SEEKING CLUE TO LOST ARCHDUKE

Trustee of Johann Orth Investigating the Many Stories.

PRINCE SENT TO PARIS

And Later It Is Said Started a Farm in the Argentine.

Vienna, Aug. 7.—The Vienna lawyer, Dr. Teltscher, trustee of the missing Archduke Johann, alias Johann Orth, has a tremendously difficult task in inquiring into the daily increasing number of romantic stories by persons who more or less positively declare they saw Orth alive after the departure of the Santa Margareta from La Plata on July 12, 1890.

The statement of the Frenchman, Renaux, seems the most important. He declares that as an employee of the harbor works at La Plata he was instructed to examine the cargoes of cement from England, and consequently was often on board the Santa Margareta. He noticed that there were really two commanders, one was called captain and the other Don Juan Orth by the crew. Renaux made the latter's acquaintance and was told by him that owing to differences with the captain and several attempts on his life during the voyage he was forced to leave the ship and settle as a farmer in the Argentine.

Renaux once accompanied Orth to took over his farm, which was surrounded by primeval forest, and he is sure that Orth bought this or another farm. Orth informed the captain before the departure of the ship on its ill-fated voyage that he would meet him at Monte Video, and he was in his (Renaux's) company and not on board the Santa Margareta when the latter weighed anchor.

Orth never told him that he was a prince, but he said he was an Austrian ex-officer. Renaux met Orth again in August and December of 1890 at Rio Quarto and Buenos Ayres respectively, when Orth asked him to forget his name of Orth and call him simply Don Juan.

Renaux thinks that Orth is living as a farmer in the Argentine, but may again have changed his name.

A Trieste merchant named Demanius declares that he spoke to Orth, who then called himself Cabaellero, in Buenos Ayres, in 1894. His companions, two Dalmatians, were forbidden to divulge his secret, but in their conversation, which Demanius overheard, they called him archduke. It also appeared that he had just arrived from a distant lonely island.

The Belgian explorer, Leconte, thinks a hunter named Friedrich Otten, an accomplished gentleman with a large library, whom he met living in a tent at Patagonia, may be identical with Orth, whom he greatly resembled.

Alleged Visit to Paris.

According to another detailed report, Orth, under the name of Baron Otto, visited Paris last winter, where he conferred with several lawyers to whom he revealed his identity and returned via London to America. The Argentine consul here knows that Baron Otto, a well-to-do gentleman, lives in the Argentine and closely resembles Orth, but cannot say whether they are really identical. It is believed here that, for unknown reasons, the baron pretends to be the missing archduke, but is another person.

A Vienna journalist has written a letter to the Neue Freie Presse, in which he exppresses the belief that he saw and spoke to Orth in Vienna in January, 1908, but the latter declared that his name was De la Villa, and that he lived in France in the Chateau Tempsperdu, near Ury, not far from Paris.

Dr. Degre also writes to the Neue Freie Presse that Professor Sisto at the Buenos Ayres University told him that Orth is living in the neighborhood of that city and periodically receives sums of money from Austria.

The officials in the lord chamberlain's office declare today that the various letters and reports will be most carefully examined before the formal declaration of death next February.

FRACTURED HIS SPINE.

Brantford, Aug. 7.—John Gibson, residing at 20 Cayuga street, fell headfirst from the top of the stairs Saturday night and sustained a fractured spine.

Know How To Keep Cool?

Surprising, too, how the food elements relieve fatigue and sustain one.

The flavor is delicious—and Postum is really a food drink.

WIDOW'S LOVE FOR WENDLING IS DEAD

Milliner, Who Betrayed Alleged Slayer, Won't Speak to Him.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 8. — Mrs. Cora Munea, the milliner, of Hume, Mo., for the love of whom Joseph Wendling, accused of killing Alma Kellner, in Louisville, Ky., betrayed his whereabouts to the Louisville police, left Kansas City with Wendling and his captors today for Louisville. She will be a witness in the case against the man who painted word pictures for her of his chateaux in France and wanted to make her Mrs. Wendling.

Mrs. Munea is interested in the division of the rewards aggregating $6,000 offered for the arrest of the supposed slayer of the eight-year-old niece of Frank Fehr, the wealthy brewer.

"I don't want to see that smiling Frenchman," she told the officers. "Please keep him out of my sight. His attentions might have been interesting once, but not now. I don't feel the least bit romantic. I'm here on business."

Mrs. Muenea was ushered into the Pullman where the prisoner, his hands ironed in his lap, sat smiling out of a window at the curious crowd below. The widow gave the accused man one furtive glance and fled nervously to a seat on the other side of the car. Wendling's smile lengthened. He looked at her with interest as she talked with the officers. During the half hour the train remained in Kansas City no word passed between the widow and the prisoner.

It is believed, it is the plan of the Louisville detectives to use the Missouri widow in drawing out Wendling's deserted wife as a witness for the state. Mrs. Wendling has stood by her husband persistently, refusing to believe in his guilt. The theory is that jealousy and the sight of a rival may cause a change in her attitude.

Mrs. Munea's service in the capture consisted in her supplying Inspector Carney with his address in Vallejo, Cal., by means of a picture postcard he had sent her from that point asking her to write.

KRUPPS ALARMED

Fearful That Britain May Bring About Reduction of Armament

Berlin, Aug. 7.—Considerable alarm is being felt by the large shipbuilding firms in this country at the prospect of Germany consenting to consider a British proposal for the arrest of armaments. The most unscrupulous methods are being employed to convict the public that the British offer is mere humbug or the result of funk.

The Berlin Neuste Nachrichten, a big navy organ, which is said to be virtually owned by the Krupp firm, publishes an article ascribing the English suggestion of a limitation of armaments to "pure funk," consequent upon England's knowledge of the superiority of the new German ships and guns and broadside arrangements—a superiority which extends even to the giants of the Hercules class.

This journal proceeds to dilate upon the absurdity of Germany agreeing to a halt in armaments just when the Krupps are about to produce a 35-centimetre (14-inch) gun, i. e., a gun bigger than England's present biggest, and one moreover having double the life of English guns.

There can be no doubt that this revelation proceeds directly from Krupps, as no word of such an invention has hitherto been whispered in Germany. The article completely justifies the Vorwarts warning that big firms are fighting for their life against the real public sentiment in favor of an agreement.

SHORTAGE IN ANIMAL FOOD

Marked Decrease in United States for the First Half of the Year.

Washington, D.C., Aug. 6.—A shortage in the animal food supply of the United States is shown in the report issued today by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, giving the commercial movement of live stock and meat products for the first half of 1910.

Live stock receipts during June at seven primary interior markets were 3,039,789 head, showing for the first time since January a gain, and which exceeded even the June (1909) receipts or 2,952,824 head.

The shortage in the commercial supply of live stock was shown in a comparison of the half-yearly figures, which totalled 16,463,756 head in 1910, compared with 19,081,725 head in 1909, and 20,820,391 head in 1909.

Shortage in Hogs.

The shortage in hog receipts in 1910 was almost 25 per cent. The distribution of this loss is far from uniform. Chicago shows a loss of 31 per cent, as compared with the above averages, Kansas City a loss of 26 per cent, Omaha 20 per cent, and St. Louis a loss of only 5 per cent.

The curtailment in the commercial supply of cattle is less pronounced, six months' receipts for the present year being about 6 per cent below the average half-yearly receipts for the five-year period.

The live stock receipts for June for four principal Atlantic sea-coast cities of 819,754 head were larger than for any one other month of the year, although falling short of the June receipts for 1909 and 1908, the totals being 865,570 and 920,236 head, respectively.

Packing House Products.

The shipment during June of packing house products in Chicago, being 176,820,550 pounds, show the largest monthly total for the year, though falling below the June, 1909, and 1908 shipments of 185,665,090 and 204,823,305 pounds.

The stocks of meat at the end of June, 1910, held in five principal stockyard centres was 197,870,860 pounds, showing an increase since January last, although as compared with the five-year average for the same dates a decrease of over 36 per cent is shown.

TO SAVE THE DOGS

British Humane Society to Rescue of Constantinople Canines.

London, Aug. 7.—The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is taking energetic action with regard to the fate of the Constantinople dogs. When the authorities first decided to collect the dogs in May last, and complaints reached the society that the animals were confined in small spaces around the old city walls, and were insufficiently fed, a letter was sent to the British ambassador in Constantinople, who replied that the dogs received adequate food, and that the accommodation was to be improved.

Subsequently the decision was taken to remove the dogs to the Isle of Oxia, in the Sea of Marmora, a barren piece of land with only one small spring of water. The society had appealed strongly to the foreign minister, Sir Edward Grey, urging him to endeavor to induce the Turkish authorities to have the animals mercifully destroyed instead of consigning them to slow torture on an island, where it is difficult to land food, and where the dogs become mad with hunger and thirst, and fight until numbers of them are killed and eaten partially by their surviving companions.

The difficulty with regard to this wholesale suffering is the objection of the Mohammedans, on religious grounds, to take away the life of an animal, and in order to meet this the society has gone a step further in offering, through the ambassador, to raise a fund for the purchase of the dogs, and their merciful destruction by people of Christian faith.

MANY KNIGHTS LEAVE LONDON FOR CHICAGO

Off for the Big Conclave Where 35,000 Delegates Are Expected.

A large number of Knights Templar left London last night for Chicago to attend the triennial conclave of the Sovereign Commandery of the United States. Amongst them were Grand Master Luther B. Archibald and Mrs. Archibald, M. E. Sir Knight Will H. Whyte and Mrs. Whyte, R. E. Sir Knight W. P. Ryrie, deputy grand master; R. E. Sir Knight J. H. Channel and Mrs. Channell, of Stanstead, Que.; Mrs. J. H. MacLean, of Bournemouth, England, in addition to a number of sir knights from Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and the far east. The Grand Trunk train for Chicago last night had a large number of knights on board for the assembly, four extra Pullman cars being necessary to carry the crowd.

The Thirteenth Regiment Band of Hamilton, also went through on No. 5. They will furnish the escort for St. Bernard Commandery of Chicago during the week.

"It is expected that there will be 35,000 knights in line on Thursday afternoon next," said Grand Master Archibald. "It will be one of the largest affairs yet held. It may be that the recent death of Rev. Mr. Rugg, their grand master, may put a damper on some of the enthusiasm, but he left instructions that his death, provided it came before the conclave, should in no wise interfere with the session. We expect to have a most enjoyable time."

REV. DR. M'DOWELL IN FIRST METHODIST

Sermon Preached From the Writings of St. Peter.

Rev. Dr. McDowell, of Baltimore, who, during the remainder of Rev. Richard Whiting's vacation will preach in the First Methodist Church, entered on his duties yesterday morning. Proceeding from his text, "He careth for you," found in the writings of St. Peter, he cited the Bible as an evidence of God's care for his human children. The deathlessness of this divine Book, he contrasted with the early consignment to oblivion of innumerable human books. Although one of the oldest books in the world, the circulation of the Bible in one year is four times the combined circulation of six most popular novels in three years. The Bible will live so long as moral need is a great factor in human living. We are "creatures of care," and our conditions of life make us such. This generation of ours, Dr. McDowell declared, is growing strangely calloused to the awfulness of sin. A deepened sense of our sin is necessary. If we realized this, we would not require so many hospitals for the insane, nor would we have the present tremendous outburst of religious faddism in America. We have read so much modern science, with all its dogmatism, that God means nothing to us. And yet wireless telegraphy, dependent as it is on great currents beating around the earth, is but a new proof of God's exhaustless power and resource. God is no mere overseer of this world and its people.. The faraway vision of a God apart from this world will not save men from despair and suicide when they are in real trouble. Mother-love and mother-care are most like the love and care of God, but it is an infinitely wise and powerful mother-love, although at times we may think that life is running away with us, yet God continually cares for each one of us, for the real man or woman, the soul, the character or life, which will outlast all the accidents of time, place and circumstance.

A KIDNAPING CHARGE.
