WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

The Circumstances Attending His Trip to America.

His Reception at New York—His Treatment on Ship Board—His First Utterance in Canada.

A last (Tuesday) night's New York despatch says: The steamer John E. Moore took the O'Brien Reception Committee down to the steamship Umbria, which was at anchor outside Sandy Hook, last evening, and they took off Mr O'Brien and escorted him to the Hoffman House, in this city. The night was very foggy, and the Moore was compelled to move slowly. It was 1 o'clock this morning when the party got back as far as Quarantine.

A remarkable scene was offered when the Moore ran up alongside the Umbria. For several minutes after the object of the committee had been made known, no person in authority could be discovered to attend to the New Yorkers' wants. The cheers that the committeemen and their friends sent up for Mr O'Brien were answered, by portions of the passengers and crew, with groans and counter-cheers for Lord Salisbury, Mr Balfour and other Ministerialists. These were in turn responded to by the 400 Irish immigrants on the Umbria with uprorious cheers for Mr O'Brien, Mr Parnell and Mr Gladstone, besides more for Bishop Ireland, of Minnesota, who was also on the steamer. Then the loyal people on the Umbria started up "God Save the Queen," and when they had reached the middle of the verse a loud and clear Irish voice was heard above the anthem to cry in earnest accent, "God Save Ireland." This caused a general laugh, and put an end to the singing. Captain Patterson, of the Moore, had much difficulty in finding any one on the steamship to take a line from his boat.

His request for the presence of Captain McMickan was greeted with the information that the captain was at dinner, at which there were more jeers. After about ten minutes, however, the captain came to the rail and asked, "What do you want?"

"We have a permit to take some passengers off," replied General O'Beirne, of the committee.

The captain's response to this came rather gruffly: "I'll allow no person to leave the ship until the doctor has made his examination."

"Oh, we've got the doctor and the custom house inspector, too," chimed the chorus from the Moore, and there was another laugh.

"Take him," said another voice, referring to Mr O'Brien, "We'll have clear weather now that Jonah is going."

Just then Mr O'Brien appeared at Captain McMickan's side and, addressing the people on the Moore, enquired, "Are there any of my friends who want me to go to New York tonight?"

"We all do," came the shouted reply.

"Then, I will go," said Mr O'Brien, determinedly, adding, after a pause, "if only out of compliment to the coward."

MONTREAL, May 11.—This morning Mr O'Brien was received at the Bonaventure depot by a moderate number of enthusiastic Irish people, but not as numerous as expected, and on landing was presented by Mr Cloran, President of the National Association, with the address of welcome.

Mr O'Brien replied at some length, saying in the course of his remarks:—"I am at a loss to find words to express my gratitude for the warmth with which my fellow countrymen rally around me and my friend, Mr Kilbride, in our struggle on behalf of the poor and oppressed against their powerful oppressor. I never believed that the Canadian people, whose Parliament has again and again testified its sympathies for Home Rule in Ireland, and for our suffering people, would refuse me common fair play. I never believed and never will believe it, and the result will be the discrediting of the false prophecies of those who said the contrary. We come not to offer offence, not to meddle in Canadian affairs, not to deal with the career of Lord Lansdowne as Governor-General, but as the exterminator of 500 human beings. We cannot expect everybody to agree with us, but have such a strength of justice on our side that when they hear what we have to say they will agree with us. I have the most unbounded confidence that when we have shown the people of Canada the conduct of Lord Lansdowne as a landlord to the unfortunate tenants they will stretch out their hands and save these poor people's lives and properties, for both are at this moment at your mercy."

FURTHER EXPLANATION.

Being interviewed by a reporter, he said:—"It is not with the Governor-General but with Lord Lansdowne, the evictor, I have to deal, and I deal with him in Canada because he has taken advantage of his position here, outside the range of Irish public opinion, to be the first to carry out a system of clearances unexampled since the time of the great famine. It is asserted that he cannot defend himself, but he took advantage of his absence in Canada to prosecute wholesale evictions in Ireland. Besides, the ordinary channel of the newspaper, as well as by the help of an exceedingly astute agent, he has been enabled to place his views before the world. Lord Lansdowne's great difficulty is that he has an exceedingly bad case, and I am not at all certain he is not glad to conceal the weakness of his case by the plea that his position closes his mouth. With regard to the pretence that Agent Denning, of Tullamore, offered concession to the tenantry without the landlord's knowledge or consent, Trenche's letter to Denning admitted that the latter was acting to the former's authority. We have the letter in our possession. Trench does not deny that, unsolicited by us, a treaty was struck on the eve of our departure for Canada. We accepted the treaty on Saturday, and the newspapers in England, Ireland and Scotland were full of it. Our departure was delayed. During the four days that followed Trench made no effort to contradict it. We wired our acceptance. On Tuesday we got a reply from Denning, not simply a repudiation but a new and ridiculous proposal, which would make the original arrangements abortive. Meantime the opinions of some Canadian members were published in all the London papers threatening that if I visited Canada I would require police protection. It was then for the first time I got the announcement of Lord Lansdowne's repudiation.

aboard here." There was a wild cheer at this. A ladder was run up to the steamship's rail, after fore and aft lines had been made fast, and Dr. A. W. Smith, brother of the health officer of the port, ran up the ladder. He went through the form so far as Mr. O'Brien, Bishop Ireland and Mr Denis Kilbride, were concerned, and then Crptain McMickan asked him to pass the ship. Dr. Smith evidently thought that the steamship people had not earned any special courtesy, for, notwithstanding Captain McMickan's repetition of his request, with the added plea that by so doing Dr Smith could save the ship valuable time, the doctor told the commander that he would have to take his turn.

Just as Mr. O'Brien landed on the deck of the Moore the after line of the boat parted and her stern swung away, thus preventing the disembarking of Mr. Kilbride, who was the first tenant evicted by Lord Lansdowne and who accompanied Mr. O'Brien on his tour. Mr. O'Brien was greeted enthusiastically by the New Yorkers, with whom were Judge W. W. Dougherty, of the Boston Reception Committee; Mr. T. M. Brady, President of the Boston Common Council; Hugh McCaffrey and Mr. Luke Dillon, of Philadelphia; Mr. Edward D. Moore, of the Pittsburg Council, and others.

Lucknow.

PERSONAL.—Last Sabbath J. A. McGillivray, B.A., who formerly assisted Rev. Dr. Ure with the charge here, preached an impressive sermon, in which he called the attention of his hearers to the word "Come." In the Bible it could be found on nearly every page. That showed God was ever asking for followers to His home, and warned us not to put off till to-morrow. The choir sang at the end of the service, "There is Room for All." After the service many came forward for a friendly shake of the hand, and congratulated him on his recent graduation, and his call to the charge of Melville church, Montreal. It is to be hoped that through his labors many may be gathered to that home where there is room for all.

Mr. J. Healy has sold his bay gelding to Mr. J. Tobin, of Dunlop, for a good figure.

TEMPERANCE.—Last Friday evening, at the regular meeting of the I. O. G. T., No. 213, Bro. Peter Stuart installed the officers for the new quarter in the absence of our L. D.:—W. C., Bro. G. W. Clutton; W. V. T, Sister Martha MacManus; W. S, Bro. S. B. Williams; W.A.S, Sister Edith Horton; W.F.S., Bro. W. H. Clutton; W.T., Bro. J. Horton; W.M., Bro. F. B. Linfield; I. G., Sister R. Gordon; W.O G., Bro. W. Carter. The Lodge, during the past quarter, added five new names to its membership. Two entertainments were held, and both were made interesting by lively debates. Home talent in one showed that man's intellect was ahead of woman's, and in the other the Literary Society of the High School, Goderich, sent a deputation, consisting of Taylor, Allen and Fowler, for a friendly discussion on Annexation. The home talent won the decision, but on the return debate lost on the Home Rule question. The debt on the organ, purchased some time ago, has been paid off, and the Lodge starts this term out of debt and out of danger. Arrangements are on foot for the annual picnic on the 24th inst.

FROM WASHINGTON.

What Has Transpired at the United States Capital.

The Queen of Hawaii—Secretary Lamar Excuses His Absence from the State Dinner in Her Honor.

From our Special Correspondent.

Washington, May 9.

Secretary Lamar did not attend the State dinner given in honor of the Queen of the Sandwich Islands at the White House on Friday evening, and the gossips were ready with an explanation. They said it was on account of the complexion of the dusky sovereign. This accusation made it necessary, of course, for the Secretary to come forward with his own explanation. He said the true instigation for his non-appearance was neuralgia, from which he has suffered ever since the delivery of that memorable oration at the unveiling of the Calhoun statue in Charleston. He further vouchsafed the information that he very much regretted his inability to sit at dinner with Hawaii's Queen, which he felt would have been a high honor.

Kapiolani could not but be pleased with her reception at the United States Capital, if distinguished attentions were what she most desired, Victoria could scarcely have had more honors done her in the same length of time than did the Queen of the little kingdom in the Pacific. The President's wife returned her call at the White House in less than two hours—the limit allowed by the royal etiquette in returning visits.

The ladies of the Cabinet and the members of the members of the Cabinet called on the Queen at her hotel. An entertainment was given in her honor at the Hawaiian Legation as well as at the White House. A review of troops was made for her benefit. She was taken to Mount Vernon on the United States steamer Despatch, and she was the recipient of various other attentions from private organizations and distinguished individuals.

The royal visitor attended two American amusements while here—the races and the circus. At the latter place there was nothing to distinguish her majesty's seat from those around her, not even a cushion. She had to sit on the hard board bench just like her common neighbors. There was nothing official connected with her visit there, which was made at her own suggestion, and of course she took her lot with the common herd. It was not even known that royalty was present, and she was permitted to walk through the three inches deep dust in passing in and out of the grounds as entirely free from any pressure of public attention as if she had been nobody in particular.

The Queen scarcely spoke to her companions during the performance, and the noisy racket of the clowns seemed to have no satisfaction for her. But when the elephant tossed the clown about the ring it made her laugh, and when the clown's turn came to batter the gigantic beast out of breath and finally lay him prostrate in the arena, (the elephant having been trained to lie down) her majesty guffawed outright.

On the Queen's trip to Mount Vernon, nice customs courtesy to Kings, was rigidly observed. She was escorted to the steamer past a line made up of officers of the Navy yard gathered to do her homage, while a royal salvo of twenty-one guns was fired. Inside the cabin Kapiolani found herself the centre of a distinguished company. The Diplomatic Corps was generously represented by the ministers from Chili, Venezuela, the Netherlands, Austria, Japan, Turkey, Switzerland, the Russian "Charge d'affaires," and the Chinese Secretary of Legation.

Our own Government was represented by officials of the War, State and Navy Departments, members of the Supreme Court, and by members of the Senate and House Committees on Foreign Relations, besides sixty or seventy other persons of recognized importance in politics or society.

The commander of the Despatch made a little speech of welcome to the Queen, in which he informed her that by order of the Secretary of the Navy, who was delighted to do any service to a beautiful woman, he would place her in command of the vessel. Kapiolani was evidently unprepared for a speech. She seemed slightly embarrassed, fidgeted with her fan a moment, hesitated, and spoke slowly, expressing her regrets that her limited command of English would not allow her to say that she was delighted with the hospitality of the American people.

When they arrived at Mount Vernon the commanding officer besought the Queen's gracious permission to anchor. At this point she deprecated too much attention, and said, "Please do what is customary or required by the occasion. But he was not to be baffled in regard to the dues of royalty, and whenever he wanted to fire a salute, start the vessel, or run up a flag, he followed royal ceremonies to the letter.
