SUSPECTS TORTURED.

Japanese Have Trouble in Subduing Korea.

"The efforts of the new Japanese Administration of Korea to recover the confidence of the Korean people are largely nullified by official maltreatment of Koreans," says the Tokio correspondent of the London Express.

"While the use of paddles and flogging is publicly abolished by the Government, police officials regularly use torture upon the suspects."

The following particulars of the methods employed are furnished by Dr. Frank Schofield, of the Severance Mission Hospital, Seoul:

"Case 1.—An educated young man, punished with 90 blows of the paddle for complicity in the independence movement, and released after six weeks' imprisonment, was re-arrested and questioned with regard to the bomb that was thrown at Admiral Saito. During the police examination he was seven times suspended from the ceiling by a cord tied around his wrists; on five occasions his head was forced back and tied to his hands, which had been fastened behind his back; water was poured down his nostrils off and on during a period of four days, and for a further period of three days soap and water were substituted for plain water.

"As a last expedient in this line, pepper tea was used; the reaction was so severe that the young man became unconscious. All these methods having failed, the police ordered his toe nails to be extracted. The Korean torturer, instead, pulled out a piece of flesh from the inside of the small toe, which caused profuse bleeding and satisfied the police.

"Case 2.—A young man charged with printing the "Independence" newspaper, refused to give the names of his accomplices. He was beaten unconscious three times in six days and once by hot irons. When seen by the doctors he was a physical wreck.

"Case 3.—A Korean young woman, also educated, was beaten so violently over the head that an abscess formed in one ear, and her knee and hip joints were twisted to the verge of dislocation. She was 'thoroughly spat upon'."

"One result of such methods is naturally the production of false evidence and the prosecution of innocent people. Another is the creation of a conviction in the Korean mind that promises of reform are for foreign consumption only, and that there is no hope of their condition being ameliorated under Japanese rule. Such are the evil results of ten years of military rule."

"Paper Silk" of Japan.

Millions of yards of a new kind of paper fabric are being manufactured in Japan. It is a composition of paper and silk and is called "paper silk," suitable for making blouses, sheetings and other dress material.

It looks like mercerized cotton at its best, and can be used for all sorts of wearing apparel. It is estimated that the stuff can be put upon the English market at only 12 cents per length.

A London merchant who has had twenty years' experience of Japanese imports declared that Japan's manufacturers are laying themselves out with the greatest success to beat the cheap goods of the Germans.

Tons of celluloid goods now come to Europe from Japan, which at one time flooded Great Britain from Germany. The secret of this is that the Japanese have the greatest available supplies of camphor, which is so largely used in the production of celluloid material.

Many other goods which were formerly unobtainable are now forthcoming, since great quantities of producing plant and machinery have been laid down.

Discounts.

There are some singular discounts allowed in the book trade. They were happily illustrated on one occasion by Mark Twain. One day, while the humorist was connected with a publishing house, he went to a bookcase, and picking up a volume, asked the price. He then suggested that, as a publisher, he was entitled to 50 per cent. discount. To this the clerk assented. "As I am also the author of the book," said Mark Twain, "it would appear that I am again entitled to 50 per cent. discount." And the clerk bowed. "And as I am a personal friend of the proprietor," he modestly continued, "I presume you will allow me the usual 25 per cent. discount?" "Well," drawled the unblushing humorist, "under these conditions I think I may as well take the book. "What's the tax?" The clerk took out his pencil and figured industriously. Then he said, with great obsequiousness, "as near as I can calculate we owe you the book and about 37½ cents."

Kava In New Way.

The national beverage of the Samoan Islanders is "kava," obtained from the dried fruit of a plant known to the botanist as Piper methysticum. The classic method of its preparation was by chewing, this work being done by maidens; then water was added, and, after straining, the stuff was ready to drink.

Missionaries convinced the natives that this method did not accord with the best social customs, and so nowadays they grind the kava root in a stone mortar with a stone pestle.

To any unaccustomed person kava tastes rather like soapsuds, though some say it has a flavor of varnish. Many Americans, however, having acquired a liking for it, drink it by the gallon. But the native way of preparing it is too slow for them, and they prefer to use a meat-grinder.

Harder to Sing.

Delicate scientific measurements have proved that contralto, baritone and bass singers use far more force than soprano and tenor singers need.

The women of Spain are generally credited with being the best dancers of any women in the world.
