Dr. J. R. Inch, chief superintendent of education, has returned to the province from Baltimore, where he consulted specialists and his health is understood to be in a precarious condition. His resignation, to take effect at the end of the present school year, is not unlooked for.

The contract for supplying cement to be used in the construction of the Hydro Electric Development at Grand Falls was recently awarded to the Frank B. Gibrett Company of Longue Pointe, Quebec. The celebration of the Easter festival at St. John's (Stone) Chruch yesterday was marked by large congregations, tasteful decorations and special music. Sydney Beckley gave a fine delivery of "The Trumpet Shall Sound" at the offertory at the morning service, while at the evening offertory Mendelssohn's "Then Shall the Righteous" was finely sung by H. S. Tibbs of Montreal, formerly tenor soloist at the Metropolitan Church, Toronto.

Mr. Willard Reid and family of Leinster street leave St. John very soon to take up their residence in Montreal. The Lend-a-Hand Circle of King's Daughers, to which circle Mrs. Reid belongs, last week gave a pleasant afternoon tea to their members, at which Mrs. Reid was their guest of honor. All expressed regret at the removal of a member who has faithfully and well tried to live out their motto, "Look up and lift up."

An invitation has been received by Union Lodge, No. 2, K. of P., from Frontier Lodge of St. Stephen to attend a special meeting of that lodge on Wednesday evening next to exemplify the third rank. As a large number of Union Lodge members have a special desire to attend, even though the notice has been too short to get a team together, a meeting has been arranged at Castle Hall for this (Monday) evening at 8 o'clock to make up a party to attend. Those interested are asked to be on hand or to notify P. C. H. Kineer, chairman of the committee.

The West End division of the fire brigade was called out about eleven o'clock yesterday morning for a fire on the roof of a two-story building at Old Fort, occupied by Frank Claney and owned by Addison Belyea. A couple of boys who were playing on a wharf at Old Fort noticed the smoke coming from the roof of the Claney house and sent in an alarm from box 115. The department responded promptly and it only took the firemen a few minutes to quench the flames. The damage will be insignificant.

SEEKS REFUGE IN THIS CITY

Nan Patterson On Visit Here

Fameus Member of Flordora Sextette Seeks Oblivion

An outcast of her people, unhappy and without friends, Nan Patterson, the acquitted of the Caesar Young tragedy and a former member of the famous Florodora sextette, is seeking a refuge in St. John after having been bowed out of every city she attempted to make a haven of in the United States.

The one time operatic star came in from Halifax the latter part of last week. She declares that she is without money and is only concerned in shaking free the haunting phantoms of the exile.

Spectacular as was the rise of the former beauty her fall has been just as remarkable, and the girl who at one time delighted thousands in the exposition of her art is now the dejected woman of a scorn that faces whichever way she turns.

Awoke Famous

Nan Patterson awakened one fine morning to find herself famous along with Evelyn Thaw and the present Mrs. Nat. Goodman, all members of the Florodora sextette. Dishevelled and notorious she aroused herself another morning in the toombs, the accused slayer of Caesar Young. The story of the tragedy is still fresh in the minds of the present generation. Young, a book-maker of some prominence, was shot through the brain while riding along Broadway, New York, in a closed carriage. Nan Patterson was the only other occupant of that carriage and the circumstantial evidence of her guilt was only penetrated after a long and wearisome trial in the jury failing to agree upon a verdict.

The actress is for obvious reasons travelling incog. She is living with a private family on Carmarthen street.

Miss Patterson when seen by a reporter of The Sun last night, stated that she hoped to return to the Middle West, Tuesday. She expressed great surprise upon learning that her identity was known and stated that she had stayed in Halifax for upwards of four weeks without anyone becoming the wiser.

EXPLOSION MAIMS TWENTY AT ROME

Dynamite Cartridge Explodes, Wrecking House Near the Vatican and Injuring Many.

ROME, April 11.—An explosion in V. Borgo Pio, near the Vatican, took place today. A young workman named Projetti was making up dynamite cartridges for fishing and one of them exploded, setting on fire a quantity of cotton, saturated with nitro-glycerine, which was lying prepared on a table.

The explosion destroyed the first floor, on which was the room in which the man was working, and part of the second floor. Projetti was picked up in an awful state among the debris of the explosion, his foot and right arm having been broken. His injuries, it is thought, will prove fatal.

Twenty others were wounded. The explosion was heard at the Vatican and the Pope immediately inquired about it. He was kept informed of the condition of the wounded. Numerous visitors in the Basilica hardly heard the explosion.

POLICE DESCEND ON A CHINK GAMBLING 'JOINT'; ARREST 28 CELESTIALS

There was considerable excitement on Mill street last night when a squad of police, headed by Deputy Chief Jenkins, swooped down on a Chinese gambling den and arrested no less than twenty-six Chinamen. As a result of the raid the street was blocked by hundreds of people and traffic was somewhat impeded for a time. It was a successful round-up and besides cards and dice used in the game, about $20 in cash was taken from the gaming table.

At 159 Mill Street

The den is situated at 159 Mill street and the innocent looking laundry is conducted by W. Sam Wah, a thirty-year-old almon-eyed son of China. After passing through the front shop where "wash" is taken in and delivered there are four other rooms and in the rear room are the tables for playing the game of chance. This rear room is near the Likely pond and was undoubtedly picked out by the wiley Sam Wah as being a quiet place that the police would not think of visiting. The police have been satisfied that gambling has been going on for months in Sam Wah's laundry, but it was not thought best to raid the place until a good haul could be made, and last night proved a most opportune time.

Complaints had been made to the police regarding the place and persons residing in the adjoining property could hear the chatter of the excited Chinks as they became interested in their game, and it is also believed by some of the Chinese arrested that some Chinaman who has lost his wad at the game has given the information to the police.

DECIDED TO RAID.

Last evening the Deputy Chief decided to raid the place and called to his assistance Detective Killen Night Detective Lucas, Sgt. Kilpatrick and Officers Finley, Perry, Scott and Semple. The deputy with Sgt. Kilpatrick, Killen and Lucas kept a watch on the front door, while the other officers guarded the rear of the building. After a wait of about three-quarters of an hour Harry Hum, a young and sportily dressed Chink, sauntered along Mill street and timidly approached the laundry door. He gave a signal rap on the door and in a few moments the portal was opened for him and at the same time the Deputy Chief and the others made a rush to gain an entrance.

Harry Hum tried hard to close the door against the officers ,and in the crush the glass in the door was broken. The police rushed as quickly as posible to the rear room and had to climb over numerous articles before reaching the gaming room. The gambling chinks were struck with terror by the raid, and with loud chattering there was a rush to escape, and the glass in the rear window was smashed in their attempt to escape, but the officers prevented any from getting clear, and in all 28 Chinamen were trapped.

In the attempt to escape the gamblers left their money about $20 in all, on the gaming table along with cards and dice. The room was in an uproar, and Detective Killen described it as resembling a thousand English sparrows in a scrap.

The news of the raid quickly spread about the city, and in a short time hundreds of people blocked the street, all anxious to see the prisoners. A patrol wagon would have come in handy, but the deputy had to resort to the next best thing and procured the services of three coaches. These were driven to the curb stone and about six loads of Chinese were conveyed to the central station

As the coaches would arrive at the central station there was a large crowd of men and boys who watched the unloading of prisoners into the cells.

A number of the prisoners asked that their lawyers be sent for. Besides those arrested one was left to look after the laundry, and the 28th was Harry Hum, the young fellow who opened the door. He is employed in Hop Lee's laundry on Paradise Row and he acted as interpreter for the police in obtaining the names of those in the cells. He was allowed to go home for the night on promising to appear in court this morning at ten o'clock.

GAMING HOUSE.

Sam Wah is charged with keeping a common gaming house on Mill street. The others are charged with gaming in the said common gaming house. Their names and ages are as follows: Ham Lin, aged 28 years; Mo Mang, 36 years; Yee Sing, 30 years; Charlie Ham, 28 years; Hum Kee, 35 years; Hum Joe, 20 years, Tom Hem, 28 years; Hum Coa, 20 years; Hum Tom, 25 years; Hum Chin, 26 years; Hum Lung, 18 years; Hum Wong, 27 years; Jack Wong, 24 years; Heng Lee, 22 years; Hum John, 38 years; Hai Lee, 20 years; Weah Lee, 23 years; George Hum, 25 years; Youn Kee, 27 years; Sam Lee, 29 years; Hei Kee, 34 years; Hum Kee, 25 years; Soo Kee, 21 years; Sang Kee, 32 years; Charlie Chong, 38 years.

Some of those arrested are said to have been mixed up in previous raids.

The games played in Sam Wah's is said to be fan-tan with the cards and a game with dice resembling poker.

The services of Sgt. Campbell and officers Totten, Belyea, Gosline and Hamm were called on to assist the other officers in the transfer of the prisoners from Mill street to the Central Station. The prisoners were very much excited last night when placed behind the bars and their loud talk could be heard out on King street.

PEARL INDUSTRY OF QUEENSLAND

Australian pearl fishers make their fortune more by the shells they gather than the pearl they find. The Australian pearl is not to be compared with the Oriental; it is too pale and lacks the beautiful sheen, as a rule, of the latter. The Australian pearl-shell, on the other hand, is most valuable, while the Oriental shell is worthless, or practically so. Australian shells are large and thick, while Oriental shells are small and thin.

Thursday Island is the great centre of the pearling industry in Australia, but this extends pretty well all round the coast of Queensland, and Dampier Land, on the desolate northwest coast of the continent, is also famous for its trade in this respect. Of course, it is because of the mother-of-pearl lining that the shells are valuable. This iridescent lustre is due to the minute undulations of alternate layers of carbonate of lime and membrane. The rough outer coat of the shell is scraped away, and the mother-of-pearl is then ready to be cut into knife handles, mirror frames, etc.

All round York Peninsula—that finger-like projection in the north of Queenisland — and upon the numerous islands without the Great Barrier Reef, pearling stations abound. On the edge of the tropical jungle the little settlement is built, the station house, long and low, with a broad verandah, occupying some knoll or half-way up the slope of a hill, and loking down upon the stre sheds and boat sheds and the Kanakas' hut and kitchen.

Pearl shells are worth anything around $1,000 a ton at Thursday Island, at Broome, in Dampier Land, or at any Australian port, and if sent direct to other countries they are worth as much as $1,450 a ton. From 400 to as many thousand shells go to the ton, according to size. The best Australian shells are the black and gold-tipped, and many tons of these are annually exported. Of course, what pearls are found are so much extra value, needless to say; and stones are sometimes found worth $10,000 and more. Pearls worth $1,000 or $1,500, are not uncommon .

For the greater part, the pearling is carried on by pearling companies that run fleets of boats, but there are many private individuals engaged in the industry. A fair amount of capital is required to start in it—$5,000 or so. With that a man may buy a small schooner, lugger or yawl, stock it, and hire a Malay or Japanese diver, and a small crew of Kanakas.

Much of the diving is still done by Malay or Kanaka "boys" in the primitive garb of Nature, jumping in feet first from the side of a small boat and then swimming to the bottom of the sea, remaining under for a minute or a minute and a half.

An expert diver of the latter class demands as much as $750 advance money and $100 on each ton of shell he brings up. There is not much danger from sharks if there are many divers working together, and so the unrobed Malays, who generally work in gangs enjoy greater immunity than the solitary india-rubbered and helceted diver. White men do not dive; they superintend matters in the yawl or on the schooner perhaps opening the shells. Great watchfulness has to be exercised over the Malays and Kanakas, for a pearl is very easily secreted in the loin-cloth, mouth or ears; and, moreover, the "boys" may take it into their heads to murder the white manager and share the precious spoil.

Many white men who trust themselves alone in a boat with a Malay or Kanaka crew are never heard of more—they disappear mysteriously, or are reported as having fallen overboard. The skipper and the mate—if there is one—of a pearling lugger or yawl has to be an expert revolver shot, and may well be said to carry his life continually in his hands. He has to sleep on a hair-trigger, so to speak—to be ever ready for mutiny or treachery in some shape or another from one or more of his crew. It does not do to indulge in a brown study—to loll over the taffrail dreaming of home. A push or a blow from a Malay "kris" may end all further dreaming.

Pearling is only possible at certain seasons. When the weather turns cold and the trade winds become blustering, the fleets return to the stations. The shells are then sorted, washed, weighed, and packed in cases. They are chiefly sold by public auction.

A pearl-oyster is not an oyster at all really, but a species of mussel, and in the majority of cases a pearl is literally "the gorgeous tomb of a tape-worm." The nucleus of a pearl was formerly supposed to be a grain of sand or some other extraneous matter that had worked inside the shell, but it is now found to be, as a rule, one of these parasites. Annoyed by the tape-worm, the oyster or mussel squirts its nacre or juice over it, and smothers it, thus forming the pearl.

Like the mussel, the pearl oyster attaches itself to stones and rocks by means of fine but strong fibrous cords or "byssus," and not like the oyster, by a secretion of shell matter. Only in the adult oyster are pearls found of any size. After the fourth year it is calculated the yield of pearls both in quality and quantity greatly increases. Pearls are often found embedded in the shell, working through to the outer surface, for the oyster seems to be able to change his coat, or else it wears away.

Cruisers patrol the pearling grounds to examine the shells taken; and heavy fines are inflicted if these are undersized. The government has also passed a law forbidding blacks landing in Australia expect under certain restrictions, but many of the pearl-hunters evade the law and get their crews more cheaply by meeting the agents' ships outside the harbor and taking the Kanaka boys directly on their luggers, which they are then not permitted to leave until their term is up.

The rarest and most valuable of all Australian pearls is a black pearl, and the most famous pearl found in those waters is the Southern Cross, which was found off Queensland, inside the Great Barrier Reef. It was in three portions, and minus the left arm. A suitable pearl was added to make up the missing arm, and was was joined on so skilfully with diamond cement as to baffle experts for long, although the cross was subjected to the closest scrutiny through magnifying glasses.

Skin Diseases.
A diseased or disfigured skin will always leave its stamp on the mind of the individual. Many people suffering from disfiguring skin diseases avoid society and lose all pride in their personal appearance. When the skin breaks out in eruptions and sores it is due entirely to an impure condition of the blood.
In all such cases Burdock Blood Bitters will quickly purify the blood and drive all the impurities out of the system.

ITCHING RASH CURED.
Mrs. J. J. Magee, Jr., Kinmount, Ont., writes: "In the spring of 1906 I was troubled with a Rash that broke out all over me. It was the worst on my [illegible] head, had a dry, scaly top, and when I would get warm it would become very itchy. I tried the doctor's medicine but it did me no good, so I then got one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters and before it was all used the Rash was entirely gone."

SORES ON FACE.
Mrs. Harvey Barkhouse, Gold River, N.S., writes: "I was greatly troubled with Sores on my face and finally became so bad I had to go to the doctor about it, but he could do nothing to help me.
"I thought about Burdock Blood Bitters and decided to try a bottle. I cannot recommend B.B.B. enough, as I had not taken all the bottle before my face was cured."

St. Yves was never headed and gained steadily on his opponent from the start.
