"EVERYWOMAN;" CURTAI AT 8.15 SHARP

The curtain will go up on the great Savage production "Everywoman" at the Imperial this evening at 8.15 sharp. However, there will be eight minutes of music previous to the commencement of the play, consisting of a patriotic medley and the overture incidental to the production. These numbers will be well worth hearing and patrons should be in their chairs in time for them. To delay arriving at the theatre after 8.15 will cause confusion and have the effect of spoiling the delightful prologue uttered by the principal character, "Nobody." There are still tickets for the balcony and for Thursday matinee. No more reservations made by telephone. It is not fair to the waiting list. The matinee prices are 50c., 75c., $1. Matinee starts 2.15 sharp.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

The Opera House vaudeville programme of this week is the talk of the town—every act is a good one, and how everybody does laugh at that stout lady, who is a natural comedienne and knows just how to make everybody good natured. Tonight is the last showing of this week's chapter of Gloria's Romance, with Billie Burke—a particularly dramatic chapter it is, too with a big fight in an East Side dance hall, and some more vivid scenes in the night police court.

Tomorrow and Friday, the thirteenth chapter of "The Voice on the Wire" in conjunction with the regular vaudeville programme.

THE GEM TONIGHT

Alice Brady does some of the very best work of her remarkably successful career in "The Dancer's Peril," a World Film photoplay which is at the Gem for tonight, Thursday and Friday. Besides a gripping story, the photograph is wonderful in its double exposure features. There are also two promising vaudeville acts.

Washington, Aug. 29—Americans returning from Canada may bring free of duty $100 worth of canned goods and other foodstuffs under a ruling announced today by the treasury department. BROOKVILLE COURT.

Before Stipendiary Magistrate Adams in the Brookville police court yesterday three cases of allowing cattle to run at large over the road were heard. The accused were G. Blacklock of Red Head, St. Claire McKeil of Coldbrook and Mrs. Lydon of the Loch Lomond road. These are the first cases of the kind this year, so the magistrate struck a fine and allowed it to stand. J. E. Beyea was brought up for allowing his man to run his car into a flock of sheep, not giving the owners, Kane & MacDonald, time to get them out of the way. He was warned, as the owners did not wish to press the matter.

BORDEN'S OFFER TO RESIGN WAS CONDITIONAL

Caucus Did Not Accept It—"As Little of Union Element As Possible In Reconstructed Government"

Ottawa, Aug. 29—A Conservative caucus began at 10.30 a.m., and at one o'clock was still in session, behind closed doors. Sir Robert Borden offered his resignation if it was regarded as necessary for the formation of a union government.

The decision of the caucus was that the best course would be to have as little of the union element as possible in the re-constructed government.

The attitude of the majority of the caucus was that the coming election should be on straight party lines.

The offer of Sir Robert Borden to resign was not accepted.

Ottawa, Aug. 28—Under the closure speakers were allowed only twenty minutes each in discussing the C. N. R. bill in the House of Commons last night. Among the speakers were Pius Michaud and O. Turgeon of New Brunswick, both in opposition to the bill.

CASUALTY LIST VERY HEAVY BUT DEATHS FEW

Ottawa, Aug. 29—Extremely heavy casualty lists continue to pour in by cable to the records office. Those announced from Saturday night to noon today numbered approximately 2,700. It is understood the roll will be heavy for some days as a result of the prolonged severe fighting at Lens. That the percentage of fatalities is light is illustrated by today's figures, the noon list of 886 containing only fourteen fatalities.

FAMOUS TIGER SLUGGER HONORED

Detroit, Aug. 28—Detroit bunched hits with Jamieson's costly error in the fifth inning yesterday, and won from the Athletics four to two. In honor of the great slugger, the day was called the Sam Crawford Day and the Detroit Club's share of his proceeds of the game, which amounted to $1,200, were donated to him. In his testimonial game Sam failed to get a safe hit but every time he came to bat he was given a great ovation and one of his drives nearly became a home run. It was pulled down by a grand catch, but if it had got away it would have easily been a homer. He had two fielding chances and accepted both. Crawford expects if he gets through with major league ball this year to spend the remainder of his days in California. He has saved his earnings and it is estimated that he has little less than $100,000 invested wisely.

Still, Sam need not be mournful. His end of the gate receipts was within a few dollars of $1,200. In addition, he received from Detroit fans a diamond ring that cost $600, with discounts on the retail price. Also, Flint fans, represented by George H. Maines, as their spokesman, gave Sam a solid gold cased watch. So Samuel wasn't entirely penniless when he left the ward. Alderman Charles W. uBrton presented the ring on behalf of his committee.

The Wahoo man hasn't a lot to worry him. Had the weather conditions been better he would have profited more. But the extreme cold, and the accompanying threats of rain, held the attendance down to 6,915 spectators. That was not so good as Washington did here a week previously with no special interest attached to the game. Still, $2,000 worth of money and jewelry is not exactly a hard dose to swallow

FELL TO HIS DEATH BEFORE AVENGERS

Quatronnee Had Gunmen "Covered" in Saloon When He Stumbled Over a Chair

Customer Killed in Feud—Three Italians, After Slaying New York Proprietor, Fired Into Crowd and Escaped Over Roof

Three armed Italians bent on settling a feud with Michael Quatronne entered the back room of his saloon at 87 Mulberry street, New York, on Sunday, where ten men were playing cards, and began to shoot into the throng after Quatronne fell over a chair while he was backing the men out of the room at the point of his pistol. As a result of the shooting Quatronne and a friend died in the Hudson street hospital, another man is seriously wounded and may die, while a fourth has minor wounds. The three gun men escaped by fleeing over the roofs.

Two years ago an Italian was killed in the saloon of Quatronne in a fight with a man who had the reputation of being a supporter of Quatronne in his work as a "padrone" over the laborers in the district, and many threats have been made against the life of Quatronne. As a result of the feud and the menace to his life Quatronne became an expert in the use of the pistol, and it was said among the gunmen of the lower east side that no other man in the district could draw a gun from his pocket so quickly as the saloon keeper. Quatronne it was said, could pick one card from a handful, throw it toward the table and with the same hand draw a pistol and hit a mark upon the wall before the card fell on the table.

Since the killing in his saloon Quatronne always sat at his card table with his face toward the door and his hand of cards never occupied his full attention. Alarms were fixed on the door and no man could approach without giving some signal unconsciously. Quatronne was taking a card from his hand on Sunday to trump the trick of Giacoma Scabo, a one-armed organ grinder, in a game known among the Italians as "sweeps" when he heard a shuffle of footsteps near the door and a muttered instruction:—"Be sure that Quatronne doesn't get his gun out first."

Quatronne stood up immediately and got his gun ready to put the men out of the room as they came in ready to shoot. He was backing them slowly out of the room, so that they would have no opportunity to use their guns, when he tripped over a chair and fell to the floor, exploding his revolver. Before he could rise to his feet or roll over into a position to shoot the men opened fire. The first bullet struck Quatronne near the heart, but the men apparently were not satisfied with their work, for they swept the room with their fire. Quatronne's patrons crawled under the tables and tried to hide behind the counters in the small room, but Frank Cascagono of Elizabethport, N. J., was so badly wounded that he died an hour later in the Hudson Hospital. Antonio Marone, a bartender, tried to duck behind the bar, but one of the bullets struck him in the leg and breast, and he was taken to the hospital in serious condition. Scabon, the one-armed organ grinder, also received a flesh wound in the back.

After the men had emptied their pistols they darted up a stairway and made their escape over the roofs of adjoining buildings. It was known throughout the district that threats had been made against the life of Quatronne, and the sound of the shooting brought the crowds walking along Mulberry street around the saloon. Women begged the police to find out whether their husbands were among the dead, and to add to the confusion an Italian wedding party next door to the saloon suddenly discovered the shooting was not a serenade, and began to flee through the streets, believing some jealous admirer was after revenge.

A cordon of police was thrown around the block to prevent the escape of the gangsters, as detectives were unable to find a witness who had seen them leave the building. A search of all the roofs and other buildings in the block failed to yield any trace of the men. Three men who had been in the room with Quatronne were held as material witnesses, but they were unable to give an accurate description of the gangsters.

About an hour before the shooting in Quatronne's, Petrino Fabbi, a laborer of Valhalla, N. Y., was attacked by two men at 128 Mulberry street. He died of knife wounds in St. Vincent's Hospital without regaining consciousness. The men escaped, and the police are now trying to find out whether Fabbi had any connection in the feuds of Quatronne or had acted as his agent in filling contracts on the aqueduct work.

BERLIN DOES NOT WANT ARGENTINA AS ENEMY

Buenos Aires, Aug. 29—A favorable reply by the German government to Argentina concerning the submarine campaign relieved a tense and critical situation. The German reply which la Epoca says is a diplomatic triumph acquiesces in the demands of Argentina for the safety of Argentine ships and indemnification for the torpedoing of the steamer Toro "in order to maintain friendly relations."

The note also concedes "freedom of the seas to vessels under the Argentine flag carrying food." Germany's note probably averted the possibility of Argentine severing diplomatic relations.

Rev. A. E. Wheeler, formerly of Hebron, N. S., is spending a few weeks' vacation on his old field at Kingston and Melvern. On September 16 Mr. Wheeler will begin his new pastorate at Summerside, P.E.I. Dr. Spidle has been pulpit supply there during the summer.

During the two years of the pastorate of Rev. E. M. A. Bleakney at Stoneham, Mass., 154 have been added to the membership of the church, and the pastor's salary has twice been increased. The brotherhood of about 100 men is a great force for good in the church and community, and the Bleakney Bible Class for women is filling a large place. Emphasis has been laid upon personal evangelistic work, and the results have been good. A missionary and five-year programme committee has formulated plans covering five years. All phases of religious work are being increasingly recognized. The church is looking forward to much needed enlargement of Bible school facilities. Pastor and Mrs. Bleakney have enjoyed a well-earned vacation in Wolfville, N. S.

Dr. E. D. Webber, formerly pastor at Wolfville, is now at the First church, Haverhill, Mass. Concerning the work of the church, we read in The Watchman-Examiner: "Four were baptized recently, making twenty-eight baptisms since January 1. New members have been received at every communion season since last September, the whole number being more than 100. Others are expected to unite with the church at the opening of the fall campaign. During July and August the church joins the Portland street church in union services, Mr. Burr, of the latter church, preaching during July, and Dr. Webber in August. Dr. and Mrs. Webber spent five weeks in a cottage on Clarke's Island, Maine."

VIEWS DIFFER WIDELY

May Have To Prolong Socialist And Labor Conference In London

London, Aug. 29—The inter-allied socialist and labor conference, which devoted itself yesterday largely to preliminaries, met today to consider the reports of two commissions, one appointed to deal with the general question of the international socialist conference at Stockholm, the other to consider and report on the drafts of peace terms submitted by the various socialist parties. The views of different elements were so widely divergent that it was considered unlikely that the commissions would have their reports ready, however, and when the delegates met this morning, an adjournment was taken until after noon to give the commissioners more time. The possibility of an extension of the conference for a day or more is considered.

At yesterday's sitting the Russian delegates, who at first were present merely as spectators, expressed willingness to take part in the conference, as it is merely "consultative," and therefore binds no party.

IS WOUNDED; NOT DEAD

A paragraph recently published mistakenly stated that Lieut. Roland Smith, son of R. Morton Smith, had met death in the war. It is a fact that this officer is in the casualty list, but only as wounded. Particulars as to the nature of his injury are being awaited.
