BLOSSOMS OUT IN MAJOR LEAGUE STYLE

All International League Clubs Will Go South—Season Opens April 21.

(New York Times.)

The International League blossomed out in major league style at its annual meeting at the Imperial Hotel yesterday and announced that all the clubs would go south on training trips just like the big organization. The league looks for a big season and adopted a 154-game schedule, to open April 21. The opening games are: Akron at Jersey City, Toronto at Reading, Buffalo at Baltimore, Rochester at Syracuse. Openings will be held in Akron, Toronto, Buffalo and Rochester on May 5.

The league boosted the waiver price from $500 to $1,000 and although the unwritten agreement with the majors was discussed no action was taken. There is a strong feeling in the International against the restoration of the major league draft. While the relations this season will not be as formal as under the old national agreement, it is believed that the minors will do more business this year with the majors than last season. Some of the clubs will not hesitate to make optional agreements with major league bodies.

The International decided against raising admission this season, although the matter was talked over for some time. The salary limit has already been boosted from $3,500 to $5,000 a month.

The training season plans of the league include a trip by Toronto to Columbus, Ga., under Manager Hugh Duffy, Buffalo, under Manager George Wiltse, will train at Raleigh, N. C. The new Akron club under Manager Dick Hoblitzell will train at Hot Springs; Syracuse, under Manager Tony Cummings, will train at Tarboro, N. C.; and Bill Donovan will take the Jersey City club to Lakewood to train. Baltimore, under Manager Jack Dunn, and Rochester, under Manager Arthur Irwin, will both train at Goldsboro, N. C. John Hummel is the manager of Reading and he is the only leader who has not yet picked his training camp.

Only a few trades were made at the meeting. Akron sold first baseman McLarry to the Cardinals and got an infielder, Lee Hoobs, in the bargain. Billy Purtell, the third baseman, was sold by Toronto to Akron. Pitcher Hal Justin was awarded to Reading.

RODDIE McDONALD MAY MEET CHAMPION

May Have a Chance at the Middleweight Title Before Brosseau.

(Halifax Chronicle.)

Rumor has it that Roddie McDonald, the Glace Bay boy, will soon make a trip across the border where he will be taken under the wing of a trainer well known in local boxing circles. The idea is to give the big blonde a trial in some of the bouts about the Hub and if he makes as good a showing as he did here during the last year he will be given a special course of stiff training and sent in against Mike O'Dowd. This is certainly a wonderful chance for the man from the mining districts and if it materializes he will have more than a chance for a bare come-back. The promise carries with it the assurance that if McDonald accepts the offer he will have a chance at the middleweight title before Brosseau. It seems that some of the backers of the man from up above have got themselves in bad with O'Dowd and his manager by writing letters to the papers in the Hub asking why the champion did not meet Brosseau after he had challenged him. The reply to this letter was of course that a champion challenges no one. He receives challenges and does not send them forth. Our wish is that this rumor is perfectly accurate, and that Roddie will obtain the chance that it seems to hold forth.

Three young women stenographers, including Miss Gladys Arnold of Nashua, N. H., have been sworn in at Camp Meade, Annapolis, as army field clerks, the first female "field clerks" known in the service. These girls are now enlisted in the army and have the same rating in salary, transportation, commutation of quarters and rations as lieutenants.

EASE AND SAFETY IN FLYING CRAFT

Aerial Limousines Luxuriously Equipped — Sleeping Quarters and Vanity Cases.

Milady will fly—that is if the aerial limousines, coupes and cabin cruisers at the Aeronautical Exposition at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory are any indication. There are smelling salts, vanity cases, cigarette lighters, and what nots enough in these lavishly upholstered flying limousines to make them very much in vogue among modern women.

It is perhaps a healthy sign when the manufacturers spend so much energy on the luxurious refinements of flying as they have in models on exhibit at this show, says the New York Evening Post. It would indicate that to their minds at least they have solved the most difficult problems of aeronautical engineering, and can devote time to vanity cases and upholstery.

The impression one gets at this exposition this year, which is commercial in every aspect, is that it has been something of a lean year in aeronautics, but that the bolder and more courageous of manufacturers have come through with a determination to make the game pay its own way. Their government contracts have on the whole been thoroughly unproductive, and they have devoted their time to the development of passenger and freight carrying craft.

There is the L. W. F. freighter, 105 feet from wing tip to wing tip, with its two long slim brown fuselages adapted to the carrying of mails or freight. Between the two fuselages is a tailess nacelle, with room for sleeping quarters for the crew. It would be something of an exaggeration to speak of it as a Pullman, yet it would be possible to rig up a bed for a pilot off shifts on a long flight. It is a thoroughly efficient machine, carrying as much as 5,000 or 6,000 pounds of freight on short flights when not fully loaded with gasoline.

It is capable of a speed of 110 miles an hour, and it is perhaps the outstanding feature of the show. While it is smaller in actual wing span than the NC-4 seaplane, it still gives the impression of being a superbly large machine. It has a low landing speed, which makes its use on small landing fields possible. It is hard to see why this machine could not be put into commercial operation with success, and its designers are unbounded in praises of its possibilities.

Nestled under its two broad wings are two of the little "Butterfly" model monoplanes, each painted a brilliant blue. They are thoroughly airworthy appearing little craft, with a business-like cockpit and easily-handled controls. They are aerial "flivvers" and sell for $2,500.

The Curtiss "Eagle," the Dayton-Wright "Cabin Cruiser," and the Aeromarine "Aerial Limousine model 50" are the leading machines in the passenger carrying class. All are of the enclosed type, with protection from the wind, and with fine upholstering and all the refinements possible. It is these machines which attract the curious crowds who enjoy the chance to slip inside their cabins and see how very much like limousines they really are. The fact is that they are extremely well-appointed, and are unusually comfortable. One of the drawbacks of flying, from the point of view of the casual passenger who wants to take a trip, is the necessity for helmets, goggles, and other cumbersome impediments to shield a person from the wind and cold. In these enclosed cabins, there is no need for special equipment, and the persistent roar of the motor is muffled.

The exhibition last year was naturally a war exhibition, and the transition to a commercial basis had hardly been attempted. It was natural that there should have been a number of war models, and it is equally natural that this year there should be none but commercial machines on the floor.

Silent Tragedy.

(London Ideas.)

Sweeping his long hair back with an impressive gesture the visitor faced the proprietor of the film studio. "I would like to secure a place in your moving picture company," he said.

"You are an actor?" asked the film man.

"Yes."

"Had any experience acting without audiences?"

A flicker of sadness shone in the visitor's eyes as he replied:

"Acting without audiences is what brought me here!"

SPECIAL ORCHESTRAL SCORE

THE "REAL" WORKMAN.

American workmen, as a whole, do not want to tear everything down, do not want to give up the land or homes they own and make them common property, do not want to destroy family life and place their wives at the disposal of any and every ruffian who prowls the streets. American workmen would like to have some voice in determining their working conditions, some voice in the fixing of wages and hours, some share, if possible in the profits which they help to create. They want to progress; they want to raise their status. They want to see industry democratized along the lines of the American form of government. But they are not Bolshevists; they are not anarchists; they are not revolutionists; they are not Socialists.

There are increasing indications that the level-headed rank and file of union members are beginning to assert themselves against the agitators of distinctly reddish hue who recently succeeded in foisting themselves into the councils of trade unionism in this country.
