SECRET OF MYSTERIOUS POWER REVEALED AT LAST

How Prominent People Have Gained Wealth and Popularity

Famous Hypnotist Perfects Simple Method That Enables Anyone to Control Thoughts and Acts of Others, Cure Disease and Habits Without Drugs, and Read the Secret Desires of People Though Thousands of Miles Away

Wonderful Book Describing This Strange Force and a Character Delineation Post Free to All Who Write at Once

The National Institute of Sciences has appropriated £5,000 toward a fund for the free distribution of Prof. Knowles' new book, "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the practices of Eastern Yogis, and explains a wonderful system for the development of Personal Magnetism, Hypnotic and Telepathetic Powers, and the curing of diseases and habits without drugs. The subject of practical character reading is also extensively dealt with, and the author describes a simple method of accurately reading the secret thoughts and desires of others though thousands of miles away. The almost endless stream of letters requesting copies of the book and character delineations indicate clearly the universal interest in Psychological and Occult Sciences.

"Rich and poor alike benefit by the teachings of this new system,' says Prof. Knowles, "and the person who wishes to achieve greater success has but to apply the simple rules laid down.' 'That many wealthy and prominent people owe their success to the power of Personal Influence there is not the slightest doubt, but the great mass of people have remained in utter ignorance of these phenomena. The National Institute of Sciences has therefore undertaken the somewhat arduous task of distributing broadcast, without regard for class or creed, the information heretofore possessed by the few. In addition to supplying the books free, each person who writes at once will also receive a character delineation of from 400 to 500 words as prepared by Prof. Knowles.

If you wish a copy of Prof. Knowles' book and a Character Delineation, simply copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

"I want power of mind,
Force and strength in my look,
Please read my character
And send me your book."

Also send your full name and address (state whether Mr., Mrs. or Miss), write plainly, and address your letter to: National Institute of Sciences, Dept 808, No. 258, Westminster, Bridge-road, London, S. E. If you wish you may enclose six 2 cents (stamps of your own country) to pay postage, etc.

SOCIETY GIRL'S WEDDING COSTLY

The cost of financing a society girl's wedding is revealed in papers filed by Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., father of Mrs. Olga Roosevelt Bayne, of Washington, who was married on November 15 last. Among the items are: Wedding supper, $564; trousseau, $1,200; dinner dance at Chevy Chase club, $87; music, $105; tips given by bride, $15; bride's gift to clergyman, $100; bridesmaids' lockets (five) $375. This makes a total of $2,446.

In addition, the living expenses of the bride for the month of the marriage were $305 and her father paid $300 for her horse. Mrs. Bayne reached the age of twenty-one on April 5 last. Because she is no longer an infant to the eyes of the law her father wishes to turn over to her management the estate she inherited from her mother, Grace Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt died in 1894, leaving most of her estate to her daughter. She was a cousin of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt.

"The misery of it is that you can't get good coffee anywhere."

"And, besides, it always rains when I go on my vacation."

"You never meet any but selfish people at a summer resort."

Some Comment on Visitor in New York—Monument in Memory of Sir Philip Sydney

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company)

There has lately arrived in New York an individual who styles himself Prince Paul de Clairmont, of Russia, a serene highness, a cousin of the Duke of Norfolk, and who, like so manuy other nondescript adventurers, insists that he is the original "Paul"—the hero of a recent cheap and nasty novel by a Canadian woman, entitled "Three Weeks." The "prince," who occupied an entire page of several American papers on Sunday last, his picture being given along with his alleged coat-of-arms surmounted, not by a princely coronet, but by the five-pronged circlet of a mere German "von," is likewise known, in England at any rate, as Jocelyn Preston Arnott, and when arrested in London last winter on a charge of theft he gave at the Bow street police court his occupation as that of an actor.

The accusation of theft was preferred by Florence, Lady Abdy, a daughter of Lehmann Cohen of London, and who became the third wife of the late Sir William Abdy, when he was already completely crippled by paralysis, and who inherited his large fortune. Since Sir William's death, she has frequently received the attention of the public, notably in connection with aviation, and at one time it was rumored that she was about to wed Alice Thaw's ex-husband, the Earl of Yarmouth, who has since become the Marquis of Hertford.

From evidence given in the police court at Bow street, it would seem that the prisoner had scraped acquaintance with Lady Abdy during a trip from Paris to London, representing himself as "His Serene Highness the Prince de Clairmont of Russia." He became the guest of Lady Abdy at the Savoy Hotel, and she continued to act as his hostess for several days, until she found a jewelled butterfly-brooch, valued at several thousand dollars, was missing. She accused him of having stolen it, and had him arrested.

The police submitted in their report that the prisoner's face was painted and powdered, and added that when they searched his room at the Charing Cross Hotel, they found powder-puffs, rouge, pencils for the eyebrows, and visiting cards bearing the name and title of "Prince Paul de Clairmont." He admitted having taken away the brooch, and also having pawned it, surrendering to the police the pawn-ticket, but declared that Lady Abdy had given it to him when he asked her for some money, because she had no cash in hand at the time.

As Lady Abdy is very rich, this excuse did not appeal to the magistrate, who committed the soi-disant prince for trial at the general sessions. There the jury acquitted him. The man brought an action for damages for alleged false imprisonment against Florence Abdy, which was heard before Sir William Scrutton, in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of London. The evidence of the police court and of the general sessions was produced once more, with the additional evidence on the part of the police, that when they had taken the "prince" after his arrest, to Lady Abdy's apartments at the Savoy for identification, he had exclaimed, "For God's sake be lenient with me!"

In summing up, Justice Sir William Scrutton laid stress on the character of the "prince's" title. The jury rendered a verdict in his favor, with damages to the amount of one farthing, or half a cent, condemning him, however, to pay the costs.

This, then, is the youth who has been launched in a six-column illustrated article by some of the biggest American newspapers, upon the confiding people of the United States, as a cousin of England's premier duke, and as "Prince Paul de Clairmont, of Russia." Needless to add, there is no such title in Russia, or in any other country.

Sir Alan Johnstone, British minister at the Hague, and married to the sister of Gifford Pinchot, formerly chief forester of the United States, has issued an appeal for subscriptions in aid of a fund for the erection, on the battlefield of Zutphen, of a monument to the memory of Sir Philip Sidney, who there received his death wound on September 22, 1586, while fighting for the independence of the Netherlands.

When Sidney died, the Dutch government wished to honor him with splendid obsequies, and offered to spend, "half a ton of gold" on the memorial. The offer was not accepted by Sidney's English relatives, who wished that he should sleep his last sleep on English soil. But that the Dutch have not forgotten him, is shown by the fact that this present scheme for erecting a monument was initiated by them and the preparations entrusted to an Anglo-Dutch committee.

Here is an opportunity for the many descendants of the Hollanders who emigrated in colonial times from the District of Zutphen, and bore its name as a patronymic. If all those who, the heirs of mingled English and Dutch tradition, bear the ancient name of Sutphen (as it is now spelled), were to send their contributions to H. van Alphen, treasurer of the Sidney memorial fund, the project would prove an even greater success than is at present anticipated, and Sir Philip Sidney, the most courtly and fascinating figure of the Elizabethan era, whom the queen described as "one of the jewels of her crown," would not lack a fitting monument on the scene of his noble death.

History relates that a quixotic impulse cost him his life. Having set out with a small party to intercept a convoy of provisions, he found that his comrade in arms, Sir William Pelham, had started for the fight without greaves. Thereupon Sir Philip Sidney cast off his own leg-armor, which would have defended him from the fatal wound in the thigh inflicted by the enemy's buleet. His contemporaries speak in the highest praise of his "strong, warm and loveable character," his memory being more especially preserved by the oft-repeated story of his refusing, when wounded, a cup of water in favor of a dying soldier, with the words, "Thy need is greater than mine."

Offensive Optimism

By RUTH CAMERON

IS there any virtue, I wonder which, when carried to excess, does not become a vice, at least a defect? It seems to me that the old Greek motto "nothing in excess" has even more of wisdom in it than appears on the surface.

I am thinking today especially of optimism. Optimism is certainly a most beautiful quality. I preach it, teach it and try to live by my own preaching and teaching. Indeed, Charles Reade's "Courage comrade, the devil is dead" is one of my favorite mottoes. And yet I have seen even optimism gone to seed and bringing forth thorns instead of fruit.

There are some people who are what I call offensive optimists. In an office where I used to work there was a most exaggerated example of this type. Mrs. R. was an optimist from the word go. Day after day she used to come into the office in the morning in a perfect fervour of enthusiasm and delight over her own affairs, and address us something like this:

"I am so happy this morning. My rich uncle has just sent me the loveliest bracelet from abroad," and then would follow a lengthly description of the beauties of this wonderful bracelet, its probable value, her uncle's wealth, some of his former gifts, etc., etc.

Or it was, "Oh, girls, Jim (her husband) is going to buy me the handsomest gown, one we saw in the window. He says I haven't had anything fit to wear for an age"—she who dressed infinitely better than any of us.

Or "My dear, isn't it perfectly lovely, I am to have a raise in pay the first of the month. I am so happy. Aren't you glad for me?"—wasn't that asking a good deal when s he knew that she already received twiceas much as most of us, and knew that w e knew it?

I have known pessimists who wore on my nerves, but none any more grating than this offensive optimist.

Surely you have known someone of her type, someone who, no matter what your mood, was always loudly calling on you to rejoice with him over his good fortunes. Now there is a great deal said about obtruding one's ills and sorrows on other people; is there not such a thing as obtruding one's enthusiasm and good fortune?

When the Bible says, "rejoice with them that do rejoice," it adds the complement, "and weep with them that weep." It does not advise a selfish and tactless optimism that persists in rejoicing, and in asking others to rejoice with you, no matter what their state of mind or their private troubles may be.

Maybe I'm very selfish, but there are times when, although I'm glad for him, I don't feel just like hearing all about my neighbor's wonderful good fortune. And perhaps I under-rate human nature, but I certainly have a lurking suspicion that there are a good many other folks who sometimes feel the same way.

A PRETTY ENGLISH DRESS

This delightful girlish costume was made for an English bridesmaid, but it would look pretty on any Canadian lawn or veranda. It is an embroidered lingerie frock with high waist line, belted with pink satin ribbon which falls in a soft knot at the side. Other ends under the overskirt form a second knot which shows coquettishly below the first hem. The pink is repeated in the cameo and on the quaint lingerie hat.

A SUMMER DRINK WHICH STRENGTHENS

A delicious summer drink is iced Bovril. Mix a spoonful in a cold split soda water. This is both cooling and strengthening. Cold bouillon served alone or with toast or crackers is an exquisite afternoon refreshment. Make a quantity of Bovril with boiling water in the usual manner and cool it in the ice box. Many hostesses are serving this bouillon which is always excellent.

The best way to buy Bovril is in the 1 lb. bottles. These are by far the most economical, being retailed usually at $1.75, and contain eight times as much as the bottle usually sold at 35c.

We will gladly send on application a very useful leaflet on invalid and general dietetics, which explains why Bovril aids digestion and enables you to absorb the full nourishment from your ordinary diet.

Daily Hints For the Cook

BANANA AND LETTUCE SALAD.

Wash a head of lettuce, line the dish with green leaves, shred the rest of the lettuce, mix with one large or two small pared sliced bananas and a chopped hard-boiled egg. Dissolve one tablespoon of sugar and one-eighth teaspoon of salt in sufficient vinegar. Have all very cold. Mix and serve.

PLAIN BUNS.

When making bread reserve enough to make one large loaf. Add to it one-quarter cup of butter softened, a saltspoon of salt three well beaten eggs and three rounding tablespoons of sugar. Work all well together, then knead five minutes. Put the dough in a bowl, cover and let rise very light. Turn out on the board and shape into small buns. Set these together in a buttered pan, brush with milk and let rise again which will take but a short time. Press a raisin into the top of each, brush again with milk, dust with sugar and bake.

Brodie's Handy Ammonia
