No Humbug! Lift Off Corns

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift a corn or callus off with fingers

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly, yes, immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened callouses on bottom of feet, just seem to shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on your dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

SAGE TEA TURNS GREY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Color, Lustre and Youthfulness to Hair When Faded, Streaked or Grey.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advt.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advt.

HAZEBROUCK IS POINT OF GRAVE DANGER TO WHOLE BRITISH LINE

Frank Simonds Says Next Few Hours May Be Fateful for Either Germany or the Allies—Reserves May Turn the Tide.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

NEW YORK, April 16.—We have reached the second great crisis of the German offensive—a crisis at least as grave as the first. Some time within the next few hours the question will have to be settled whether the British are to abandon the whole of the famous Ypres salient and fall back upon a new line between Dunkirk and Calais, or the French reserves will arrive in time to pin down the German advance on the eastern side of the Ypres River.

If the Germans get Hazebrouck, and they are now within half a dozen miles from that town, the British will almost inevitably have to make a retreat on a very wide front. The loss of Bailleul is a little less serious. Finally, the German advance also carries a great menace to all the British positions from the Lys down to the Somme in front of Amiens.

Problem Is Disturbing.

The terms of the new problem are exceedingly simple but none the less disturbing. Three weeks ago the Germans smashed the British 5th Army, opened a wide gap between the British and French armies, and still another gap between the British 5th and 3rd Armies, and pushed forward into these gaps. From March 21 to March 26, the great danger was that the British and French would not be able to join hands around the break and stop the German before he got Amiens and permanently separated the two allies. Today the German is breaking a gap between the British 1st and 3rd Armies by driving in the 2nd Army, and Hazebrouck has now the value of Amiens on the other occasion.

What has happened is just this: The Germans have pierced the centre of the British 2nd Army, commanded by Gen. Horne, I believe. They have pushed this army back upon a broad front by thrusting through its centre, and the result has been the creation of a steadily widening gap between the British 3rd Army at Arras and the 1st Army at Ypres. Between these two armies there is now a very deep curve inward in the British line from Givenchy, above Arras, to Messines, below Ypres. The German front, which is still advancing, is many miles west of both these towns, and communication between the two armies is becoming more and more difficult.

Depends on Reserves.

In other words, the British 2nd Army is slowly giving way under the terrific pressure, not in confusion and approximate rout, as did the 5th Army, but it shows signs of being ground to pieces under the weight of superior numbers. The yielding of this army is beginning to imperil the communications of the Ypres army to the north and of the Arras army to the south. Unless reserves arrive in time, there is now grave danger that the British 2nd Army will collapse, and if this should take place, a retreat from the north would be inevitable, and the evacuation of all the Arras positions, including the Vimy Ridge and Hill No. 70, might follow.

Gen. Haig has now two very grave anxieties. First, he must parry the threat which might produce a break in his whole front, like that which took place three weeks ago. Such a break would compel a retirement of his whole army from the Somme to the sea toward the coast. Second, he must stop the German advance in front of his 2nd Army before it reaches the railroads and highways which are the life lines of the Ypres salient—and the German is getting very close to these roads and railways at Hazebrouck. If he does not prevent the first, there will be the possibility of a major disaster, and the separation of his forces into two great groups. If he does not prevent the second, he will very quickly have to order a wide swinging retreat on the north, which will surrender all the famous fighting grounds in the corner of Belgium, which still remain to King Albert.

Line at Arras Threatened.

In exactly the same way, the wedge which the Germans are driving in north of Arras is making the position of the British before Arras difficult. South of Arras, the Germans have driven a deep wedge almost to Amiens; north of Arras they are now driving a second wedge, and Arras is becoming a more and more pronounced salient. If this process should be continued for any length of time, the British might have to retire far west of Arras and abandon all the positions for which they have paid so much in blood and effort in the past three years and a half.

On the other hand, it is essential to recognize that all the values in the present campaign are different from those of every campaign since the Marne. Now, as then, the German is seeking a decision, not a gain of ground. The British are in the position of the French before the Marne. Then Joffre, having suffered early retreats and facing an overwhelming coficentration of German troops on his western flank, retreated steadily until he could rearrange his armies and until the force of the German blow had spent itself, and the moment arrived for a counter-offensive. When that moment arrived he struck and won the Marne, but before it arrived he had temporarily abandoned all of Northern France to the invader.

Waiting Hour To Strike.

Foch and Haig are necessarily employing the same strategy. Under the terrific force of the German blows, they are yielding. Their supreme purpose is to keep their front and their armies intact and their reserves unexhausted until the hour arrives for the counter-offensive. In this time they run the obvious danger of disaster just as Joffre did. At Amiens three weeks ago today they were facing a terrible possibility. Now they are confronting a peril no less grave. Amiens was saved by the arrival of French reserves. Today other French reserves are rushing up to Hazebrouck, and upon their celerity and upon the obstinacy of the British armies depends the fate of the Ypres salient.

The very intensity and fury of the Germany's attack now indicates that it cannot go on long at the present pace. He has used 115 divisions on the western front. He never had over 190, and at least 65 were needed to hold the line from Switzerland to the sea. Seventy-five divisions have been withdrawn because of losses, and it is certain that the remaining reserve of fresh troops cannot be over ten divisions; while the Allies on their side have not yet made any great call upon their reserves. Therefore, the power to strike back must still lie with Foch.

Will Strike Third Blow.

Conceivably we shall see a third German blow. Possibly a complete check before Hazebrouck will mark the end of the stupendous German offensive. On the other hand, the fall of Hazebrouck must have consequences which are not to be mistaken, the least of which would be the evacuation of the Ypres front, and the greatest of which might be a general retirement of the whole British line north of Amiens toward the Channel. The fate of the present British front at least depends on the rapidity with which the thrust towards Hazebrouck is checked, and until that thrust is checked it is necessary to face the facts as they are—as the British are doing, with complete frankness in their official communications

COL. CURRIE DEMANDS ACTION ON STORAGES AND LAUDS O'CONNOR

Declares Commission Has Done Good Work.

SAM HUGHES CRITICIZES

Fresh Eggs Exported and Storage Eggs Imported, He Is Informed.

OTTAWA, April 16.—Several Government bills were advanced a stage in the Commons today. These included Hon. T. A. Crerar's amendments to the meat and canned foods act, which will regulate packing houses and imported foods.

There was some criticism of the cold storage companies, more particularly by Col. J. A. Currie, who said the time had come when they should be compelled to reform. He declared that W. F. O'Connor, the cost-of-living commissioner who recently resigned, had done good work.

A resolution by the minister of agriculture increasing the amount payable to owners of animals slaughtered under the animal contagious diseases act was passed and a bill based thereon given first reading. The purpose of the bill was generally approved.

Second reading was reading to an act to provide compensation where employees of the government are killed or suffer injuries while performing their duty and this bill was put through committee stages.

Regulation of Packers.

The resolution in regard to amendments to the meat and canned foods act provides for regulations of packing houses and imported food products. Explaining his resolution, Mr. Crerar said it applied to imported food supplies the same regulations as already applied in the manufacture of similar Canadian articles. It provided for the condition under which these foods could be admitted into Canada in the sense that regulations applying in the country of origin might be accepted subject to proper certification. At present, American manufacturers were permitted to sell in Canada goods which they were not permitted to sell in the United States. Mr. Crerar instanced some meat imported into British Columbia from the United States. The meat was affected by tuberculosis and could not have been sold in the United States.

Jacques Bureau urged that there should be some additional inspection in Canada for imported meats.

To this Hon. Martin Burrell, former minister of agriculture, replied that the multiplication of inspections would mean a serious inconvenience.

Embalmed Meat and Poultry.

Col. John Currie strongly advised a more rigid inspection of meats slaughtered in Canada for home consumption. With regard to the cold storage companies, Col. Currie declared it was about time that they were compelled to reform. It was an outrage, he said, that embalmed meats and poultry should be kept in such places. He preferred not to mention any names in connection with recent cold storage revelations, but that was hardly necessary. In this connection he wished to refer to the recent resignation or dismissal of W. F. O'Connor, high-cost-of-living commissioner. Mr. O'Connor had done all he could to curb the cold storage companies and had proven himself a very good public official. Now he had lost his position, owing to some cause with which Col. Currie was not familiar. It was time, he said, for the members of the House to speak out on the cold storage situation.

GOVERNMENT TAKES AUTHORITY TO CURB DEROGATORY VIEWS

Can Smash Printing Presses, Destroy Material and Lock Up Guilty Ones.

OTTAWA, April 16.—New regulations governing the publication of statements reports, or opinions, or the verbal expressions of opinions, which may tend to weaken or detract from the united effort of the people of Canada in the prosecution of the war, were promulgated tonight in the form of an order-in-council, which received the assent of the governor-general today. The purpose of the order-in-council is to prevent criticism of a kind that would divert attention from the object of winning the war.

Provision is made for the seizure and destruction of presses, plant, machinery or material used in the publication of any matter which, in the opinion of the secretary of state, constitutes a hindrance to united action.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, minister of justice, in extending the order-in-council to the press tonight paid tribute to the loyal service of the great majority of newspapers. He expressed the view, however, that the time had come when criticism of a hurtful nature to the cause of the Allies should be dealt with. The idea, he said, was to have a clear-cut law, which would prevent abuses in the future. Newspapers he said, were at liberty to make critical statements, providing they were statements of facts, but they must take the responsibility of establishing their truthfulness.

On summary conviction those found guilty of an offense under the order are liable to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years or to both fine and imprisonment.

GREEKS AND BRITISH TAKE SEVEN TOWNS OVER STRUMA RIVER

Successful Operation Carried Out on Macedonian Front.

London, April 17.—The Greek and British troops which on Monday crossed the Struma River, on the eastern flank of the Macedonian front, occupied seven towns, the war office announces. The statement follows:

"Greek troops crossed the River Struma above Lake Tahinos, and occupied the villages of Beglik-Mah, Kakaraska, Salmah, Kispeki and Ada. The operation was most successfully carried out, with slight casualties.

"Further to the north, British troops occupied Kumli and Osmanli. A few Bulgarians were captured."

VOLLEYS MORE FREQUENT ALONG THE ITALIAN LINE

ROME, April 16.—The communication from general headquarters today says:

"There was more frequent and harrassing firing in the Val Lagarina. In the region of Adamello and in the Brenta Valley the activity of our patrols led to local engagements. The rest of the front was quiet."

HOME RULE BILL IS LIKELY TO GET EASY PASSAGE IN HOUSE

United Kingdom Following the Question With Deep Interest.

London, April 17.—While Nationalist Ireland is making plans for resistance of the enforcement of conscription in the country, the rest of the United Kingdom is more interested in the home rule bill, which George Nicoll Barnes, Labor member of the war cabinet without portfolio, announced in the House of Commons yesterday, the Government would introduce and pass or fail in the attempt.

The home rule bill, it is understood, will take the form of a measure amending the Government of Ireland act which passed just before the outbreak of the war, but the operation of which was suspended for the period of the war. General opinion favors a federal measure which could be made applicable to Scotland, Wales and England.

Never, on the surface at any rate, has Ireland had such a good chance of getting a form of self-government.

With all the Liberals, Laborites, Nationalists and a large part of the Unionists supporting the bill, it should have an easy passage in the House of Commons. What the House of Lords, those old enemies of home rule, will do, is uncertain, but with two former anti-home rulers, Earl Curzon and Viscount Milner, as members of the Government supporting it, the opposition is likely to be less strenuous than on former occasions when the Commons sent such a measure to the Upper House.
