CZAR IRRITATED BY AMERICANS

Pro-Jap Sentiment Caused Withdrawal of Exhibit.

SAYS THE PRINCE OUKHTOMSKY

Sent by His Royal Master to Study Anti-Russ Feeling in the New World.

New York, May 16.—Why did Russia really cancel all her elaborate exhibits at the St. Louis Exposition? Prince Hespere Oukhtomsky, a special representative of the Czar, who arrived on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. on Wednesday, openly asserts that one of the principal reasons for this unexpected action was the prevailing sentiment of the people of the United States and the attitude of our Government at Washington Prince Oukhtomsky adds that the Czar may have had other reasons for his course, but he (the prince), does not care to mention them just now. He may, however, do so later.

This statement, which, coming from a man of Prince Oukhtomsky's station, takes on the form of an official pronunciamento, is the first definite admission that Russia's withdrawal was due to her irritation at the United States. A rumor to this effect was, indeed, cabled to this country early in February, when the withdrawal from the exposition was announced, but the report was officially denied both at the Russian embassy in Washington and at St. Petersburg. At both these places it was carefully explained that the Czar had canceled the Russian exhibits in order to devote the money appropriated for them to the funds being raised for the Russian Red Cross Society.

Prince Oukhtomsky, who is the chief owner of the St. Petersburg Viedomosti, one of the foremost newspapers of Russia, has come to the United States at this time to study the American people and their government, and to find out why the sentiment of both, as the Czar believes, is anti-Russian and pro-Japanese. He will visit Washington, Chicago, Pittsburg and other cities during the few weeks of his stay, and some of his observations will be published in his journal. These will not, however, include, until after his return home, if at all, some of the data gathered for his sovereign.

The prince is exceedingly reticent as to the present war situation. He seems to hesitate to say in this country, under the circumstances, that Russian reverses, much as they are regretted by the ministry, will be retrieved soon. He is unwilling to discuss the question of intervention by any other power, because his Government has already indicated its position on that subject, and, therefore, it would be indelicate for him to say more. He admits, however that after his tour in this country has been completed he may make a brief statement for publication, covering, in an impersonal way, some of his observations and conclusions. In Washington he will visit Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, and hopes to meet President Roosevelt, Secretary Hay and others of the leading members of the administration.

Prince Oukhtomsky is one of the most distinguished of living Russians, and is noted as a diplomat and a financier, as well as a journalist. He was the founder of the Russo-Chinese bank, which has financed all the Muscovite operations in the Far East of recent years, and passed through this city three years ago to investigate the Chinese situation. He declared emphatically at that time that Russia had no intention of remaining in Manchuria and would not, in fact, take that province as a gift. She would withdraw from it, he asserted, in a few months at the most. Personally, the prince is very democratic, travels with but little baggage and is accompanied on his present trip by only one friend, Count Podhorski. He speaks English with some difficulty, but is always easy of approach and talks frankly and to the point.

DANGEROUS SHIRTWAIST

Woman Dislocates Arm in Attempting to Button It.

Braddock, Pa., May 16.—With a cry of agony Miss Pauline Littlestone, of this city, swooned Saturday afternoon as she was fastening a button of her shirtwaist, and being unable to find the button she twisted in a manner familiar to women who wear shirtwaists and her right arm was dislocated at the elbow. The bones of the arm protruded through the flesh, and what physicians who were called term a remarkable feature of the accident was the breaking of the "funny bone," the small bone at the elbow joint which protects the "funny" nerve.

Miss Littlestone vows that she will not listen to the dictates of fashion in the future as she has in the past She has suffered much from the shirtwaists which button up the back. Twice in less than eighteen months her right arm has been broken and fractured at the elbow and the left arm once. Last fall, when waists buttoning up the back were less fashionable, Miss Littlestone in making a try as she did Saturday, broke and dislocated her right arm at the elbow, and she carried it in splints for six months.

LONDON'S NOISES ON THE INCREASE

They Are Growing Louder—Worse As Years Go By.

ACCORDING TO MR. PEMBERTON

Famous Novelist Writes Amusing Article On Animals and Thinks They Are Great Annoyances.

London, May 16. — Max Pemberton has given some exceedingly racy opinions on the subject of the growing evil of London's noises.

"Don't," said the well-known novelist by way of a beginning, "take my view as the official one of the committee for the abatement of the noises of the London streets. It is perfectly true that I joined the council — on consideration that it involved no financial responsibility—but I have been so busy that I have had no time to attend to the matter.

"As, however, the noises of London seem to be growing daily worse, I mean to arouse myself and see what can be done.

"I hear that a corespondent of the Morning Post objects to the noisiness of motor cars. That is a view which seems to me absurd. Why, the steady hum of a motor along a street at night is absolutely soothing as compared with the jingle, rattle and smash of the heavy horse-drawn van.

"So far as the noises born of heavy traffic are concerned, I think the best way to deal with the question would be to establish a system of local veto. That is to say, I would give the various districts power to prohibit heavy, and, therefore, noisy, traffic at night along any streets other than the main thoroughfares.

"From traffic the next step to me seems to be German bands. We are haunted by them in this neighborhood —Hampstead—and four of them visit this road regularly twice a week each.

"Sometimes two arrive at once, and begin to play different tunes together. Even that is not so bad till the trebles drop out in the middle of a bar to collect funds. That leaves those blaring bass instruments that curl right around the player's body to do their worst.

"The barrel organ is another scandal, and the bad part of the problem is that the moment any one attacks them scores of sentimental people rush into print and say that we mean to destroy the only delight of the joyless lives of the slum children.

"We really don't want to do anything of the kind. All we want to do is to confine the barrel organ to the slums.

"What about the suburban piano? Well, I think that is an evil which is rapidly dying out. The pianola has slain one-third of the horror, because it obviates the necessity of a man's six daughters each practicing for four hour every day.

"Bridge, I think, has killed another third. Do you ever go to a house where the piano is played after dinner? I don't. Once the musical daughter used to be inflicted on the diner, but now we play bridge.

"The remaining third of this particular evil is, I am sure, kept alive by the pernicious influence of the musical comedy.

"Then, there is the music of the house dog. The confirmed howler is painful enough, but the habitual barker is, I think, worse.

"Discursive cats are really not quite so bad. There is a certain amount of interest to be extracted from following the midnight feline altercation. One can study the conversation from the first low-toned 'yowle' up to the piercing note of the crescendo.

"All the same, I would compel the owners of cats to keep them chained up at night.

"There is really no excuse for people who keep crowing cocks. Every owner of such a noisy rooster should be compelled to wear a tuft of cock's feathers round his neck at a badge of infamy.

"Really, though," pursued Mr. Pemberton, "the more one considers the matter the more one sees that people who should know better frequently violate the silence of the night.

"Who among us has not a neighbor who entertains largely and keeps his guests till a late hour? Who does not know the clarion call of the cab whistle at 3 a.m., followed by the shouted 'Good-bye, meet you tomorrom somewhere or other?'

"Hosts who permit this sort of thing should be forcibly deprived of the privilege of hospitality for a month or so.

"I don't believe, however, in the theory that we moderns object to noises because our nerves are worse. If they are worse it is probably due to the noises, but the real reason is, I think, to be found in the fact that while we sleep with our windows open our forefathers slept with them hermetically sealed."

STRATHCONA ON PREFERENCE

Says Canadian Trade Has Gone Forward Under It.

London, May 16.—Lord Strathcona, at a dinner of the Chartered Institute secretaries, replying to "Our Imperial Interests," said that formerly trade with Canada was going backward, but since the introduction of preferential tariffs it had gone forward. Ought not this to lead them to think deeply whether a further preference would not be desirable for all? Without the colonies there would be no empire in reality; equally so without the mother country there could be no empire.

The Board of Trade returns give the total imports and exports of merchandise in January and February, 1904. For Canada the two months' imports were £6,923,000, and exports £4,503,000; in 1903 they were £6,748,000 and £5,580,000 respectively.

At the annual meeting in connection with the Children's Emigration Homes at Birmingham, J. T. Middlemore, M.P., said he asked for £500 to send children to Canada. He had rented two little houses in St. Luke's road in 1872, as an experiment, and as soon as he arrived in Canada and saw how the boys and girls were welcomed there he knew the experiment was a success.

THE KING ON STANLEY.

London, May 16.—King Edward, in an autograph letter to Lady Stanley, says: "I had the great advantage of knowing your distinguished husband personally, and often heard from his own lips most interesting accounts of his grand travels and explorations and the great services he rendered for the civilized world. The great name he won will ever live after him."

PILLSBURY'S GREAT FEAT

Blindfolded Wins at Chess, Checkers and Whist Simultaneously.

Cambridge Springs, Pa., May 16. — Shortly before 9 o'clock on Saturday night, Harry N. Pillsbury, the American chess champion, began his blindfold performance in the lobby of the Hotel Rider in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of guests. He undertook to play chess, checkers and whist simultaneously, playing chess at four boards against Judge Hazen D. Smith, Leo Isaacs, Dr. H. F. Isaacs and R. C. Shannon, and checkers against William D. Rider and E. Napir. Pillsburg had as partner in a game of four-handed bridge whist Dr. E. R. Lasker and they were opposed by R. Teichmann and T. S. Dean. This was an off day in the international tournament, and twelve of the competitors were engaged in three consolation games to test the soundness of the Rice Gambit, the invention of Prof. Isaac L. Rice, of New York.

MOURNED AS DEAD, COMES TO LIFE

Little Girl Throws Off Her Death Shroud and Arises—She May Recover.

New York, May 16. — Six-year-old Martha Block, daughter of Louis Block, of No. 55 Mott street, ill for four weeks of tubercular meningitis, died at sundown last evening apparently. An undertaker was called in and the body was laid out.

Four hours later, while cantors from the synagogue were chanting psalms, Mrs. Block exclaimed:

"I saw my child move!"

"Poor woman," said City Marshal S. K. Ellenbogen, who was present, "she feels the loss of her little one very keenly."

"Oh, no," cried the mother, "my child is not dead. She has come to life again. My Martha lives!"

The cantors continued their chants. Suddenly the little girl opened her eyes, smiled and tried to sit up in her shroud.

"Mamma," lisped the child. "Mamma, I am not sick any more. Mamma, don't cry. I want to go to school. But I want you to go with me, because I know that teacher will scold me because I have been away from school for such a long time."

There was great rejoicing. The cantors stopped singing the psalms, and the rejoicing mother picked the child up.

"Mamma," said the little girl, "what are all these people here for? I feel ever so much better now."

Then all offered prayers of thanks for the recovery of the little girl.

At a late hour last night the child was alive with a chance of recovery. The undertakers were dismissed. All night long the mother kept watch at the bedside.

"We are going to pray all night long for God to spare our baby," said the mother to a reporter, "and we know that he will answer our prayers."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In every home there is more or less suffering as a result of constipation and derangements of the digestive system.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure such ailments more promptly and thoroughly than other preparations they have come to be considered almost indispensable as a family medicine.

Mr. C. F. Immel, shoemaker, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., states: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regularly for some time and consider that they are unsurpassed for torpid liver, defective circulation, indigestion, headache and constipation, as these were my troubles. I used many remedies but got no relief until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and a few boxes of this preparation have entirely cured me. I am not in the habit of indorsing any medicine, but in this case I cannot speak too highly in praise of Dr. Chase's Pills for what they have done for me."

Mr. D. C. Holmes, justice of the peace for Lincoln County, states: "I am acquainted with Mr. C. F. Immel and consider him a reliable citizen in every sense of the word, in fact, I have known him from boyhood up and can say I believe him to be truthful and honest."

A $10,700 ROBBERY.

Chicago, May 16. — Alonzo Bristow, of Bedford, Iowa, has reported to the police the loss of $10,700, which he received from the sale of 83 horses at the Union stockyards. He says the money was in a small satchel, and that the thief slashed the side of the satchel with a big knife, thereby enabling him to insert his hand and purloin the two packages of greenbacks. The robbery apparently occurred while Bristow was on his way from a hotel to the railroad station. The satchel was not out of his hands, he says, from the time the money was put in until he discovered the loss.

RUSSIA GREAT IN VALOR ONLY

European Experts Say Czar's Forces Are Cutting a Sorry Figure in Present War.

London, May 16.—Belief in the overwhelming success of Japanese arms is becoming general in Europe even among such Russians as possess knowledge of the real situation. More additional information from competent, unprejudiced observers, including several English war correspondents of wide experience, has come to hand during the present week regarding the military events on the Yalu and in Manchuria. It all testifies without reserve to the great superiority of the Japanese arms in equipment, skill and courage. In the latter quality only do the Russians take high rank. Japanese valor, however, according to all accounts, partakes of a quality almost unmatched in modern history.

Even friendly continental experts condemn the tactics of the Russian generals in severe terms, while the Japanese themselves say the Russians have learned little from modern experiences. The Russian army in courage alone maintains its old standard. There are signs of a change for the worse in the relations of offices and men. An order issued by Gen. Stoessel on assuming command at Port Arthur seems to signify that he fears lack of discipline, and reports are coming through of great discontent at insufficient food and the prohibition of vodka.

European opinion regards the investment of Port Arthur as likely soon to be successful and strongly inclines to the belief that there will be a great engagement of the combined Japanese armies with Gen. Kuropatkin in the neighborhood of Liao Yang within a fortnight which will result in the latter's defeat.

ON TO LHASSA IS NOW THE CRY

The English Mission Has Become an Invasion That Is Bound to Be Contested.

London, May 16.—"That strange force which has often driven the English forward against their will appears to be in operation once more."

This characteristic utterance is conceived to be all the explanation necessary of the expedition which is developing into a war against Tibet. It is used by the Spectator in reference to the unwilling subjugation of that mysterious land against which a small army must now be sent. It is quite true that having once embarked on a policy of making a demonstration in that quarter no choice remains but to fight the way into Lhassa itself, and such is virtually the Government's decision. It will not be child's play, although the enemy to be feared is not the Tibetans, but nature's almost impregnable defenses in that wild, almost inaccessible land.

It proves that the Dalai Lama is really a strong, clever man, despite his ignorance of civilization and its resources. It has been the custom of the Tibetans for ages to poison the Dalai Lama, who is regarded as the incarnation of Buddha, before he reached manhood. The present incumbent was able to secure an abrogation of this unpleasant custom, and he is now a man of 30, possessing absolute power. He recently removed his four principal ministers, under the advice of M. Dorjieff, whom Russia employed as her agent, and he decided to resist the advance of the British expedition. The artificial means of resistance are insignificant beyond the untrained strength of his so-called giants, whom he summoned to defend the country, but the natural defenses of which he will undoubtedly take full advantage, are enormously strong.

There is reason to fear that the success of English arms will avail little. They may occupy Lhassa without serious loss, but if the Grand Lama chooses further into the mountains he will be absolutely unreachable and the British dilemna will then be serious.

KING EDWARD THE CONCILIATOR

His Majesty Bids Fair to Earn a Fresh Title as World Peacemaker.

London, May 16.—King Edward VII. is said to be striving for the title of Edward the Conciliator. He has paved the way for the Anglo-French agreement and recently his trip to Ireland did more to create a friendly feeling there than any British monarch for centuries, and now he is looking for more peaceful conquests. One suggestion is that he will woo Italy and Spain and bring about the conjunction with France the neutralization of the Mediterranean. An international agreement to this effect by the powers concerned would save the enormously costly naval establishments now maintained in that sea. England now keeps approximately one-half of her navy there and France half of hers. If neutralized other powers would be allowed to use the Mediterranean for the passage of their warships as they now use the Suez Canal, but they would not be allowed to fight in it. As a peacemaker King Edward is certainly making better progress than is Czar Nicholas. Englishmen, however, are not unanimous in praising the King's amiable statesmanship. They fear it is an encroachment on the rights of Parliament. When ministers are solely responsible for the foreign policy of the nation Parliament can call them to account and even expel them from their high office, but when foreign policies emanate from the King himself the hands of Parliament are tied. The London Times even goes so far as to warn the King that he exceeds his prerogatives in being anything more than a figurehead.

JOE'S CAMPAIGN LAGS

Mr. Chamberlain Said to Lack the Necessary Funds.

London, May 16. — Joseph Chamberlain's campaign for a protective tariff is lagging for a lack of funds. The industries, which he wishes to protect have refused to have the "fat fried out of them." They plead that they are lean from want of a tariff and that the "fat frying" will have to come later. Mr. Chamberlain has resumed his speaking campaign and is in excellent health. He expressed confidence in victory within the four years he originally set as the necessary period of agitation. The climax of the summer campaign is to be a monster series of demonstrations which Mr. Chamberlain will attend at Welbeck in August. The meetings will be essentially agricultural in character and elaborate preparations are being made already to make it as representative as possible. In order to facilitate the attendance of those in the outlying parts who desire to be present, arrangements are to be made with the railway companies to run special trains. The meeting will be especially notable as Mr. Chamberlain's first effort to reach the agricultural population.

The art of land surveying owes its origin to the fact that the Egyptians were unable to keep permanent monuments on land which was overflowed every year by the Nile. Under such circumstances it became necessary to have some means of reidentifying the various pieces of land. The instruments and mathematical methods of astronomy, with suitable modifications, were used by the Egyptians for land surveying.
