Mr. Sawyer then sailed the next day on the Deutsche and arrived in London a few days later sailing from New York in the Deutsche on the 21st day after seeing her off on the Majestic. He was only an hour ahead of the arrival of the Majestic at Liverpool in time to comfort his sorrowful wife.

Have the transient officers of the morality department in Toronto any right to take children from a school and use them as "spies" and to act as witnesses against the proprietors who break the law by selling cigarettes or tobacco to minors? This was the subject of a lengthy debate at the meeting of the Public School Management Committee when a letter was read from Mr. S. W. Burns, solicitor, who is the legal adviser of Mr. Charles Hamilton, who claims that his son, who attends York Street school, was recently taken from the school yard while playing and sent with another boy to a store on York street to purchase cigarettes, having been given fifteen cents for the same by a transient officer. James Douglas Reid, known to telegraphers throughout the country as "the father of the telegraph," died at his home No. 244 West Ninety-ninth street, New York. Mr. Reid had been ill for many weeks.
