WANT TO ANNUL AUTO WEDDING

Tell Story of Wild Revel —Was "Joke," Says the Bride.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15—"All parties concerned agreed to annul the marriage of Leigh Bonsal, Jr., young club man, and Mrs. Catherine McPhail Jenkins Bonsal the day after it had been performed."

This as the statement of Leigh Bonsal, Sr., father of Bonsal, before Judge Walter Preston in a suit brought by the Bonsals for annulment of the marriage. Mrs. Bonsal was a divorcee when young Bonsal and she were wed in an automobile after a day's lively party.

Mrs. Kitty McPhail Jenkins Bonsal, the bride, testified that when she married Bonsal she had no intention of living with him as his wife, and that she did not love him and did not want him. She added that she had gone through with what she considered a joke, only because she thought Bonsal should have been the first to suggest that the wedding be called off.

Bonsal, his wife, her parents and Bonsal's father, according to Mr. Bonsal's testimony, all agreed to the annulment of the marriage. The agreement, he said, was reached at Mrs. Bonsal's home. It was broken, he asserted, when his son whispered to his wife and drew a whiskey bottle from his pocket. After that, Mr. Bonsal said, his son's wife refused to consent to the annulment.

Bonsal's father while on the stand declared Bonsal did not know that he was married the night after the ceremony had taken place. Mr. Bonsal also testified that Rev. Mr. Adams had telephoned him of his son's plight on the night of the wedding. Then he described a visit to the home of the Rev. M. Welbking on the day after the marriage. He said the minister was "a well-meaning man who committed an error of judgment."

The minister, according to Mr. Bonsal, was unable to sleep the night after he perfomed the ceremony. Mr. Bonsal described his son's habits, declaring that he had worked only on one occasion. The job, the father said, ended when Bonsal was sent to the state hospital for treatment for alcoholism.

John G. Lee, as counsel for the Bonsal family, said: "The wedding took place as the result of a drunken spree; it was a wild escapade. There was no understanding on the part of Bonsal as to what he was getting into; he had been drunk constantly for a week. We will produce testimony to show that when he is drinking he becomes a wild man and is incapable of taking care of himself."

NEW YEAST PLANT IS OPENED HERE

Fleischmann Company Has Factory Here to Supply Maritime Provinces.

After five years, from 1919 to 1924, during which the business grew and flourished, and piece after piece of machinery was installed to cope with the growing demand, Thursday saw the completion of a modern mixing, cutting and wrapping yeast plant at the premises of the Fleischmann Co., Germain street, and that night saw the new plant thrown open for inspection to the public, and a demonstration of the different processes staged. The premises have been very much enlarged until now the concern occupies the whole of the main floor and the basement of the building. On the main floor are the show rooms and executive offices, the large refrigerating plant, the mixing and pressing machine, the cutter, and a machine which wraps the small cakes in tin foil and stamps them with the well known yellow stamp of the Fleischmann Company. Everything was wide open to inspection and all the machines were in operation. It is the wish of the local management that the public of St. John and the Maritime Provinces, which this plant serves, should inspect the plant at any time.

The strains of an orchestra playing popular selections was heard when approaching the Fleischmann building. On entering one was immediately escorted to the refreshment tables, where sandwiches and punch was served. From there one went into the cool interior of the refrigerating plant where the dry yeast, the product of the company's main plant in Canada, Bertherville, Que., was stored in 80 pound cartons. The next place visited was the mixing vat, where the yeast is mixed with water and then thoroughly kneaded in an electrically operated machine. From this the smooth product is passed into a presser, from which it emerges through a nozzle, the size of which may be varied from that necessary for the pound cake to that of the small individual cake. One then visits the other section of the refrigerator, where these cakes are chilled. The next operation to be visited was the wrapping machine. This was perhaps the most interesting, as here was found the yeast in the form in which it was most familiar to the individual householder the small tin foil wrapped cake, with the yellow stamp. The last place to be inspected was the ammonia refrigerating machine in the basement and the store room.

Great interest was taken in all of the operations by the several hundreds of people who visited the store.

The local plant employs 11 people. E. A. Cunningham is sales agent; Miss Margaret A. Wilson is chief clerk, and George J. Babcock has charge of the mechanical processes. W. C. Fogg, district manager of Portland, was here and assisted in the demonstration.

An idea of the size of the Fleischmann Company may be gleaned from the fact that it has 960 agencies in the United States and Canada; supplies 30,000 bakers, and 225,000 grocers.

G. W. V. A. GIVEN $1 YEAR LEASE OF OFFICERS' SQUARE

Arrangements are being made for the execution of a new lease of the Officers' Square property, Fredericton, by the G. W. V. A., Ltd., the holding company of the Fredericton branch of the veterans.

The new lease, which has been received from the Department of the Interior following negotiations, will place the control of all the property at Officers' Square in the hands of the holding company of the G. W. V. A. at a nominal rental of $1 a year. It dates from November 1, while the lease under which the association holds its present quarters in the wooden building dates from January 1, 1924, covering only the wooden quarters.

Under the new lease the G. W. V. A. will transfer the club rooms of the branch to the old officers' barracks and remove the present wooden structure. The new arrangement also gives the veterans the first option to purchase the entire property, which they propose to hold as a provincial memorial and a beauty spot in the city. Plans for the future include the probable erection of a suitable memorial on the grounds, which have already been improved by the association.

Bandit Then Robbed Wealthy Woman of Gems Worth Thousands.

Greenwich, Conn., Nov. 15—Forced by a bandit to take off her silk stockings, Miss Martha Meeker, wealthy and prominent resident of the Maples here, was robbed of several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry. The robber bound her to a bedpost with her silk stockings.

The robber took Miss Meeker's diamond earrings, a diamond ring, several other pieces of jewelry, and a large sum in cash which he found in a bureau drawer. He cautioned her not to make an outcry when he left, saying he would return and kill her if she raised an alarm before half an hour had elapsed.

After he had gone Miss Meeker heard an automobile start off from the vicinity of the Maples. The police believe the robber was one of the New York gang which preys on rich women who appear in public wearing valuable gems.

Miss Thayer said that the party would go first to Paris and then leave in two days for Marseilles, where they would board the British India steamship that will carry them to Mombassa via the Suez Canal. POPE PUTS O. K. ON OWN POLISH PACT

Approves Treaty He Himself Suggested While in Poland.

By THOMAS B. MORGAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Rome, Nov. 15—Achilles Ratti, as Pope Pius XI., has approved the work of Achilles Ratti, apostolic nuncio to Poland. This is the first time that the Polish republic has made a treaty with the Holy See and it gives the Sovereign Pontiff the opportunity of endorsing the relations he advocated while he represented Benedict XV. in the Polish capital.

M. Grabsky, brother of the Polish foreign minister, came to Rome to draw up the final draft of the concordat between the Vatican and Poland. Conferences have been held between Cardinal Gasparri and M. Grabsky in which many of the subjects discussed had already been settled by Monsignor Ratti, an apostolic nuncio. Arrival at full agreement was therefore easy for there was almost identity of views between what the Polish government wanted and what the Vatican proposed.

The Pope, ever since his short assignment in the diplomatic service in Poland, has always retained the tenderest feelings for the Polish people. It is learned in Vatican circles that he regarded with unusual interest the progress of the peurparlers and looked forward to the signing of the concordant with no uncertain pleasure as it crowns the work he performed in northeastern Europe with success.

The problems during his Polish mission were complicated. Besides having the remnants of three civil administrations, such as the German, Austrian and Russian, he was confronted with the intricate demands of the three rites —Catholic, Greek and Orthodox. He kept on equally friendly terms with all and besides won the admiration of the then newly-formed Polish republic for his tact and skill.

When he was elected titular Archbishop of Naupacte, he chose to be consecrated in the Cathedral at Warsaw.
