Meaning Was Uncertain.

Dr. Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury, received a long and tedious letter from one of the ministers of his diocese. The letter was a request to place a picture in the chancel of his church. By the time the end of the letter was reached, his patience was quite exhausted, and he hastily wrote on a postal card: "Dear ——: Hang the picture!" The clergyman could never quite decide that he had obtained the necessary permission, and so the picture remained unhung.

Satan—Set him to counting that amount in red hot coppers and every time he drops one make him begin again.

Riches of the South Seas.

Much attention is being given the question of the Pacific islands trade, and the matter has been discussed before the British Parliament with the view to having the New Zealand Government assist by providing better shipping facilities.

It is claimed that the business of the islands of the South Pacific might be worth about $5,000,000 annually to the merchants of New Zealand in exports to these islands, if proper shipping facilities were afforded. This, of course, would mean a marked increase in imports into New Zealand, since practically all of the exports to the islands are manufactured articles imported either from the United States or European countries.

The question of imports from the islands into New Zealand, especially copra, superphosphates and fertilizers would also mean much to America. Previous to the war large quantities of copra went direct to Germany, and since then America has taken a larger portion.

In discussing the Pacific island trade, the Panama Canal is taken largely into consideration, for it brings the islands of the Pacific Ocean in general much nearer the markets of the eastern coast of the United States and Europe.

In a Division Court case at Kingston in which A. E. Weller sued the G.T.R. Company for the loss of a cow struck by a train, Judge Madden has decided in favor of the plaintiff on the ground that the fences of the railway should be so constructed that animals cannot wander on to the tracks.
