The New Royal Hotel.

[St. John Globe of Saturday last.]

The Royal Hotel, which (with its proprietor, Mr. Thos. F. Raymond), is one of the best known institutions of the kind in the city, was removed to-day from King Square to the fine building on King street, a couple of doors below the corner of Germain street, owned by James J. Kaye, Esq.—known in the past as the "American House." The building has for the past several months been undergoing repairs; a new ell has been added and another ell is in course of erection. The building is well situated and its style of architecture and internal arrangement makes it at once comfortable and amply commodious as a first-class hotel.

The portion of the ground floor which was until recently occupied by Messrs. Ballentine & Co., as a shoe store, has been converted into a fine, large and well furnished office, from which a large stairway of comfortable ascent leads to the room, above. Below the office door is a ladies' entrance, which continues an independent stairway to the top of the building. The office extends back 60 feet and is 20 feet wide. It is finished with ash and black walnut, and the floor is of pitch pine, tongued and grooved. Off it will be the bar and other appurtenances, though until the ell is completed, the bar will be kept upstairs. This is really a large hallway, 17 feet wide, which connects with the ell in course of construction. The first floor of the ell will be used as a supper room, and it will be 30x26 feet. There will be a back entrance off Germain street to this portion of the hotel, by a flight of stairs leading down to the supper room and bar. In the second flat of this ell there will be six rooms 9x11 feet, with a hallway through the centre. The third floor will be finished similarly, with seven rooms. There will be a large bath room at the end of the hallway on the second floor.

Ascending the stairway from the office, or ascending the stairway from the ladies' entrance, the second floor of the hotel proper is reached. A large hallway, 9 feet wide, connects the landing with the stairs, and running across from the landing of the ladies' stairway, is another hallway, running at right angles to the main one, and off it to the right, are the bath rooms, &c. Off the main hallway, looking out on King street, are two large parlors, one for ladies, the other for gentlemen. These are 21 by 25 feet each, and are gorgeousiy finished. The walls are delicately tinted, and the wood finishing is of grained rose. The furniture is in keeping, with soft carpets, of pretty patterns—and the parlors are, in fact, "a picture." The hallway is finished in oak graining. There are also three very nice bedrooms here. Off the hallway at the head of the ladies' entrance, is the capacious dining-room, also handsomely finished. This room is 75 feet long and 17 feet wide. Back of it is a little room in which is a carving and heating table, and ascending a few steps, one reaches the pastry pantries, and still further back the mammoth cooking range. In a building off this ell is the laundry and drying room. The laundry is 15x21 feet and the dry room 25 feet square. Above this floor are the maids' bed rooms. They are large, well lighted, well ventilated rooms—better than girls very often get.

On the second flat of the hotel proper, there are 10 bed rooms, 12x25 feet, with closets and bath rooms. They are arranged the same as on the flat below.—Rooms 29, and 30 constitute a suit, and are finished in a style that the elite of the land could not scorn. Rooms 25 and 28 are also beautifully finished and furnished, and are the rooms of the hotel. The third flat is furnished the same as the second flat, and there are here also some fine rooms. Thirty-nine and 40 are double rooms, beautifully finished, and 38 resembles very much 28 on the flat below. Nos. 37 and 36 on the other side of the hallway, are double rooms, of the same description, though, perhaps, not affording as good a view. These were the first rooms occupied in the new hotel. On the fourth flat there are 13 good rooms, and the fact that they are a long distance from the street, did not make the proprietor finish them less carefully. Some of them are as pleasant as rooms on the second flat.

Mr. Kaye seems to have spared no cost in arranging a fine comfortable house for Mr. Raymond, and the accommodation of visitors and travellers, and Mr. Raymond seems to have spared no cost in furnishing his hotel to accommodate the most fastidious. They employed competent workmen and they have a grand "result."—The architect, carpenter and general superintendent of the work was Mr. Benj. Roden; the masonry work was done by Mr. Arch. Craig; the artistic painting is the work of Mr. Fred. H. Stentiford; Mr. Geo. Blake did the plumbing work in good style; and the electric bell-hanging—a very important feature in the "make-up" of a good hotel—was done by Mr. Jas. Hunter. The handsome furniture came from the establishments of Messrs. Stewart and White, and Mr. A. B. Sheraton.

There were a good many visitors at the new hotel to-day, and one man had as much as he could attend to in showing them through. Mr. Raymond has certainly got a fine hotel, and no doubt its attractions will allure many a weary traveller.

What It Costs to Keep a Cow.

The Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, who retired a few years ago from the cares of statesmanship to the recreations of his farm at Groton, Mass., makes the following report of some experiments made by him in feeding cattle, in a letter to the secretary of the New York Farmers Club:—

As the relative value of hay and well cured corn fodder as food for cattle has been the subject of discussion and controversy, not only in our clubs, but in other agricultural circles, it may be of importance to our farmers to know the result of a recent experiment upon my farm.

I should not claim that a single experiment is conclusive upon the question of value, but the result is of sufficient importance to warrant further investigation, and to stimulate the cultivation of the corn crop. The method which I have pursued in harvesting corn and in preparing the fodder for use is known generally to the members of the club, but a brief statement may make the result more intelligible to all. The corn is cut at the ground as soon as the seed is partially hardened, set in stooks, and allowed to stand until both the ears and stalks are ripe and fully seasoned. The corn is then husked in the field, and the corn and fodder put under cover without delay. The fodder is cut for feeding in pieces about one inch in length, then put into large boxes, where it is mixed with cob-meal and saturated with water at the boiling point. The boxes are then covered so as to be nearly air-tight, and allowed to stand, say twelve hours before feeding.

The experiment was made last December. At that time my stock consisted of forty-nine animals of various sizes, but estimated to be equal to forty-six cows.

At the time the experiment was made the feed of the stock per day for the preceding three weeks had been as follows, viz:—

|---|---|
| Corn fodder, 460 pounds, valued at | $2 30 |
| Hay, 300 pounds, (fed dry) valued at | 3 00 |
| Corn meal, 200 pounds, valued at | 2 08 |
| Total, | $7 38 |

Upon this estimate, the daily cost of food for each animal was a trifle more than sixteen cents.

At the time the experiment was made, I had twenty-three cows in milk of various ages and conditions, and on Wednesday, the 8th of December, the aggregate yield was 373 pounds. On Sunday, the 12th of December, the best of English hay was substituted for the corn fodder, pound for pound, but in all other respects the food was the same. The hay, that is, 460 pounds—was cut, mixed with the same quantity of meal as was used with the corn fodder, and subjected in every particular to the same treatment. The same quantity of dry hay as before was furnished in addition.

On Wednesday, the 15th of December, the yield of milk was 359 pounds, a loss of fourteen. On Thursday, the 16th, the use of corn fodder was resumed, and on the 22nd of December the yield of milk was 382 pounds, a gain of twenty-three pounds. One experiment is not sufficient to establish or overthrow a theory, and I submit the result in this case rather for the purpose of provoking inquiry and encouraging the applications of other tests. If it shall appear in the end—as I think it will appear, that well-cured corn fodder, properly treated for animal food, is equal, pound for pound, with good hay, there will no longer exist even a pretext for neglecting the cultivation of corn in New England.

The daily cost of supporting forty-six cows upon hay was:—

|---|---|
| For 760 pounds of hay at $20 per ton | $7 60 |
| For 200 pounds cob meal | 2 08 |
| Total | $9 68 |

or 21 cents per cow.

Eating Ham in Peace.

The recent alarm in the pork market produced by Acting British Consul Crump's report of "hog cholera," which had destroyed 700,000 head in Illinois, has led to the publication of some interesting facts by the American Agricultural Association. The report of Mr. Crump roused in France and England a vague terror of trichinosis. The pork trade was threatened with a catastrophe, and almost the first official act of Secretary Blaine was the pacification of Johnny Crapaud and John Bull. "It is proved to be a misapprehension," said the Secretary; "you can eat your ham in peace."

Hog cholera, whether there be much or little of it, is not trichinosis. It mainly effects the young pig, and the Agricultural Association thinks the government might well spend a few thousands of dollars to discover a cure for it. We should think, on the contrary, that the farmers and the pork packers, who are immediately interested, could more wisely spend the few thousands needed for the purpose. If the government is to lend a hand to the pork interest, it can not refuse it to any other.

According to the Association, we may, all, with our foreign cousins, eat our ham in peace. Trichinosis, it says, is a disease known to man. It is believed never to injure the hog, and it can never affect the human system except through the insufficiently cooked meat in which the disease might chance to lurk. Swine or lard butter, however great a fraud, is not dangerous to health from trichinosis, because lard can be rendered only at a temperature that kills animalcules. Anti-Huff cheese, against which Mr. Crump justly protests, is made of skim-milk in which lard replaces the cream. But of this imposture, there are but two small factories. Upon the whole, the assurances of the Agricultural Association are very gratifying. It is dismal to the man of normal appetite, as he seats himself at table and arranges his napkin, to be haunted by the suspicion that his butter is oleomargar
