This pen is the result of experiments extending over a period of a quarter of a century, and is the only simple, common-sense principle ever employed in fountain pens. It is a regular 14-kt. gold pen, fitted to a fountain holder of vulcanized rubber, and on each side of the pen is a feeding shaft of hard rubber, one of which conducts the ink from the fount to the nibs of the pen, while the other conducts air to the fount to supply the vacuum caused by the exhaustion of ink, thus forming a DOUBLE FEED, one for the exit of ink, the other for the entrance of air. It is the simplest, cleanest, readiest and most easily managed of all the fountain pens.

NEW YORK PRESS.

Evening Post.—"Caw's 'Dashaway' surpasses all the rest."

The Herald.—"Certainly nothing can be had for the money that will afford so much profit and satisfaction."

The Times.—"The 'Dashaway' is not a stylograph, but a regular 14-carat gold pen attached to a fountain holder. It can be unused, carried in the pocket for months, and when needed is always ready."

The Mail and Express.—"It can be fitted to any hand, and does for the writer what the continually threaded needle does for the sewing machine, and what the untiring locomotive does for the traveller."

The numbers indicate the size of the gold pens, No. 1 being the smallest. The ink capacity in each increases with the size of the gold pen.

Each pen is put up in a neat box, with filler and directions for use. Order by number, and state whether plain or mounted holder. The mounted holders are handsomely engraved and trimmed with 18-kt. gold plated bands, which gives them a handsome appearance.
