

more conservative with regard to the use of iron. In neurotic cases if suspended at the approach of, and during menstruation it was of value. Often, in the congestive form, it was injurious, the patient might gain in colour, but she would suffer more severely at the periods.

The treatment by electricity was sometimes followed by brilliant results, using the negative pole of the galvanic current for a few minutes with a weak current.

He thought there was something we did not understand about the influence of the introduction of sounds into the uterus on painful menstruation. Often, after having passed the sound for diagnostic purposes, perhaps three or four periods following would be free from pain. He cited the case of a patient who came once every four or five months for five years, simply to have the sound passed.

Hot baths he had used for a long time, and bromides he thought of some value. For a few days before the advent of the period, in some cases, he used the bromides and conium, while in the intervals he employed curative measures.
