Trade Follows the Merchant Flag of Canada

By willingness and ability to provide ships Canada this year has drawn the West Indies closer to herself and to the Empire. She can make preferential trade agreements with other peoples under the British flag without arousing international complications.

The trade of 45,000,000 people in British Tropical Africa is waiting for us to-day. But we must have ships and a sea-conscious spirit in the people and in the Government.

The West India Trade Agreement

Would not have been worth the paper it is written on had it not been for Canadian ships, and the vision of Canadians who realize those facts.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS:—

By HELEN ROWLAND

(Copyrighht, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

Being the Confessions of the Seventh-Hundredth Wife.

The Love-Song of a Tired Woman, which is Mrs. Solomon's.

Come to me, my Beloved!

I will greet thee with song and rejoicing, and cries of "Welcome!" I will crown thee with garlands and fill thy hands with gifts.

I will cover the walls of thy room with roses, and thy windows shall be hung with coleur-de-rose.

Thou shalt walk upon rugs of velvet, and recline upon pillows of down.

Thy word shall be my LAW! Thy whims shall be my daily study.

Thy room shall be the sunniest, even that, which commandeth the BEST view of the Park. Thy rocking-chair shall be over-stuffed!"

I will speak to thee always in a voice of silver, and my words shall be tender and flattering. I shall never command thee; but that which I desire of thee, I will seek coaxing and sweetness and hinting!

Thy hands shall lift no heavy burden. Mine eyes shall be blind to all thy faults. I will NOT pick on thee, neither shall I nag thee.

When thou "borrowest" mine imported perfume, and my manicure-set, and my face-powder, and my scented soap, and my jewelry, I shall not SEE it. Nay, I shall turn away mine eyes, even when my "nose knows."

When the air is rent with the crashing of china, and the shattering of cut-glass, mine ears shall be stuffed with cotton, and my smile will not come off. Nay, I shall bring thee the smelling-salts, and soothe thee with comforting words and "too-bads."

When thou lookest upon my hats and my garments to admire them, I shall hand them over to thee, straightway, saying, "Take this thing—for I no longer need it!"

My phonograph shall adorn thy kitchen, where thy company may make merry and enjoy it.

Thou shalt have NO washing.

Nor ironing.

Nor window-cleaning.

Nor carpet-sweeping.

Nor furnace, nor children, nor dogs, nor ANYTHING thou dislikest, whatsoever!

Six days of the week shalt thou labor exceeding—oh, exceeding—lightly; and upon the seventh, thou shalt go to Coney Island.

I will give thee golden skekels, and cover thee with Liberty Bonds.

Yea, ALL that thou askest will I give unto thee!

Matinee tickets, and scented note-paper, Christmas gifts and silk petticoats, silken hosiery and hand-painted fans, dream books, seven evenings OUT a week, and a ouija board!

Oh come to me, my Beloved!

Come live with me—and be my COOK!

KNIT AND SMOKE IS SOCIAL FAD

Every Watering Place in England Had Its New Entertainment This Year.

(Copyright, 1920, by Cross Atlantic.)

London, Oct. 7.—All through the summer every watering place East Coast or West, has been filled with busy women and girls, knitting and smoking. It is in interesting contrast to last winter. All last winter every woman either knitted or sewed. There was no more call for socks or shirts for soldiers, so the diligent housewife has begun to consider herself or her family and to rest her nerves with the fragrant weed.

The knitting smoker or smoking knitter, which ever you prefer to call her, is really a symbolic as well as an actual type of the English woman of today. She is frankly manly in many of her tastes, but her feminity is undoubted—and it is astonishingly efficient." She smokes—sometimes she uses "language," she plays games for she is free of the world's pleasure grounds as well as of its markets and no door to success is barred for her. Yet if to sew a fine seam and to knit like a revolutionary fury is a title of domesticity she is far ahead of the pre-war girl!

Not "Fast" Now.

Before the war it was a little "fast" to smoke—but it was very "slow" indeed to make one's own clothes. If a young woman ever knitted she made shooting stockings for her brothers and men friends; if she sewed she did elaborate embroidery for the drawing-room cushion; but no smart girl ever admitted to having constructed anything for her personal wear.

Today all this is changed and the woman who has not knitted a jumper or hemstitched a nightdress will soon be a curiosity—to be relegated to the past with the girl who did not smoke and who always had a chaperone!

How Romantic.

A visitor to Stratford-on-Avon, whose heart was in better condition than her head walked about the town quite thrilled with rapture and awe.

When she reached the railway station, where her train had not yet arrived her enthusiasm was not abated, and she looked about her with brimming eyes.

"Ah," she said, "I think this place affects me more than all. Here Shakespeare must have come to take the train to London."

This is correct despite the fact that the returning officers may not have been advised of this.
