WHAT DID I TELL YOU?

WALKER SAVED OUR LIVES.

Dread Scott! what means this awful head?
I shrivel up, bones, blood and skin
When I attempt to walk the street.
I envy beasts with fur on this.
I never call my soul by name
As August makes my blood to bubble,
Wife says I am alone to blame—
How could I know it would make us trouble?

Each night I once crawled to the shed,
And lay and panted in anguish deep,
But now I reach my folding bed
Which Walker sent us, and I sleep.
Sleep like a watchman, so profound.
I snore like some old alligator,
The air so Arctic blows around—
We've bought Walker's new refrigerator.

The baby in his carriage lies
Close to that icy thing and coos;
His feet froze-bitten like our pies.
But that we make him wear our shoes.
Pneumonia swept the kittens off
So cold the kitchen grew of late;
A pedlar caught an awful cough,
We have to thaw the cookstove grate.

Fact? Well you oughter come and see
Our house so cool—I never seek
To find a cave—it just suits me.
Our comfort paid for by the week.
Rich carpets, curtains, pictures, all,
The sofa-bed, great boon to man;
We never go away till fall—
We live by Walker's payment plan.

Home, comfort, happiness, quiet, ease. You need not suffer from the heat if you live in your own rooms and do as you please. The baby sleeps in his carriage, and you sleep in the cool parlor on your sofa-bed. Call at
