Learn Dressmaking

Take a Personal Course at School or by Mail

Why spend months at a dressmaking shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and all the little things you already knew before you went there, where if you came here instead, we would show you how to cut out, put together, fit and finish everything from plainest shirt waist to most elaborate toilette in 2 weeks. We have taught thousands this method within past ten years, and will give any one $25 who can tell us of a place where there is more taught about cutting than by us either in Canada or the United States. Whether you be the wife or daughter of a farmer, laborer, mechanic, merchant or millionaire you should learn dressmaking. No accomplishment you can aquire will prove to you of such every day life long value as a practical knowledge of dressmaking, it is needed in every home, just as much as to know how to cook a good meal. A few days trial are given free of charge and if student finds it not all we recommend it to be, they have privelage to stop, there being no pay in advance.

Terms for complete course is only $10.00, includes a perfect fitting system given free. Next class will commence Feb. 13th, for full information see us at our residence on Saturday, Feb. 11th.

STAR PUCKSTERS BUMP AMERICAN HOUSE.

Between the hours of eleven and twelve at the auditorium last night there were big doings. All sporting fans made it a point to be on hand. It was whispered around there was to be a big game and as a result a big crowd turned out.

The stage hands, ticket sellers, moving picture man, props. and singers not forgetting the management of the Star Theatre were booked to do combat on the ice with the white aproned dispensors, clerks and bell-hops of the American House. "Pop" Philips and "Billie" Witt at no small expense were engaged to handle the game. Bill got cold feet and did not put in an appearance. But "G. O. P." was there. "Nuf sed." The Star theatreites won. "Pop" was master of ceremonies at all times. He found it difficult to navigate on skates, so these were quickly removed.

The game? Say it was better than any farce put on the Star boards. At the end of some thirty-five minutes performance the theatreites had the game stowed away nine goals to the hotelmen's five. Collie Schmidt played a great game in goal.

"Shorty" Hood was right in the game all the time. For the hotelmen Baldy Mayer and Lou Krueger were the shining lights.

Here is the way these two sevens faced each other.

Pat was being shown an incubator by one of his friends who had removed to the suburbs. He took great interest in all of the details, and examined everything with great care. Then as he looked at about a hundred young chickens that had just been hatched, with an awed expression, he said "Human nature is a funny thing, after all."—Everybody's.

WE DO NOT CLAIM TO teach the older phonetic or alphabetic systems in 30 days. This, we grant you, would be out of reason. We do, however, claim to teach a system which gives supreme satisfaction—a system which is as far in advance of the older systems, good though they were, as our modes of heating, lighting, travel, communication, etc., etc., are in advance of those of bygone days. Our catalogue illustrates 30-Day Syl-la-bic Shorthand. Send for it. Moon College, 282—286 Yonge St., Toronto.

Earnest Pilgrim—Please send a large bunch of red roses to this address and charge it to me.

Clerk—Yes, sir; and your name?

Earnest Pilgrim—Oh, never mind the name, she'll understand.—Harvard Lampoon.

Madam (to rough looking caller)—Yes, I lost a pet dog, but this isn't it. My dog was brown, and this one is white.

The Man—Ah, mum, the poor little beast turned white from grief.—Boston Transcript.

"And do you belong to any societies, Mrs. Covinsky?"

"Oh, yes. I am a member of the Grand-daughters of the Broad Palm. One of my ancestors, you know, became very wealthy by securing the tipping privileges in all the coatrooms of the public schools."—Chicago Record Herald.

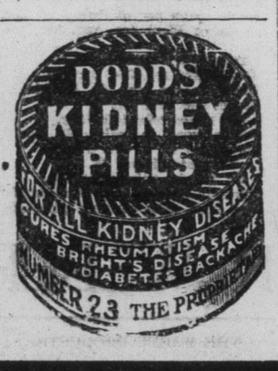
The Dinner Table.

Every good house keeper takes a pride in having her table set with a pretty cloth, fine china and sparkling glass, and our husbands and brothers enjoy it as much as we do, although they do not often admit the fact. This does not involve a large outlay, for many of the cheap table linens have beautiful designs and when kept spotlessly clean will look better than more expensive pieces that are not well cared for. It is not considered necessary now for everything on the table to be of the same pattern and design. Pretty pieces of china and glassware may be purchased from time to time and will help the appearance of the table wonderfully, and the amount they cost would be scarcely missed. A silence cloth saves the linen cloth and deadens the sound of the dishes. Two or three thicknesses of an old white blanket will answer the purpose, or if necessary to buy the material, the white cotton blankets, which are thick and soft, will do nicely. Spread it smoothly upon the table, turn the endges under and tack it to keep it from slipping. Colored damask will do for other meals, but let the cloth used on the dinner table be white without color unless it is a border of pale blue, pink or yellow.

Centrepieces and doilies, whether plain or elaborately embroidered, are not only handsome but economical as well, for they save the tablecloth and keep it clean. Embroidery silk in delicate colors show the work to better advantage than pure white, and if one will use the proper care in laundering them they will retain their beautiful colors to the last. Heat the water until it is lukewarm, dissolve a little powdered borax in it, and enough soap to make a good suds. Wash the pieces lightly between the hands. They should not be used long enough to become so badly soiled that hard rubbing is necessary to get them clean.

Borax is othe best and safest article known to soften the water, making very little rubbing necessary, and does not injure the most delicate color. Such articles should never be washed and boiled with other white clothes as that would surely ruin them in a short time. Rinse through two waters, adding a little boiled starch to the second, and enough bluing to tinge it a little. Very little starch is needed for they should not be made stiffer than new linen. Press the embroidery on the wrong side and iron the plain linen on the right side.



Briggs—Is it true that you have broken off your engagement to that girl who lives in the suburbs?

Griggs—Yes; they raised the commutation rates on me and I have transferred to a town girl.—Life.

is blended to suit the Canadian palate. Sold only in air-tight packages. A pound of "Salada" makes 200 cups of delicious tea.
