SEVEN GREAT WONDERS AT COREA.

Among Them is a Hovering Stone and an Indestructible Forest.

A Chinese paper describes the seven wonders which Corea, like unto other Oriental countries, possesses, and which played a conspicuous role in antiquity. The Corean "wonders" consist, first, of a hot mineral spring near Kin Shantao, which is capable of curing sickness and diseases of all sorts. The second wonder is the two wells, one at each end of the peninsula, which have the peculiar characteristic that when one is full the other is empty. The water of the one is intensely bitter, that of the other has a pleasant and sweet taste. The third wonder is a cold cave from which there issues constantly an ice-cold wind, with such force that a strong man is not able to stand up against it. A pine forest which cannot be eradicated constitutes the fourth wonder.

No matter what injury may be done to the roots the young trees spring up again like the phœnix from its ashes. The most remarkable, however, is the fifth wonder—the famous hovering stone—which stands, or rather appears to stand, in front of a palace erected to its honor. This is a massive rectangular block, free on all sides. Two men standing, one on each end, can draw a cord underneath the stone, from side to side, without encountering any obstacle. The sixth wonder is a hot stone which has been lying from time immemorial on the summit of a hill, and evolving a glowing heat. The seventh Corean wonder is a sweating Buddha. This is guarded in a great temple, in whose court for thirty yards on all sides not a single blade of grass grows. No tree, no flower will flourish on the sacred spot, and even wild creatures are careful not to profane it.

SUPERIOR VITALITY OF INSECTS.

Eggs Often Uninjured Even After Subjection to Intense Cold.

The eggs of insects have greater powers of vitality than any others. A case was published of an egg producing an insect eighty years after it must have been laid, and the scientist responsible for this statement thinks the power of vivification may endure in these eggs for an indefinite period. Many eggs of insects are exposed to the air without any covering, and many are sheltered too slightly to be secure from the frost. This, however, they are able to resist, remaining unfrozen, though exposed to the severest cold, or, still more surprising, are uninjured by its intensest action, recovering their vitality even after having been frozen into lumps off ice. On exposing several silk-worm eggs for five hours to a freezing mixture which made Fahrenheit's thermometer fall to 38° below zero Spallanzi found that they were not frozen nor their fertility in the slightest degree impaired. Others were exposed to a degree of 56° below zero without being injured. The quality of the eggs of the snails is, perhaps, even more marvelous. These eggs, desiccated in a furnace until they are scarcely visible, will always remain their original bulk when damped, and the young will be brought forth as though the eggs had never been in any way interfered with. Neither heat nor cold seems to have any injurious effect upon their vitality, for they have been frozen into ice for any length of time and when the ice is melted will be found to be wholly uninjured.—Baltimore American.

The Cost of Carelessness.

Familiarity with danger seems to breed, if not a contempt for it, an utter carelessness. We have seen, says the Chattanooga Tradesman, the "Mohawk Dutchman," the celebrated expert with a band scroll saw, rub the ball of his thumb in dirty grease and then cut the grease off with the rapidly running saw as clean as could be done with soap and water. We have seen a man put his finger under a powerful trip hammer in motion just to show how well he could manage the machine. Many other foolish things are done just to "show off." But most of the accidents happen through a carelessness resulting from familiarity. As long as an operator is afraid of his machine he is not apt to get hurt. Many human minds are so constituted that they cannot bear a sustained effort in one direction; that is, cannot be always on the alert in regard to a certain contingency. A train despatcher or switch tender may hold a place for years without ever making a mistake, and at last make a terrible one, from some cause he could not explain. The only way to lessen the number of casualties—they cannot be avoided entirely—is to take all precautions. This is required of the owners if they wish to escape costly damage suits, but when all possible precautions have been taken, one can then only trust to luck.

Wine Caused the Loss of the Victoria.

It is now stated on good authority that the fearful disaster which befell the warship Victoria, resulting in the instant destruction of hundreds of lives, is another of the long list of calamities which may be set down to the credit of strong drink. It is said that the fatal order which resulted in the collision with the Camperdown was given in a fit of recklessness superinduced by too much wine drinking. On no other ground, it is said, can it be explained why a man ordinarily so cool, discreet and skilful as Admiral Tryon, should have given an order which the commonest sailors knew could only result in disaster. It is charitable to believe that Admiral Tryon was not in a condition of mind to realize what he was about when he said that "six cables length" instead of eight should be the distance between the ships in that manœuvre. That two cables of difference meant a swift and awful death to hundreds of brave men, including the admiral himself. It was wine that did it and not Admiral Tryon.—Christian at Work.

A Woman Beheaded.

A woman was beheaded in Berlin Monday—the first woman to suffer the death penalty there since Berlin was made a kaiserstadt. At 8 o'clock in the morning two warders led her into the courtyard, where the headsman's block had been placed. Half dead with fear the woman was placed beside the block and there supported while the prosecutor read to her the sentence of death. The prisoner was told to kneel, but she apparently did not hear, and the warders gently but firmly forced her down until her head rested on the block. The next instant there was a gleaming flash of steel, and the head of the woman dropped into the basket placed to receive it, the executioner exclaiming: "The sentence of the law has been executed. May God have mercy on the poor sinner."

"Go Lickee Wife."

British husbands, when their dinner parties turn out failures, are apt to grumble at their wives for the cook's misdemeanors, but they abstain from the practical style of rebuking practiced by the celestials. Recently the Chinese professor at a university gave a national banquet to fellow professors and was much put out because the cookery was not to his taste. After a time he got up, bowed solemnly, said, "Go lickee wife," and departed, returning presently, smiling as blandly as usual, after having administered judicious chatisement to his

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN

Has come not a little knowledge as to cookery—what to do, as well as what not to do. Thus we have learned to use the most pure and perfect and popular cooking material for all frying and shortening purposes.

PROGRESSIVE COOKING

is the natural outcome of the age, and it teaches us not to use lard, but rather the new shortening, which is far cleaner, and more digestible than any lard can be.

COTTOLENE,

The success of Cottolene has called out worthless imitations under similar names. Look out for these! Ask your Grocer for COTTOLENE, and be sure that you get it.

Henry Clews says: The stock market is in a waiting attitude. For the present the bears have gained an ascendancy which they seemed disinclined to relinquish. The tendency toward lower prices has met with no resistance from large holders, partly because some are willing to see lower prices and partly because others are unprepared for any aggressive movement upwards. Wall-street has not yet entirely lost the pessimism which the late panic created in the business world. Commerce and industry are reviving, however, but the improvement thus far is perhaps greater in tone than in volume.

Tips From Wall-street.

London is a buyer of St. Paul.

Wormser bought Sugar at the decline, and White was the chief seller during the morning.

F. J. Lewis & Co. received the following from Kennett, Hopkins & Co.: Quite an effort was made to advance prices at the opening, and at the advance there was quite a disposition among shorts to cover. The basis for the buying seemed to be fractionally higher prices in London and the fact that some London house had small buying orders here. After the first hour the market became dull and then weak, and gradually declined until the close without a single feature of interest. It is purely a traders' market, and fluctuations one way or the other will not be large until the market broadens; the tendency is undoubtedly towards lower prices, the only steadying feature being the enormous accumulation of money in the banks here and in other cities. London houses have bought stocks in a small way for the past three days, and in the ordinary course of events they will sell for the next three days. Sales, 105,460 shares.

Dixon's advices: There is nothing to chronicle of to-day's stock market. Dulness reigns supreme. The opening showed some strength on European buying, but when this demand was satisfied the bears soon had prices down below Saturday's closing. For the time being I look for a narrow range of prices and advocate purchases on breaks and sales on rallies.

R. Cochran received the following from Kennett, Hopkins & Co.:

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Local operators sold early on the large receipts in Northwest and prospective heavy increase in the visible, the exports of nearly 500,000 having no apparent influence. It was evident that there was no more long stuff to be shaken out on stop orders and the scalpers who had sold the market down had to cover near the close at a loss. The primary receipts are falling off to such an extent that with any moderate export supplies in sight must soon begin to disappear. There are thousands of would-be investors scattered over the country who are waiting for the turn in the tide of receipts to buy, and when they are convinced that the movement is really falling off for good they will no doubt buy on a liberal scale, increasing the volume of speculation to a marked extent. The price is so phenomenally low as to tempt buying by parties who never speculated before. From a very weak market it would not be surprising if a week or ten days should develop one both active and strong.

Corn and oats—The weakness that has so recently characterized these markets has been a surprise to conservative grain merchants, with stocks of corn already light and steadily decreasing, with small country offerings and no positive indication of an increased movement, with western points paying relatively from 10 to 15 cents over Chicago prices, and with a good shipping and consumptive demand sufficient to more than absorb current receipts.

Provisions continue heavy: It looks as if they might get down on an equality with other agricultural products, but this is not generally expected.

Schwarts, Dupee & Co. wired Dixon: Wheat hesitated some in the first hour and momentarily touched the put price. The selling, however, was short selling. Liquidation seemed to have exhausted itself. There was talk of dry weather. Cables firmer than expected. Northwest cars were 300 less than last year and 800 less than two years ago. Export clearances made a total of about 500,000 bushels. Prices slowly rallied from around the "put" figure to almost the call price. Even the much larger increase in the visible supply than expected did not prevent a stronger market. It is the theory generally that the December liquidation will be finished now in a few days. Professionals are not disposed to make short sales at this range. Even the bears would like to see some rally. Provisions opened firmer with the hogs, but there were liberal offerings at once, especially of ribs and pork, and another slumpy break followed. Absence of outside business, and also of a short interest, was strikingly manifested, and at times it was impossible to execute selling orders satisfactorily. On the break scalping shorts covered, causing several rallies, but on all the hard spots packers were sellers. The close was steady at medium prices. We ought to have a further rally, on which we would favor selling.
