BYRANT'S HABITS.

The strongest point in Mr. Byrant's character was its simplicity. This is no more true of his poems than of his prose writings; no more true of either than of his daily pursuits and habits. Traveling, as he did, through many lands and among the proudest monuments of civilization; having, as he always did in his character and position, a perpetual passport to all society and every public place, his heart remained fixed in its first love of N[illegible]. Mr. Byrant has told the story of his da[illegible] habits himself. Nothing could be simpler. The Athenian, born on the poorest soil in Greece, contented himself at dinner with the head of a fish, an onion and a few olives. Even the rich were quite satisfied with a dish of vegetables; while people at large were accustomed to eat meat on a feast day for the whole year. Mr. Byrant in diet and in all the pursuits of the day was quite simple In winter he rose always at half-past 5; in summer from half an hour to an hour earlier. With little clothing on his body, he immediately began an hour's exercise with dumb-bells, a horizontal bar, and a light chair swung round the head. Sometimes he gave more than an hour to this exercise, but never less. When it was over he bathed from head to foot. In the Summer, if living at Roslyn, he usually shortened the exercise in the chamber and went out of doors to engage at some work requiring brisk exercise, such pruning trees or cutting wood. After the bath, if breakfast were not ready, he sat in his library. No breakfast could be plainer than his—hominy and milk, or brown bread, oat meal or wheaten grits, and in the season, baked sweet apples. Buckwheat cakes he did not refuse, but coffee or animal food he never took. Occasionally he drank chocolate, as it has no narcotic effect. After the meal was over he engaged for a while at his studies and if in the city, walked down to the Evening Post office, distance of three miles. After three hours passed thus he returned, always walking, whatever the condition of the streets or weather might be. If living in the country, he studied or read until weary, and then went into his garden to prune pear trees, or walked through the woods; he seldom drove. He dined early on vegetables with a little meat or fish. At supper he never drank tea, but was satisfied with bread and butter and fruit. Fruit formed a large part of his diet, and he ate it at almost any time without inconvenience. In the city, where people dine later, he only ate two meals a day. Water was his almost exclusive drink, though he occasionally took wine. He once said he was a natural temperance man, his mind being rather confused than exhilirated by alcohol. Milton once said, however, that the lyric poet may drink wine and live generously; but the epic poet, he who shall sing of the gods, and their descent unto men, must drink water out of a wooden bowl. According to Milton, then, Mr. Bryant was more of an epic than a lyric poet, and though his verses are not of the epic order, no one lacking the epic spirit could have translated Homer as he did. Mr. Bryant retired early, in town at 10—in the country somewhat earlier. For several years he avoided in the evening every kind of literary occupation which tasked the faculties, such as composition, even to the writing of letters, because it excited his nervous system and prevented sound sleep. He never used tobacco. "I never meddle with it," he said "except to quarrel with its use. I abominate all drugs and narcotics, and have always carefully avoided everything which spurs nature to exertions which she would not otherwise make. Even with my food I do not take the usual condiments, such as pepper and salt." When practicing law in Massachusetts he was elected a justice of the peace, and at one time held the office of village clerk. He was often asked later in life to accept office but he steadily refused. His name was once mentioned for the Italian mission and he immediately responded, saying: "What would I do in the foul atmosphere of a court society which derives its tone from the sanction of royalty? Give me the pure air, the bright skies and the green fields." In religion he was a deep, though unpretentious, believer. At Roslyn he regularly attended the little Presbyterian church and partook of the sacrament.

FISHING AT THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.—Fishing? Fishing and floating are the occupations of the place. Fishing, of course. It was a good day. The water was still, and there was a thin veil of clouds over the sky. We knew it was hot in New York, but it was not hot here. We started off, a merry group of boats. We rowed in and out among the islands, and found our "ground" at three miles distance. And now will somebody tell us why an experienced girl, with an old, stiff rod, without a reel, and with a coarse linen line, can catch more fish and better ones than we can with a split bamboo, a silk waterproof line, and a six-feet leader? This is what we would like to know. Do the fish discriminate? Do they say, as they see the rare tackle coming down to them, or reflected in the water, "There's an old fellow at the end of that rod as full of piscatorial 'science' as an egg is of meat—a man to be avoided: but here is a girl who is innocent of bass and guiltless of pickerel?" It must be so. Plato, thou reasonest well. At any rate, there is a two-pound bass on the maiden's hook, plump to the bottom, and soon, while we are trying our scientific dodges, she pulls up with a feeble struggle the handsomest three-pound bass we have seen in the river. The men try to cover their shame by generous praise of the girl! So it goes on until noon, and then we go ashore on a "desert island," and the guide cooks our spoils for dinner. We lie on the grass and eat our fried fish, with the edibles we have brought with us, and we wash them down with the best coffee, and, after an hour for digestion, we go for our game again.

Bass, pickerel, wall-eyed pike, muskallonge. They come from exhaustless breeding and feeding grounds, and will always be here. On a lazy afternoon, we throw or troll our flies around the islands directly in front of the hotel. There are places within fifty rods where we can hardly throw a fly without getting a rise. We see every day fine black bass taken from the dock by waiting fishermen—within the toss of a biscuit from the window where we write. The excitement of the evening when the different parties come in with their day's catch are very delightful; and when a boat comes up or down the [illegible]m with a white flag at her prow, the excitement rises to enthusiasm. The white flag means a muskallonge! This is great game nd is taken rarely.

ENJOY LIFE.—Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means for enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often [illegible] majority of people feel like giving up disheartened, discouraged and worried out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint is the direct cause of ninety-five per cent of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles 10 cents. Try it. Davis & Dibble, Agents for Fredericton.

In one of the relief camps in India recently, among the famine-striken natives was a full-grown man, large-limbed and big-made, who weighed forty-five pounds.

A leading medical authority says:—"Consumption is essentially a disease of degeneration and decay. So it may be inferred that the treatment for the most part should be of a sustaining and invigorating character—nutritious food, pure, dry air, with such varied and moderate exercise in it as the strength will bear, the enlivening influence of bright sunshine and agreeable scenery, and cheerful society and occupation, aided by a judicious use of medical tonics and stimulants, are among the means best suited to restore the defective functions and structures of frames prone to decay."

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime by its gently stimulating and nutritive tonic properties is adapted in an eminent degree to this office of restoring the "defective functions and structures," as the number of cases in which it has been so successfully used, together with its short record of a few months, that has placed it in the foremost ranks of proprietary remedies will fully testify.

Prepared solely by J. H. Robinson, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N. B., and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00.

For nineteen years manufacturers of

BUCKEYE MOWERS AND SELF-RAKING REAPERS,

Successfully sold in European markets in competition with the best machines made in England and the United States.

In 1876-7, there were sold to New Brunswick farmers, mowers made by thirteen firms; from information carefully compiled and got from all parts of N. B., we are able to state that our sales were equal to those of any other two firms in the trade during those years.

The true criterion of merit is success. Buy Cossitt's Mowers and Rakes and you will have the best. Liberal terms of credit.

Gentlemen Electors

OF THE

County of York.

I SHALL be a Candidate at the approaching Election for the representation of this County in the house of Commons. I may tell you frankly that I am opposed to the present Administration, believing that its policy from the beginning, and all along, has been one detrimental to the interests of the Dominion, and fraught with ruin to the whole Country.

As soon as Parliament is dissolved, I shall commence to visit the various localities throughout the County, and give my views upon Dominion matters, as well as expose, to the best of my ability, the reign of mal-administration which has marked the career of the Mackenzie regime. In the mean time, I ask you not to pledge yourselves to any other candidate.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

THOROUGHLY PREPARED FOR A LARGE BUSINESS.

We thank the public for past favors, and respectfully announce that our Extensive Stock must be sold in season to make way for more New Goods. Plenty more where these came from. It is bad policy to allow goods to get old on the shelves.

☞ Received Invoices of more New Goods from London ex "Polynesian." Further particulars on arrival of stock.
