THE CHALLENGE.

There is a greater army,
That besets us round with strife,
A starving, numberless army,
At all the gates of life:

The poverty-stricken millions
Who challenge our wine and bread,
And impeach us all as traitors,
Both the living and the dead.

And whenever I sit at the banquet,
Where the feast and song are high,
Amid the mirth and the music
I can hear that fearful cry,

And hollow and haggard faces
Look into the lighted hall,
And wasted hands are extended
To catch the crumbs that fall.

For within there is light and plenty,
And odors all the air;
But without there is cold and darkness
And hunger and despair.

And there in the camp of famine;
In wind and cold and rain,
Christ, the great Lord of the army,
Lies dead upon the plain.

—Longfellow's Last Poems.

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

John T. Irving, the self-accused Nathan murderer, has been sentenced for burglary to seven years and six months imprisonment.

A boy in Centre County Penn., accidentally cut the roof of his mouth with his pen-knife, and bled to death.

A dog in Detroit, because he had been worsted in a contest with another of his species, deliberately laid down on a railroad track, and allowed a train to kill him.

An engraver in Springfield has cut the Lord's prayer into a piece of copper less than one-fourth the size of a silver three-cent piece, and there is room in the circle for fifteen or twenty words more.

The Review says: "A Peoria letter-carrier, after walking nine miles and delivering the same letter to 137 men, none of whom would receive it, sat down on a fire plug and wept because Pocahontas was such a fool as to catch the old man's war club and save the progenitor of a detested and innumerable race."

Here is a woman in an Eastern State whose nice knowledge puts even experts to shame. She was testifying in a turkey case, and informed the jury that she knew "those turkeys by their walk, their countenances, and their manner of roosting." For a wonder she said nothing about their voices.

The counsel fees in a bankruptcy case which has been on the docket of the United States Circuit Court in Milwaukee for a long time, were recently cut down by two judges at different times $5,415 and $6,000 respectively. The worthy judges thought the fees excessive, and the number of counsel employed too numerous.

Preparations are well under way for laying the new telegraph cable between the coast of Ireland and Rye Beach, N. H. This undertaking goes forward quietly, as if spanning the bed of the Atlantic by the telegraph had become a common-place affair. Soon there will be a net work on the bottom of the ocean that will frighten the fishes to the surface.

Mr. Disraeli.

London Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.)

There is somehow a difficulty in speaking with entire gravity of any of Mr. Disraeli's public appearances. I do not know precisely why, unless it be the element of unreality which pervades his speeches. He is never quite in earnest. If there were two Mr. Disraelis you would feel that they, like the Roman Augurs, could not look each other in the face without laughing. I remember thinking I could trace a likeness to Mr. Disraeli in one of the countenances in Gerome's picture, though it may be the painter never saw the great Tory oracle. I have often heard Mr. Disraeli in the House, and the occasions have sometimes been grave, and even solemn. In a way his speeches wese impressive. They were great intellectual efforts, but instead of convincing the hearer they left on him the impression that Mr. Disraeli was trying to convince himself. He was, perhaps, nearly as much in earnest as a good actor. His desire to move his audience was evident; his secret belief being, all the time, that the matter was not worth the fuss made about it. It is this lack of complete sincerity and of profound conviction which gives to his speeches, brilliant as they are, a stamp of inferiority as orations. He can simulate a passion but not feel it. He can form a clear mental image of a conviction, but it is not to him a motive force. So resolute has been his effort to realize to himself the character of the English that he understands it extremely well, and the clearer his view became the more subtle grew his contempt and the more careful his concealment of it. He early made up his mind to be a party leader, assured, as he was, that, for a superior being like himself, nothing could be more certain than supremacy over the men by whom he saw himself surrounded. The Tory party, containing the greater number of dull men, offered great natural advantages to an adventurer with such an aim.

It probably was a surprise to Mr. Disraeli to find that there were men in his party and more out of it capable of returning the feeling with which he regarded them. It was long before he could persuade people to look on him as a serious man. Too clever by half was the judgment of the heavy-witted and timid Tory squires who were asked to submit to his leadership. They did not understand how the same man could write novels and administer the finances. Mr. Disraeli took extraordinary pains to show gentlemen of this sort that though he could not be as stupid as they, he shared their prejudices, their fears about property, their distrust of all but the landed class, and their selfish purpose to keep political power in the hands of that class. He was proud of his success. The mask sometimes dropped from his face, and the inner thought was uttered, as when he remarked: "They may say of me hereafter what they like; they cannot deny that I have been twice Chancellor of the Exchequer." The ambition of his life was achieved when he became Prime Minister. If a prouder moment could be his, it was last Spring when he had the satisfaction of refusing to resume that office on the resignation of his hated rival.

Mrs. Cain, on whose house, at Halifax, the police made a raid on Friday last, and who was convicted and heavily fined for keeping a notorious house, attempted to commit suicide on Saturday last by hanging herself to the grating in the door of her cell, or in the Police Station.

Bronchitis and Consumption—Letter from Dr. Crane.

HALIFAX, N. S.

JAMES I. FELLOWS, Esq.—Dear Sir: From a general knowledge of the prominent ingredients of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, I formed such a favorable opinion as to be induced to recommend it to my patients as preferable, and more convenient than my own prescription of the Hypophosphites. For several years I have continued to prescribe it, in many cases with very beneficial results. Since, upon solicitation, you kindly afforded me a more intimate knowledge of the composition of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, I have used it freely in my practice, both in diseases of the chest, as Consumption and Bronchits, etc., and in infantile diseases of the prima via, or Stomach and Bowels, with eminent success, considering it superior to any similar preparation yet offered to the public. Thanking you for your kind information,

I remain, yours truly,
CHANDLER CRANE, M. D.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AMONG the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centered on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured. Prepared by
