DISORDERS IN IRELAND.

CONFLICT BETWEEN ORANGEMEN AND NATIONALISTS.

Two Constables Severely Hurt—Meetings at Boyle and Loughrea—Priestly Denunciation of the Government.

DUBLIN, Jan. 21.—There was a large gathering of orangemen of Fermanagh county at Enniskillen yesterday, and a meeting of the Irish national league was held at the same time and place. The result was a riot. The police made a charge upon the factions while the fight was in progress, and were attacked by the rioters with stones and other missiles. Two of the constables were severely injured. Many arrests were made.

A large meeting of nationalists was held at Boyle, but there was no disturbance, as the orangemen refrained from attending the meeting.

LOUGHREA, Jan. 21.—Notwithstanding the prohibition by the government and the presence of 200 police, a meeting of the nationalists was held yesterday in the yard of the catholic chapel. Three priests denounced the action of the government in suppressing the meetings. They advised the hearers to join the Irish league.

The orangemen under the head of Grand Master Col. Stuart Knox are making preparations to oppose a meeting of nationalists announced to be held at Dungannon. Special trains have been engaged to convey the members of various orange societies to that place.

A BROKEN SHAFT.

Cause of the Germanic's Delay—A Letter From a Passenger.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A son of the archbishop of York, on board the disabled Germanic, writes his father under date of Jan. 8, that after the breaking of the shaft the captain called a meeting of passengers, who agreed to turn back. "With very favorable weather we might have reached Queenstown in ten days. With bad weather it might require twenty days. The passengers are very cheerful, although some say they will lose much money by the delay."

Is Hanging Painful?—What a Physician Thinks.

From the New York Graphic.

"I have made the subject of hanging a close study," observed a physician who has made the subject of nervous diseases a specialty to a Graphic reporter. "It has always borne the greatest fascination for me. When I was a youngster I was choked by an older schoolmate until I lost all consciousness and experienced the various sensations of strangulation. There was no pain whatever. I felt as if I were chloroformed, without even the characteristic feelings which always accompany the first application of the anæsthetic. I sank into a dreamless sleep, from which I waked weak and dizzy, but otherwise none the worse for the experience."

"Then you think hanging is painless?"

"By no means. It is a clumsy and awkward way of producing a fracture of the spinal column. Suppose that the neck is not broken instantly. What horrible agony the poor wretch must suffer by being suspended by his torn and wrenched cords. Tear a man's arm out of its socket and hang him up by it. The agony must be fearful. Think of that man who was hanged in Newark a short time ago. After the fall he reached his pinioned arms up to the cord he was hanging on and tried to catch it three times. Will mortal man tell me what he suffered before a merciful strangulation came to his relief? There are other means of killing more generous if as more cleanly as hanging, and it remains for an enlightened country to adopt them. Shortly after the Newark slaughter, a man in Georgia, with his throat cut from ear to ear, was carried to the gallows and hanged. Was that civilized?

Mr. Emerson and the Reporter.

From the Boston Traveler.

Mr. Emerson was to read a paper before a select company. When the philosopher mounted the platform the reporters were all ready at the tables below to catch every word. Mr. Emerson espied them and presented his paper with a request that no report should be made of his essay. Every reporter save one put away his paper and pencils. The one exception fell to work with apparently more energy than if the sage had not asked him to desist. Mr. Emerson glanced inquiringly at him several times, and at length paused in his discourse and said: "In spite of my request not to be reported, I observe one of the gentlemen at the press table is making copious notes of my paper." Instantly every eye was turned upon the offending scribe. Rising from his seat and looking at Mr. Emerson, he replied: "No, Mr. Emerson, I was not doing anything of the kind. I was busy writing on a private work of my own." He was a writer of serial stories as well as newsgatherer for the daily press.

The Attachment.

"I would like to see how you look without bangs," said an old duffer to a young lady, attempting to push the hair from her forehead."

"Well, just wait a minute until I get a razor," she returned. "I would like to see how you look without a moustache."

"The reason I first cultivated a moustache," he said, with an impudent look into her face, "was to prevent the ladies from kissing me. So if you find it in the way, why cut it off."

"It is not the moustache I object to so much, but the attachment I find in the way," eyeing him suggestively from head to foot. He took the hint and relieved her of his presence.

The Great Rule of Conduct.

Lord Erskine was one of the most distinguished advocates and counselors of the English bar, a man of sterling independence, of true principle and scrupulous adherence to truth; one who, through character and talents, rose to rank, influence and success in life. He has left us one of his rules of conduct, or rather the great rule of conduct which he followed, and which is worthy of adoption by every young man.

"It was," he says, "a first command and counsel of my earliest youth always to do what my conscience told me was a duty, and to leave the consequences to God. I shall carry with me the memory, and I trust the practice of this parental lesson to the grave. I have hitherto followed it, and I have no reason to complain that my obedience to it has been a temporal sacrifice. On the contrary, I have found it the road to prosperity and wealth, and I shall point out the same point to my children for their pursuit."

There can be no doubt that this is the only safe rule of conduct, for the life that now is, as well as for that which is to come; for godliness is alike profitable for both, giving peace of conscience and inward strength, as well as securing the respect and confidence of men. Let the conscience be enlightened by the word of God, and then let its dictates, in all circumstances, be faithfully followed, and life will be prospered and eternity blest.

It was one of the resolutions of President Edwards "never to do anything but what I believe to be my duty, and do it willingly and sheerfully, as unto the Lord and not to man." The noble saying of Mary Lyon was, "I have only one fear, and that is that I may not know and do my duty." So also Cecil well says, "Duties are ours; events are God's." If we are but faithful to duty. His blessing will ever attend us—"the blessing that maketh rich and addeth no sorrow therewith;" blessing for both time and etarnity.

FROM ALL OVER.

The total number of actions brought in the high court of justice in England last year was 100,000, one-third commenced in the district registries and two-thirds in London.

Now that Paris possesses a statue of Alexander Dumas, it has naturally occurred that Honore de Balzac ought to be commemorated in the same way. A statue of Beranger has already been begun, and is to be unveiled in July.

No one ever attributed what O'Connell styled the scoundrel virtue of consistency to Lord Lyndhurst until the appearance of Sir Theodore Martin's life. He was regarded through all his life as a brilliant free lance, and would have disclaimed any other title.

The liberal league of Linesville, Pa., announcing its celebration, on the 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th inst., of the 148th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine, offers $75 to any christian "of good moral character" who will attend the sessions and affirm the cardinal points of orthodox faith.

What Gen. Neal Dow recently noticed in Illinois, a Vermont clergyman, who writes to the Burlington Free Press, saw also in Iowa, namely, small and cheap houses and mere apologies for barns. The farmers are sober and industrious, but the wives and sons and daughters are not well clad, and the "homes" are cheerless. They are "renters."

Governor General Anoutchire, of eastern Siberia is of the knout knouty. His name is synonymous in Russia with the utmost harshness. Last month he bitterly upbraided one Neoustroiff, a school teacher, alleged to have disseminated seditious doctrines, and his exasperated victim struck him. Anoutchire, who may be fittingly described as a Nihilist manufacturer, had him shot in twenty-four hours.

According to the returns of vital statistics for 1882 recently published, France is rapidly reaching the condition in which the births are only just sufficient to supply the waste caused by death. In 1882, as compared with 1881, there were 10,000 more deaths and 1500 fewer marriages Sixty years ago, under the restoration, France would have doubled its population in 112 years; at the present rate the doubling would occupy 267 years, but for the steady immigration of an enormous body of foreigners into the country every year.

Tso Tsung Tang, the Chinese imperial commissioner, was born in 1812, of poor parents, in the province of Honan, renowned in Chinese annals for brave men and able ministers. He is short of stature, and without any striking feature to denote his activity of mind. While ruling in Kansuh his favorite residence was in the castle; which he had built a mile outside the walls of Suchow. As viceroy of the Two Kiang, he has attracted into his service many foreigners, principally Germans, and has already formed the nucleus of a fleet. His vigor is still fresh at 71.

Last autumn, among the guests at a shooting lodge in Scotland, was a young and beautiful Australian lady, with the additional attraction of $15,000 a year of her own. She moved about a good deal with the shooting parties, and in doing so had many opportunities of observing a rather good-looking young gamekeeper. Observation begat fancy, and fancy love. We are told if there is one thing which distinguishes Australians from Americans and English it is decision of character and promptness of action. So, when she realized her feelings, she at once took quick action proposed, was accepted, and started in a week for Australia.

There is still much room for geological investigation in Iceland; a large part of the island is, scientifically speaking, unexplored, and in spite of the researches of the late Dr. Hjaltalin, and the various foreign geologists who have from time to time visited Iceland, its mineral resources are but little known and very partially developed. The sulphur deposits have of late years been exploited by enterprising Englishmen, and are now being worked with every prospect of success by an English company. But besides sulphur the island contains other valuable minerals, such as Iceland spar, coal, lignite, borax and copper, none of which is at present worked to any practical extent.

Unappreciated Genius.

A young lady up town painted a picture of a Jersey cow, that she thought a wonderful work of art, and so did the family. After the household had admired it to their heart's content, the fair artist carried her sketch into the kitchen to get the opinion of Aunt Dinah. "Law! missus," was the delighted response, "it is booful, I 'cla.' What is it—a sheep?" The young lady has now turned her attion to darning stockings.

Cruelty to Animals.

Lending a willing horse to two women to go driving.

Allowing a Hamilton girl to step on an elephant's toes.

Condemning a hen to have its head chopped off by a woman.

Compelling a dog to stay in the room while you practice on the flute.

Presenting a pug dog to a London belle. She will be sure to kiss it.

Taking your sweetheart and her mother out riding when you have but one horse. Leave one of them at home.

Teaching a parrot to say unpleasant truths to your neighbor and then leaving it where he can get hold of it.

Causing a gentleman cow to over-exert himself in hot weather by passing through a pasture with a red garment on.

Making a sensitive bull-dog feel bad by ignoring his presence and trying to pass him after he has growled and shown his teeth

Jumping on a table and yelling like a wild Indian when a mouse appears. The poor little animals are often frightened into fits.

—Mr. Henry Marshall, reeve of Dunn, writes: "Some time ago I got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery from Mr. Harrison, and I consider it the very best medicine extant for dyspepsia." This medicine is making marvellous cures in liver complaint, dyspepsia, etc., in purifying the blood and restoring manhood to full vigor.

Take a Smile.

The Sadd mission has started a branch in Jeffersonville. It ought to cheer up.

No matter how hard the times are the scavenger's business is always "picking up."

A lady recently sat down on the slippery pavement of a Minnesota town with a "dull, sickening thud." It has struck the Northwest, has it?

The pen may be mightier than the sword, but if you get a hair in it you begin to believe that it may sometimes outlive its usefulness.

This is the best country in the world for a poor man. Except when is married he has a right to do as he pleases with what he makes.

"Killed at a Spelling Bee" is the heading of a sensational item going the rounds. People will persist in wrestling with words that are too hard for them.

A Chicago woman lawyer doesn't like to be called a female attorney. But she probably has no objection to either the fee or the male tendered separately.

The difference between a patent nontipovertable spittoon and an editorial is said to be in the fact that the one will right itself while the other won't.

You've no idea what a horror it gives a man to steal up behind a girl who is scribbling, look over her shoulder, and find that she's idly writing your name with a 'Mrs. prefixed.

"You wife," say the Christian Union, "is entitled to her share of your income.' Oh, yes, we all know that, but after she takes out her share we have to walk home unless we have credit with the street-car driver.

A New York girl writes to an editor: "How can I break a young man of the habit of saying 'oncet' for once; 'them' things' for those things, and 'I seen' for I saw?" If he was born and brought up in in New York the only way that we can suggest is to cut his head off.

Beats Advertising.

"John," said a druggist to his clerk, "how is your stock of lint for bandages?" "Got plenty," said John. "And arnica, are we well supplied with that?" "Yes sir, a fresh barrel just arrived this morning." "Our stock of salves, lotions and broken bone remedies of all sorts is complete, is it?" "Yes sir; we've got enough of everything." "Very well, then," said the proprietor, glancing at the sky through the front window, "it looks as though we might have a cold, freezing night, and you had better go out and wash down the steps."

—Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public, and increased from year to year their consumption, which, whilst possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as The Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine, combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses, frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts, creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine; sold by all druggists. 6-2-4

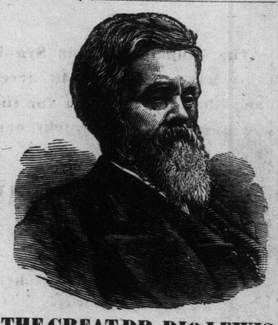
BUSINESS TRAINING!

DAYS' BUSINESS COLLEGE

All who require business training are requested to make special inquiries as to the high reputation the Principal of this College has established, and still maintains by the thoroughness of his work, and to take notice that Mr. J. E. D-A-Y is not associated with any college wherein the name of any principal or teacher has the slightest resemblance, either in spelling or sound, to that of Day. Mr. J. E. Day spells his name D-A-Y—good standard Saxon—and not O-D-A-E, or O-D-E-A, or O-D-A-Y, or O-D-E-E.

For terms address JAMES E. DAY, Accountant. College Rooms—Opposite Royal Opera House site, Toronto.



THE GREAT DR. DIO LEWIS

His Outspoken Opinion.

The very marked testimonials from College Professors, respectable Physicians, and other gentlemen of intelligence and character to the value of Warner's SAFE Cure, published in the editorial columns of our best newspapers, have greatly surprised me. Many of these gentlemen I knew, and reading their testimony I was impelled to purchase some bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure and analyze it. Besides, I took some, swallowing three times the prescribed quantity. I am satisfied the medicine is not injurious, and will frankly add that if I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble I should use this preparation. The truth is, the medical profession stands dazed and helpless in the presence of more than one kidney malady, while the testimony of hundreds of intelligent and very reputable gentlemen hardly leaves room to doubt that Mr. H. H. Warner has fallen upon one of those happy discoveries which occasionally bring help to suffering humanity.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

ALBION HOTEL—GREAT ALTERATIONS have taken place at this hotel for the reception of travelers and agricultural people in general. It has long been felt that there was not sufficient room to accommodate the increasing trade of the hotel, and to meet this demand the proprietor has, at an expense of over $18,000, purchased the late premises occupied by the St. Lawrence coffee house association adjoining the Albion, and has now 125 bedrooms, accommodation for 200 guests. The house has been re-modelled and re-furnished throughout at an outlay of $5000—gas in every room, new dining-room 40x60, capable of seating 200 people at one time. The house is the best $1 house in the Dominion.

ROSSIN HOUSE—THE ROSSIN IS THE largest hotel in Canada, only two blocks from Union station, corner King and York streets, finest situation in Toronto. Its thoroughly first class appointments, large corridors, lofty ceilings, spacious, clean and well ventilated rooms, (the whole house having been painted, frescoed and decorated this spring), detached and en suite, polite and attentive employes in every apartment, together with unexcelled cuisine, make it specially attractive to the traveling public. Elevator running day and night. Hot and cold baths on each floor. Electric bells in rooms. Fire escape in each bed room. Prices graduated.

BAY HORSE HOTEL, YONGE STREET—I have taken possession of this well-known hostlery, and will conduct it on first-class principles. Good table, well-stocked bar, and ample stabling. The house will be the best $1 per day hotel in the city. ALEX. GIBB, Proprietor.

THE ÆTNA LIFE'S

BUSINESS IN 1883.

The Ætna Life Insurance Company, Morgan G. Bulkeley, president, closes its business for the past year with very satisfactory results. It has written new insurance amounting to over $10,000,000—a gain over the previous year. The company commences the new year with an increased business; increased assets; increased surplus; increased receipts; increased insurance, and increased dividends to its insured. It has paid during the year 1883 for claims by death and for matured endowments $1,960,421.70, divided among the states as follows:

EPPS' COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold in packets and tins only (½lb. and 1lb.) by Grocers labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

Housekeepers

Will find it to their interest to inspect our Magnificent Stock of Quilts, Sheetings, Pillow Cottons, Table Linens, Table Napkins, Towels, &c., which we are offering to the public in any lengths or quantities they may require, at close wholesale prices.

We request the large number of Housekeepers and others furnishing to inspect our stock and compare our prices, and if they are not lower than those of any other House in the city don't buy. Note this --- all Street Cars pass our store. Ask the conductor to let you off at
