CANADA is all agog again. The proceedings of last year were regarded in a threefold light by the respective parties who expressed themselves on them.

The pretended sympathy of a portion of the people of the United States served as a cloak to cover their rankling feelings towards Great Britain, which altho' their Government may also be subject to, it dare not openly express, but which was plainly enough evinced by the proceedings at public meetings, the shelter of canadian rebels and the incursions of yankee vagabonds into our colonies wherever they could find a place destitute of Britons to oppose them. The infamous Brussell's Gazette never hatched greater or more prepposterous lies than those which disgraced a number of the American prints during last winter's caprioles, and we challenge the whole whig batch of them to refer to one single, solitary paragraph editorially expressed in favour of Great Britain. Under such banners were one party drawn up, with the will but not the power of doing much; and to simplify our distinctions, we will do them the honour of placing under their flag the flagitious radicals of England and their noble fraternity the insurgents of Canada—the trin juncta in uno who have proved that combinations less powerful than the Roman fasces can effectuate nothing.

Next come the conciliators, who with the experience of all history before their eyes, seem to have entirely forgot Esope's story of the nurtured viper, and paraded a series of experiments before the would, to the disgrace of good government, and the sacrifice of confidence and security. Under such a system it is no to be wondered at that the most able and upright men sent to carry public measures into effect, should suffer and recoil from their unenviable station—Sir Francis Head, lord Gosford and even Sir John Colborne himself are notable instances of the fact; and the recent disgraceful conduct of the ministers towards the Earl of Durham, appears to be fraught with one consoling quality—that of hastening their retirement from committing any further injuries on their country.

The third class we have alluded to are those who are determined to maintain the integrity of the British Empire. In 1830 the Wellington ministry resigned office in the first session of William the fourth's first parliament; Earl Grey became premier and Baron Broughem Lord Chancellor. In 1831 Lord John Russell brought in the Reform bill, which accomplished a dissolution of Parliament, and a more complying House passed it to be rejected by the Lords, and passed by the Commons again, until Earl Grey's party attempted to resign in 1832, but were not reluctantly retained in power. In June of the same year the great Reform measure received the Royal assent and the House was dissolved in order to give the people an opportunity of returning the Reformed Parliament which met in January 1833. The acts of this anticipated panacea for all the accumulated political evils of Britain are too recent and notorious to require enumeration here.—Earl Grey gave way to Lord Melbourne in 1834, and in a few months afterwards king William turned out the Whigs, gave the Duke of Wellington the seals of State and made Lord Lyndhurst lord Chancellor, another change brought lord Melbourne and his adherents back to those offices which they have held so pertinaciously ever since.

The short period to which we have referred has witnessed greater changes in the moral, physical, and political condition of the British Empire than have occurred since the days of the Stuarts and William of Nassau. The East and the West Indies have each undergone a total change; and the policy adopted towards the north American colonies has been distinguished by a remarkable degree of ignorance of their true condition, and by a mistaken application of conciliatory means to flatter the Canadians into obedience and loyalty. We now see the result of mistaken mercy, and we trust the British people will see the folly of keeping people in power that are rendering the Empire contemptible in the eyes of foreign nations and insecure in its integrity. The appearance of the Earl of Durham in the House of Peers will be the signal for the Conservatives to come forward in their might and (we have no doubt) to take the reigns of government into their hands. Canada will become well known thro' the numerous men of rank and talent now able to give personal information on its true position, and the very correspondence of the Army will tend to spread correct reports on the subject. Hence we may look for a final adjustment of the affairs of Canada, and in the meantime we must rely on the energies of Sir John Colborne, the Army, and the loyalists to preserve the country for a "consumption so devoutly to be wished."

By the Proclamation of His Excellency Sir JOHN HARVEY, in the Royal Gazette of the 14th inst. we observe that it is His Excellency's intention to send all the disposable troops in the Province to Canada, and to raise a Volunteer Corps "for the service of this Province."

The detachment of the 11th Regt. under the command of Lieut. TOBIN left this place on Wednesday for St. John by the Steamer Nova-Scotia, to proceed thence with the rest of the Regt, to Canada. Dr Chermside was of the detachment. The best wishes of the community accompany this corps, and their excellent officers, and the deepest regret is felt for the unhappy occasion that has called them away. Mr. Tobin, during his short sojourn here, endeared himself to all parties by his gentlemanly demeanour and courteous manners,

The account of the three Seminole Indians who have travelled hither from Florida will be given in one next. The Communication came too late for this day's paper.

To Trustees, Directors of Turnpikes, and others, interested in the construction of Bridges.

WITTY'S NEW PATENT BRIDGE.

Mr. WITTY offers to the public his New Patent Bridge. Its superiority over others may justly entitle it to a national consideration.—For crossing deep rivers, rapids or falls, it is unequalled; since it can be placed across any of them, without Piers, and at a much less expense than on any other system at present used. It reaches from bank to bank in a right line, and cannot be affected in the least by freshets or ice, or change of temperature. At the same time, there is a durability and safety which cannot be warranted by any other bridge now in use.

Several of them have been erected in the State of Missouri, one of which upwards of 100 feet in length, and others are in progress

Advantages Offered.

1. Mr. WITTY offers to build Bridges over the most difficult Falls or Rapids, deep Rivers or Ravins.
2. His Bridges cannot be swept away by freshets or large masses of ice.
3. They are more safe, and possess a much greater durability than those in pleasant use.
4. The expence can be reduced, in many instances, to less than one half that of any other bridge whatever.
5. A Bridge upon Mr. WITTY's plan can be put across a river, in many cases, in a few days, and will not cost so much as the expense of the Piers, upon the old system of bridge-building.
6. This is now being extensively adopted in Europe, both for bridges and roofs, since it is equally calculated to support heavy roofs or warehouse floors, or for making wharves or jetties. In one instance, Mr. Witty, senr, has suspended an iron roof of upwards of twenty tons, with one beam; the span of the roof is fifty feet.

Any communication, post paid, can be addressed to Mr. R. J. L. WITTY, Civil Engineer, City of Lowell, and will meet with attention
