Aquatic.

George W. Lee, who has been training the crews of the Ariel Boat Club of Baltimore, has been permitted to go by the club. He is now in New York.

The Neptune Boat Club of Baltimore has further retained the services of Fred Plaisted to select and train another junior four for the national regatta,

The senior four of the Toronto Boat Club is reported to be a very fast crew, and is improving steadily. The crew may be seen at the national regatta at Washington.

Peterson, the 'Frisco sculler, next rows a match race against McLean of British Columbia. At a regatta held recently near San Francisco Peterson gave his opponents 1½ minutes start in a three-mile race, and beat them handily.

The Oxford University Boat Club has invited the Harvard Boat Club to a rowing contest on the Thames early in September.

Speaking of the coming big professional double-scull race, O'Connor recently said: "Hanlan and myself have the greatest desire to win the race, and if Gaudaur and McKay can beat us, we will have to be lifted out of our boat at the finish." It is reported that Mr. J. A. St. John and a party of St. Louis sporting men will back Gaudaur and McKay for thousands of dollars. It will undoubtedly be a big betting race.

A WONDERFUL SCULLER.

The phenomenon of the year among amateur single scullers is Edwin Hedley of the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia, and he promises to continue to be one for an indefinite time. The attention of the entire amateur boating fraternity of the country has been directed toward him ever since he so easily defeated fast Fred Hawkins at the People's regatta at Philadelphia on July 4.

His speed and wonderful endurance induced him to try sculling, and on Saturday, June 6, he made his debut in the Vesper club closed regetta, and, with a partner, won the double sculling event, and pulled an oar in the victorious eight.

At the Harlem regatta on June 13 he won the junior sculling event, and one week later, at the Schuylkull Navy regetta, he crossed the line first in the senior single and pulled in the winning Centipede crew.

At Baltimore, at the Patapsco navy regatta, he won the senior singles, and, with Charles Saenger as mate, won the double event.

On July 4 he succeeded in defeating Carney and Hawkins in the senior singles, and, with George W. Van Vliet as mate, rowed away from the Varuna, double. In less than one month he has won 10 races, which is the best record ever made by an American sculler in the same time.

Hedley is not yet 27 years old, weighs in rowing costume 160 pounds, and is 5 feet 10½ inches tall. With more experience he ought to make one of the most remarkable scullers the country has ever seen.

The Equity Court.

The court is engaged today hearing the petition of Celia McCollough, administratix of the estate of Patrick Cosgrove, vs Francis McCafferty, trustee of the estate of Frank McCollough & Co. The petition sets out that James McCollough was engaged in the clothing business. He gave two bills of sale one to Ann Leonard, his mother-in-law, for $3,100, the other to Patrick Cosgrove for $4,200. These bills were infiled 1885. In 1888 James McCollough's sons Joseph and Frank McCollough took over the business of James McCollough. Ann Leonard assigned bill of sale to Joseph McCollough. Shortly before the assignment of Frank McCollough & Co., Joseph McCollough reassigned the Ann Leonard bill of sale to Thomas McCollough the administrator of her estate. Frank McCollough and his mother Celia McCollough obtained letters of administration of Patrick Cosgrove estate.

The petitioner prays the court to direct payment of the Cosgrove bill of sale out of the funds of Frank McCullough & Co. estate. Mr. R. C. Skinner for the Cosgrove estate, Mr. John L. Carlton for Leonard estate, and Messrs C. A. Stockton and W. W. Allen for creditors.

His honor delivered judgment, dismissing the petitioner which in effect sets aside the bills of sale.

SO THEY WILL.—According to the Globe and Telegraph the Union lacrosse club of this city are arranging games with the Wanderers of Halifax for the Nelson trophy. As the provincial series for this trophy have just begun, the Y. M. C. A.'s and the Beavers may still have something to say as to the championship.

DELEGATES FOR THE MARITIME CONVENTION.—The Young Men's Christian Association last evening elected the following delegates to the Y. M. C. A. Maritime Convention to be held at Truro in August:—Herbert Tilley, W. C. Cross, G. N. Hevenor, Geo. Jenkins, J. M. Laurence, Frank White, D. Miller, C. E. Macmichael, S. L. Gorbell, Fred McAndrews, George Younger, D. Hunt, H. P. Kerr, J. H. Northrup, H. A. McKeown, A. Gilmour and Ernest Turnbull. In addition to these, W. S. Morrison, W. F. Fisher, A. W. McLeod and J. E. Irving are delegates ex-officio.

THE THUMB NEARLY SEVERED.—A little son of Mr. Archibald Sinclair, Freddie, met with a serious and very painful accident while up the river a few days ago. A companion in some unfortunate manner struck him on the hand with an axe. The blade cut a fearful gash almost severing the thumb, and though it was necessary to bring him to the city to have his injuries attended to, the brave little fellow bore up nobly against the pain and loss of blood. Dr. Holden who put a number of stitches in the hand, thought at first that amputation would be necessary, and later there were some fears of lockjaw entertained. These, however, have been obviated, and the injuries are rapidly improving.

PASSENGERS, going across the bay by the steamer Monticello can procure breakfast on board.

THE CHIEF'S NEW RULES.

Some of the New Regulations the Chief would Impose on the Men Under his Command.

The police committee held a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the proposed regulations for the government of the force. The document is voluminous and besides the actual rules contains a catechism and copious extracts from the various acts especially referring to the police force. In all, there are about fifty pages of closely written foolscap paper. By far the larger number of rules apply to patrolmen. One page is devoted to the duties of sergeants and another to detectives' duty. The captains also come in for a page of instructions. No regulations are presented for the government of the chief. The well known modesty of that gentleman no doubt prevented him fixing his duties. Perhaps, however, the committee may make a few regulations for his guidance and expunge some of those he would inflict on the men. This is how the chief starts out:—

Prompt obedience to orders and strict conformity to very rule will be vigorously exacted from each officer.

This is good. It is to be hoped the chief will see that it is enforced, as its enforcement would greatly benefit the force. Indeed, it might be taken to heart by the chief himself who would, undoubtedly, be greatly benefitted thereby.

Without attempting to follow the rules numerically it might be well in the present interesting state of affairs in the police department to read Rule 11.

Officers must be respectful and obedient to their superior officers and properly salute them; and it is especially enjoined upon the superior officers to respect the men under their command and to treat them with courtesy and consideration. No profane or other improper language will be tolerated.

It is said that swearing at officers is now quite a pastime on the part of at least one or two of those in command. Not only do those persons sometimes use profane language but the names they call their subordinates are not usually printed in newspapers or spoken in decent society.

The chief, to judge from rule 61, which is in his own handwriting and evidently stuck in after the type writer had finished is too refreshing a piece of assurance to be allowed to pass unnoticed:

Police officers are forbidden publishing information or giving publicity to their individual opinions relative to duties performed by them or in any manner touching any question that may at the time be under official investigation.

The chief would close the mouths of all his men in order that he, his captains or his sergeants might commit whatever outrage they chose on members of the force. There is no necessity for such a rule and there is not the slightest doubt that should the committee allow it to remain it will prove a stumbling block to many a decent officer. What the chief desires in this rule is to prevent the newspapers getting hold of information about the queer doings of the department. The chief might as well save his ink. He may make as many rules as he pleases with the object of making the police force a secret institution but he can't do it, save in one way, and that is by securing the affections of his men. At the present time about one half the force regard the chief, and not without some show of reason, as their natural enemy. While this state of affairs continues the chief may as well hide his head in the sand after the manner of the ostrich as to imagine that he is secure from publicity

Another rule sets forth the causes of dismissal from the force. These causes are numerous and include insubordination and incivility. As suggested in the GAZETTE some time ago, lying seems to be a virtue rather than a fault in a policeman as the chief does not make lying a mortal sin under his code. This is fortunate for some members of the force as they would soon cease to wear the coat if there were dismissals for mendacity.

Passing from the rules to the catechism some very strange things are found. It is a sort of police primer and is arranged in the question and answer style and makes most amusing reading, and the author, W. Walker Clark, as claimed by the outside page of the essay ought to have it published and distributed among citizens generally. Very few persons have as yet had the privilege of gazing upon the chief's exhaustive work, but all who have seen it pronounce it immense. The first question closely follows the Presbyterian catechism the inqury being "What is a policeman?"

Most people would find this question very difficult to answer if they accepted W. Walker Clark's standard. He might be everything but a man and he certainly would not, could not be that. This is how the chief answers the difficult query. "A person duly appointed and sworn to enforce the criminal laws and ordinances of the city." This is very good and the public ought to thank Mr. Clark for his definition. It is good, very good.

Here is another poser and the chief's answer along with it:—

What relation does a policeman bear to the community at large?

"He is a servant of the people from whom emenates the power that creates him. Every person should receive at his hands protection and kind treatment."

This could not be more nicely put, and just here it might not be out of place to remind the chief that he is as much a servant of the people as any of his men. He may wear all the military braid and gold lace he pleases; throw out his chest another half foot and bend his head back until he tickles his back bone with the button on his cap but he still remains a servant of the people.

It may be very humiliating for so great and mighty a personage (in his own mind) to admit this, but it is true, and the pity is that his services are not better rendered; if they were they would be more appreciated.

Here is another good one when the selections of the chief for promotion are considered:—

How may a policeman hope to rise to the higher grades of the force?

By activity, intelligence and good conduct.

But the richest and best of all is the one that follows:

How should a policeman act to his relieving officer?

He should be on the most friendly terms with him, and should be careful to communicate to him everything he knows relating to suspected persons or things on that beat, that both may act in concert for the public good.

One-third of the men on the force at present refuse to recognize each other. In fact some of the appointees of Chief Clark have not remained on the force long enough for the older men to form their acquaintance. Still it is a nice rule to read though and suggests good fellowship if nothing else.

It would be difficult to say how Sergeant Wilson of the mayor's office got on the soft side of the chief, but that he has is evident, as a whole rule has been made for his especial benefit. No policeman or sergeant can carry a can or umbrella, but the genial Samuel can have both if he wants to. What a glorious privilege, surely.

The Simonds' Street Sunday School.

A few years ago St. Andrew's Presbyterian church established a mission Sunday school in the Orange Hall building on Simonds' street, which has been very successful. A great many children have been induced to attend it who were not in the habit of going to any Sunday school before, and it has been a boon to the Presbyterian children of the neighborhood who formerly had to walk all the way to the large city churches to attend Sunday school.

The Simonds' street Sunday school is before long to have a room of its own to meet in for St. David's church has purchased for it the historic old Hazen house on the corner of Simonds and Brook street and the lot upon which it stands, and Mr. James Mills has already commenced the work of raising the building preparatory to remodelling it and fitting it up for the purposes for which it is intended. The building is about 40 feet square and the lot upon which it stands is much larger. The Sunday school room will probably be in the upper flat, while the middle flat will be finished as a dwelling and the ground floor as a shop.

The house is one of the oldest in the North end, but as it was constructed of the best of material, part of the frame being oak and the clapboards of clear pine running nearly the whole length of a side, it is in a fine state of preservation and can be easily repaired so as to make a good substantial building. The situation is an excellent one.

Police Court.

Wm. Higgin, drunk on North street; also throwing stones in view of the police, and violently resisting Sergt. Hipwell was fined $24.

Geo. Forbes, arrested for drunkenness was examined by Police Surgeon Berryman and ordered to the hospital.

Allophus Feeny and Frederick Lyons, lodgers are still at the station.

Robert Moore was charged by his brother-in-law with using abusive language. Several women were brought into the case and as the matter was a family affair, the magistrate only fined Moore $4. He promised him the full penalty the next time he appeared.

Margaret Christian drunk on Rockland road was fined $8.

A number of unlicensed cart drivers were before the court. They were ordered to get out licenses immediately.

Opera and Theatre.

The opera last evening, Mikado, drew only a fair house, but the merits of the piece warranted a much larger attendance. The Mikado himself was good, particularly in his solos; while Ko-ko, in the person of Mr. Leonard was a thorough executioner, and strongly attached to his profession. The three little maids from school, Miss Adelaide Randall, Miss Clara Randall, and Miss Bebe Vining, were a highly coquettish trio. Miss Vining was particularly happy in the role and the part of Yum Yum could not have been taken to greater advantage than it was by Miss Randall.

Mikado, will be repeated this evening while the opera, Billee Taylor is now in preparation.

Friday Half Holiday.

The hardware merchants have decided to give their clerks a half holiday on Friday, and have signed the following agreement:—

We, the undersigned hardware and iron merchants of the city of St. John, do hereby agree to close our respective places of business in the afternoon of each Friday from and including the 17th of July up to and including Friday, 4th September, provided all the trade agree and sign the document.

THE AMHERST EXCURSION.—This morning a special car was attached to the regular train for Amherst for the accommodation of the St. Philips M. E. church excursionists. The number of colored people composing the party numbered about a hundred and they were in the best possible spirits. They return to St. John to morrow morning.

Last Appearance of Mr. Barnes of New York.

This clever gentleman will bid adieu to our theatre goers with the performance at the Institute to-night, and we advise all who have not as yet witnessed the unusually clever dramatization to do so. It is a dramatic treat and one that we are not in the habit of witnessing. The entire company are faultless in their respective roles, the drama is in itself a beautiful combination of light and shade, it is very well mounted, and the costuming is decidedly picturesque and interesting. It is with regret we part with such a grand performance, but the desire of several persons who had not seen "Aunt Jack" on her short visit have requested the management to repeat one performance of this extremely funny comedy, and the management desirous of obliging the public have induced that jolly lady to try her breach of promise case once more. The cast will be the same as before with possibly the exception of the jury, as a number of well-known citizens, who are experts in such cases, have consented to go on the jury and give the case a good fair trial; they have of course been selected for their voices as well as legal knowledge and will join heartily in that festive song—"Ask a Policeman."

Of Personal Interest.

Mr. W. B. Brown, one of the C. P. R. train despatchers in this city, left yesterday for Bathurst, near where he will enjoy a couple of weeks salmon fishing.
