu, and prepared to give battle the following day. The center and right columns made their preparatory moves before the night of the 25th.

At midnight on the 25th, the Japanese center suddenly rushed forward in a bayonet charge against the Russian center, which was located in the vicinity of Kungchangling. This charge was a surprise, and proved to be eminently successful. The Japanese captured the entire position.

The Russian forces on the second and third line were strongly reinforced and offered determined resistance. A fierce rifle engagement ensued and continued without abatement throughout the 26th. The Russian artillery posted at Anping got the range of the Japanese lines and sent in a deadly fire. The Japanese artillery was not able to obtain good positions and was badly exposed. The Russian infantry endeavored to recover its lost ground, but the Japanese held their positions and managed gradually to press the Russians toward the valley of the Lan River.

The Japanese right column made a night attack on Hungshaling. A severe rifle and artillery duel opened at dawn and lasted until dusk. The Japanese left column, the principal strength of which was in infantry, attacked an eminence north of Tashikou at dawn on the 26th. The Russian artillery was in semi-permanent fortifications north of Ta Tien Tsu and northwest of Kaotengsu, and in strength was superior to that of the Japanese. This bombardment reached its height between 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Russian fire had dwindled at times, but the Japanese were unable to silence the enemy's guns. The Russian infantry was reinforced and pressed against the left wing of the Japanese left column. The Japanese troops were dangerously exposed, and the advance of the left column retired.

In the meantime, the Japanese center had pierced the Russian line, completely dividing it, but both the Russian wings held their positions firmly.

During the afternoon of the 26th a great thunderstorm broke over the battlefield, covering the hills with mist and preventing accurate use of the guns.

During the night of the 26th, the Japanese made fruitless assaults on the Russian positions at Hungshaling and Tahsikou. They finally succeeded, however, in getting possession of the position at Hungshaling, where they captured eight guns, which had previously wrought havoc in their lines.

On the morning of the 27th, through mists and haze, all three Japanese columns moved forward. The Russians resisted this advance vigorously, and it was nightfall before the Japanese were in possession of the long ridge.

The fiercest engagements of Aug. 26 occurred at Hungshaling and Kungchangling. The moonlight revealed the Japanese troops as they advanced. The Russian defenders of these positions, besides opening a fierce rifle fire on the enemy, rolled boulders down the hillside upon the climbing Japanese soldiers. The Japanese reserved their fire and climbed steadily upward, finally reaching the summit and driving the Russians out. The Russian forces included the second army corps, the rifle regiments attached to the Tenth Corps, and half of the Seventeenth Corps. They numbered in all 65 battalions and 120 guns. The main force retreated toward Liao Yang. The Japanese casualties in this fighting numbered 2,000. No estimate is given of the Russian casualties, but they are believed to have been heavy.

The Japanese army which operated against Anshanshan advanced along the Haicheng Liao Yang road, clearing away small forces of Russians. On the morning of Aug. 27, the Japanese line extended from Shangshihichiatz to the west to Sunati, and prepared to attack the Russian line, which extended from Anshanshan to Tengaopo. The Russians abandoned their positions here without offering resistance. The Japanese pursued the enemy and overtook him east of the road near Tiaochuntai Tashihihtao and Pakuakou, and attacked vigorously at 10 o'clock in the morning of the 28th. The Russians retreated in confusion towards North Shaho. The column of Japanese infantry and artillery which pursued the Russians on the west side of the Hai Cheng-Liao Yang road overtook the main body of the enemy as it was retiring to the northwest and drove it also toward North Shaho.

In these engagements the Japanese captured eight guns and a number of ammunition and commissary wagons.

RUSSIANS VICTORS

been ascertained. The third Russian corps repulsed a hot Japanese assault, the Japanese being hurled back by bayonet charges, firstly by the Twenty-third and then by the Twenty-fourth regiments, which received and repulsed the enemy no less than six times. Two Japanese companies which succeeded in occupying a Russian position were mistaken for Russians and annihilated by Japanese artillery fire. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Japanese concentrated their fire on a Russian southern detachment, and also tried to outflank the detachment from the right under the protection of their batteries. One company after another was noticed running swiftly to the westward in an attempt to outflank the positions, but a Russian regiment and a battery were ordered to advance, and succeeded in forcing the enemy to retreat in disorder, evacuating positions they had previously gained. There has been an immense expenditure of ammunition throughout the day, especially on the southern front, against the Russian third corps. It is believed that the Russian losses so far have not been very heavy, except to the regiments which sustained bayonet charges. All the men serving on Russian guns, except one, were killed by shrapnel. The survivor, who was badly wounded, heroically brought his gun to headquarters, and even then refused to quit his place until the general peremptorily ordered him into the hospital. A more energetic attack is expected tomorrow. It seems that Gen. Kuroki's force did not participate in today's engagement. The morale of the Russian troops is excellent."

Couldn't Turn Flank.

St Petersburg, Aug. 30.—A dispatch from Mukden of today's date, says that in the stubbornly-fought battle which has been in progress near Liao Yang since this morning all attmpts of the Japanese to turn the Russian flank have been repulsed. It is said at Mukden that the Japanese lost over ten guns, but details had not been received there.

Tuesday's Battle.

St. Petersburg, Wednesday, Aug. 31, 3:55 a.m. — The great battle of Liao Yang, which began early Tuesday morning, raged throughout the day with increasing intensity, but up to this hour no further official details beyond the two brief telegrams given out in the afternoon have been received by the war office. Every confidence is expressed in Gen. Kuropatkin's ability to meet the Japanese assault on ground of his own choosing, but the city is hungrily awaiting further news of the progress of the fighting. The Japanese forces engaged in this battle can only be estimated here, but they are believed to number 200,000 men. Gen. Kuropatkin is known to have six army corps, besides 147 squadrons of cavalry, in which great confidence is reposed, bringing up the Russian total to about the same number that the Japanese have. How the armies compare with regard to artillery is not definitely known, though throughout the war the Japanese have shown great preference for this arm and great skill in its use. Reports from the front credit the Japanese with having about one thousand two hundred guns and many mountain batteries, and it is known that they recently shipped 24 heavy guns to Yiu Kow. Four of these guns already have been mentioned in these dispatches as being in action. Gen. Kuropatkin, in addition to his field batteries, has a number of very heavy guns emplaced at important positions at Liao Yang, where the Russians have been strongly fortifying for some time. The Japanese claim to have two field batteries during the past two days, Russian officials accounts admit the loss of only six guns. It is stated that a Japanese battery was captured south of Anshanshan during the preliminary fighting, and that several Japanese guns have been destroyed since then. Little of the strategic situation has developed so far. Official news from the front says that there was desperate fighting on the southern center, while from other sources it appears that the Japanese are endeavoring to turn the Russian right from the neighborhood of the junction of the Taitse and Sakhe Rivers. The fighting on the western flank appears to have approached within three miles of Liao Yang.

As Seen From Liao Yang.

Liao Yang, Aug. 30. — The Russian correspondent of the Associated Press supplies the following: "The historical moment has arrived and the battle of Liao Yang is in progress. It was not 6 o'clock this morning when the first gun was fired, but soon afterwards hundreds of cannon were thundering along our southern and eastern fronts. The center of our position is located near the famous tower of Liao Yang, about seven miles to the southeast. The fighting there was of the most desperate character, but is now going on much nearer at the flanks. The hissing of the shells is distinctly audible, and from the city it is easy to see the shells bursting. Heavy guns were brought into action by both sides today, and their dull roar was discernible above the sharper detonation of field and mountain guns. The Russians are using big ordinance, which is in position in the inner ring of the Liao Yang forts. The noisy Chinese population has suddenly became quiet. The main street of Liao Yang, always the scene of the busiest traffic, and usually resounding with thousands of shrill voices, from sunrise to sunset, is now as silent as if it were night. The inhabitants are watching the distant battle from the housetops, and watch towers, or are wandering gloomily in the streets. We are asking ourselves, if the tide is going to swamp the city, what is to become of the houses and other property?"

After British Colliers.

Madrid, Aug. 30.—The Russian auxiliary cruiser Don, formerly the German steamer Fuerst Bismarck, has left Vigo without waiting for her bill of health. Her commander was in receipt of a telegram from the Russian Government, which persumably ordered him to resume the search for British colliers destined for Japan. It is stated here that ten other Russian cruisers are engaged in this work on the coasts of Spain, Portugal France and Africa.
