THIS CHINESE RAID NETS 34 GAMBLERS

Store at 129 West Queen Street Said to Have All the Appurtenances of Real Thing.

An interesting game of fan tan at the store at 129 West Queen-street was brought to an abrupt conclusion shortly after 8 oclock last night by the police.

As a result 34 Celestials were bundled into the patrol wagon. Two of their number, Chu Joe, and Chu Long, will be arraigned on a charge of keeping a common gaming house, while the others have to answer the charge of being frequenters.

The raid was unexpected. The Chinks just had time to scoop the money from the tables when the officers burst in.

On the ground floor 15 were absorbed in the game Chinamen so love, another five were found in the ante room where they had rushed. In the room above the shop another seven were playing and the remaining five were found secreted in different holes and corners.

Inspector Cuddy of No. 2 division, with Sergt. Charlton, plain clothes men, Montgomery, McKinney, and Constable Chapman of the morality department, made the sortie.

The shop was fitted up in regular gambling house style. The entrance to the back room of the shop was guarded by means of a big heavy door with iron bolts, which was just about to be closed when the inspector rushed thru. Electric bells were among the other safety appliances which were fitted up. In the basement the work had not quite been completed, loose wires were scattered around and the necessary tools required to attach them.

Decks of cards, lottery tickets, and numerous other articles were found and taken away.

On being searched at No. 2 station several were found to have their money secreted in their socks. Yuen, the proprietor of the shop, had $58.75, mostly in small silver, hidden on his person.

A few were admitted to bail in sureties of $100 each.
