SIR WILFRID LAURIER

personally led the acclaim, demonstrated something of the sentiment now pervading the Liberal party, while a distinctive feature of the night was the contribution of Senator Wm. Ross of Halifax, who is approaching 90 years, and was the veteran of the gathering. Senator Ross, who is an elder in the Presbyterian Kirk at Halifax, sang Norman Duncan's Gaelic translation of "Highland Mary," and was greeted with the heartiest cheers. "I am an old man," said the nonagenarian, in acknowledging the applause, "but I hope and expect to live to see yon man, our chief, back in his rightful place of prime minister again," whereupon the applause broke out anew.

Sir Wilfrid proposed the toast to "Tom Low," and his good wife in his happiest vein, dwelling upon the unselfish and splendid work done by both in the campaign. "I toast not the victor," said Sir Wilfrid, "his turn will come later. I toast the twain who made the victory possible." Mr. Low's services, the chief added, would never be forgotten.

Mr. Low spoke briefly in response. He attributed the victory most largely to the love of the Liberal chief which prevailed in the constituency, and both Mrs. Low and himself had been grateful for the opportunity of assisting in demonstrating that Ontario was still "all right," and only anxious for the opportunity to atone for the errors of the past.

Toast to Mr. Graham.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald, of Pictou, proposed the toast to Mr. and Mrs. Graham, to which the member-elect for South Renfrew responded. The victory, he said, had been a great vindication of clean politics, and a stinging rebuke by upright Conservatives to a Government which had not hesitated to violate the sanctity of a pledge. Both Mr. Low and Mr. Graham were given rousing receptions.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux proposed the toast to the Liberal leaders in two of the sister provinces, Mr. N. W. Rowell and Mr. A. B. Copp. Both responses, for Ontario and New Brunswick, rang with optimism of the ultimate triumph of Liberalism.

Mr. E. B. Devlin, M. P. for Wright, proposed the health of the Liberal workers and honorable Conservatives of South Renfrew, to which Dr. Connolly, president of the South Renfrew Liberal Association, responded in a capital speech, which was warmly applauded.

Tribute to Sir Wilfrid.

It fell to the lot of Dr. Michael Clark, Red Deer, to propose the final toast of the evening, to "Our Chief." "The advent of George Graham," he said, "will help to swell the growing tide of optimism which our grand old chief has inaugurated throughout the whole of Canada.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose rising was the signal for prolonged cheering, expressed his appreciation of the wonderful loyalty and love of the members of the Liberal party, who had an eloquent and masterly spokesman in "my dear, good friend, Dr. Clark." His affection for Liberalism grew stronger with advancing years. It was part of himself now. "I have given it the best that is in my heart, the best that is in my soul, the best that is in my being," condnued Sir Wilfrid. "I have endeavored ever since my entrance into public life to do my best not only for our party, but for our country. I do not disguise that I am a party man, that I try to win; but whether we win or lose, in the true and final analysis we need only be concerned as to whether we have loyally and faithfully done our duty. It is true that the last time we failed. In the old days of the French Revolution the general who was unlucky was deposed, and he was fortunate, indeed, if he escaped with his head; but you, my dear friends, have been different far. I awoke on the morrow after defeat to find myself not cast aside, but surrounded by an even greater devotion and loyalty than, perhaps, I ever experienced while I was Prime Minister. My good friends, this cannot but touch me. It has touched me deeply. It is even more reward than anything that has yet fallen to my lot in life.

A Worthy Cause.

"There is another thing," continued the chief. "We have fallen for a cause, aye, and the best of causes. Looking back tonight over the events of the past fifteen years, I have nothing to regret, not even defeat. If it were to be done over again I would be ready again to fall in the same issue. When Dr. Clark was speaking a moment ago it came to my mind that he was one of those splendid British Liberals who had personally fought behind the greatest Liberal of the nineteenth century, and my thoughts reverted to the words of the great Gladstone, when he fell on a policy calculated and designed to benefit a country which had been much wronged for many centuries: 'Time is with us.' That is my word to the Liberals of Canada in the hour of temporary defeat. We have fallen in a cause that is noble, and time is with us. (Prolonged cheering).

"We have lost, it is true," proceeded Sir Wilfrid, "but they cannot take away from us what has been accomplished. We are proud that we left Canada in a different position from that in which we found it sixteen years ago. Only the other day in the House of Commons, Mr. Foster, commenting on the deplorable fact that wheat is lying rotting on the fields of the great northwest, and seeking to escape from the responsibility of the situation, attributed it to the fact that the Transcontinental Railway had not been proceeded with more rapidly. What better encomium of the enterprise of building the railway could be forthcoming from the ranks of those who met the project with opposition when it was conceived? They say, too, that it is costing too much, but no money could be better employed. I care not that they are in office and we are in Opposition, while, from day to day, we are rewarded by such indorsement from the ranks of our friends the enemy; that day by day they give testimony to the fact that the policy of Liberalism was the policy of nation-building, of developing and expanding this wonderful common country of ours.

A Certain Triumph.

"Whether, as Dr. Clark has suggested, the Liberal party shall come back to its own or not on the next occasion of appeal to the electors is, after all, the last consideration of those which should dominate Liberalism. My first and most earnest desire is to have the party continue in the path in which I have humbly endeavored to lead it. That we shall triumph ultimately I have no doubt. In the meantime, let us remember that our first duty is to our country. Let us continue the work in Opposition to which we devoted our energies when in office. I rejoice that, notwithstanding all appeals to race and prejudice, all the elements that constitute the Canadian people are more harmoniously welded together than they were fifteen years ago. There are prejudices still, no doubt, It may be that these must continue for several generations yet, but we have laid down the elements of union and brotherhood. Let us do our part to develop a united Canadian people, free from prejudices and those other things which go only to cause unrest and turmoil, and to hamper the upbuilding of the splendid people we are destined to be. Do not mistake me. I am not indifferent to the possession of power, but let us keep in mind the great truth that possession of power is not the supreme end. The prosperity and progress of Canada is the supreme end for true Liberals. That our opponents may reap where we have sown is, after all, only a secondary consideration.

Gave His Best.

"One word more to my fellow-Liberals," added the chief. "I was ready to serve to the best of my ability either in the ranks or wherever you might put me. No man has appreciated the wonderful spirit of affection which has been vouchsafed to me in the hour of defeat. Very deeply do I appreciate the continuance of your confidence, and I am prepared to remain at the head of the party so long as you want me and so long as God spares me and blesses me with the perfect good health that He is giving me today."

The gathering, ladies and gentlemen, sprang to their feet and for several moments the banquet hall rocked with applause until Sir Wilfrid finally held up his hand to desist.

"I care not whether I am in office or Opposition," he finally continued, evidently moved. "I am well rewarded indeed with such generous acclaim."

"And," he aded warmly, "the one thing that particularly touched me in Dr. Clark's altogether too generous speech was the thoughtful and kindly reference to my good wife. I know the advantage of a good wife. When first we started the path of life together she was in good health, while I was the delicate one, and she then formed the habit of controlling me. Now, when we are old, I have the good health. I don't know that I am seventy years of age. When I go to my arithmetic and subtract 1841 from 1911 I find that the result is seventy, but that is the only evidence I have of it. (Cheers.) Yes, I thank God that I am in such splendid health.

Hon. Edward Blake.

"There are other things that from time to time recall the flight of years. Yesterday there passed to the great beyond one who in the olden days was my friend and master. Edward Blake is no more. No Liberal can be indifferent to that event. He was the man who planted the seeds of Liberalism in the early days. None but those who came into close contact with him can realize what he did toward the development of those principles which we all hold dear. It is one of the sad, sad things in life that memory is so short. The Canadian people of today do not realize how much they owe Blake. Canada has lost one of her ablest sons, her greatest lawyers and her most brilliant Parliamentary orators. We never knew the full measure of his stature until he was gone and it was too late. He was a giant in intellect. He was dominated by lofty views and he taught the lesson of true Liberalism. Tonight I am reminded I, who was his disciple, am almost as old as he was, yet I am spared in splendid health. We do not, we cannot, follow understandingly the decrees of Providence. We can only reverently bow to the unerring will of the Eternal Being, though we do not always see what he means; but God rules, and is right, and the lesson which is ours is that every one of us shall earnestly and reverently determine to use and consecrate the gifts which God has given us to the service of our common country."

"That," concluded the Liberal Chief, "is now and forever the mission to which I have assigned myself, and with Divine help my resolve is to carry it out in the future as in the past."

As Sir Wilfrid resumed his seat he was accorded a remarkable ovation, the ladies waving their kerchiefs and the men cheering enthusiastically.

HEARING GOES ON

Sugar Refining Case Has Been Pending in Courts for Years.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, March 4. — The Government's suit against officials and directors of the American Sugar Refining Company was down for trial today on the calendar of the United States district court. More than two and a half years have elapsed since the finding of the indictment, which charges conspiracy in restraint of trade. The defendants pleaded not guilty on July 7, 1909, and have been under bail since then. There have been several postponements, the londest one due to the fight based on the contention that the state of litigations intervened.

COMING TO LONDON WHEN DEATH CAME

Very Sudden Was the Death of Mr. Joseph S. Fallows on Saturday.

BUILT THE WATERWORKS

Also Constructed Bridges and Fences on the C. P. R. From Woodstock to Windsor.

As announced in Saturday's Advertiser, death came with startling suddenness to Mr. Joseph Seymour Fallows, of Chenley Court Farm, West Nissouri, on Saturday at noon. He had prepared to come in to London with his son Howard. When the latter drove up, Mr. Fallows was seized with a fainting spell. Dr. Babb, of Thamesford, was at once summoned, but the patient rallied, and it was not considered dangerous. He sat in a chair joking with the physician, when his heart action stopped, and he died at once.

"Governor" Fallows, as he was affectionately known among a large circle of friends, was one of the pioneer residents of West Nissouri. Born at Chenley Court, in Birmingham, England, in August, 1838, he came to Canada, going directly to West Nissouri, where he purchased the farm on which he had lived ever since. He cleared one of the first farms in this district.

After following the pursuit of farming for some time, he engaged in the contracting business, and for some years was a railway contractor. He built all the bridges on the C. P. R. from Woodstock to Windsor, and had large contracts on other lines as well.

Built Waterworks.

The London city waterworks was erected by him in 1878-79.

Later he engaged in various other business pursuits. Some years ago he retired to the farm, where he had lived ever since. He was married when quite a young man, to Miss Kathrine Keene, who also came from Birmingham. Mrs. Fallows and one son, Howard, living near the homestead, survive.

Another son, Dr. John Fallows, met a tragic death in England some twelve years ago. He was on the steamer Mohican, wrecked off the coast of Cornwall, and in trying to save the life of a patient, a southern lady, he was drowned. This occurrence was a hard blow to the family.

Mr. Fallows' brother, John, was the first Tory lord mayor of Birmingham, England, and was widely known as a politician.

Chenley Court Farm, the residence of "Governor" Fallows, was a favorite spot with a number of Londoners. The hospitality and kind-heartedness of the host were proverbial, and a visitor was always assured of the heartiest welcome. He was known far and wide, and numbered his friends by the score.

FATALLY BURNED

Crowd Coming From Theatre Witnesses Terrible Accident.

[Canadian Press.]

Fort William, March 4.—The crowd leaving the Orpheum Theatre Saturday afternoon were witnesses of a tragedy that ended a few hours later in death for the man whom they beheld as a living torch. Hector Salvatore and three other laborers employed by Seaman & Penniman, contractors for a new block on the corner of Victoria avenue and Syndicate street, were working in the excavation, when in some way Salvatore's clothing caught fire. He rushed outside from under the floor of the first story, and stood for a moment before the startled crowd coming from the theatre next door. Several men rushed toward him, pulling off the coat in which he was wrapped, as he sank to the ground. The blaze was extinguished and the man taken to the hospital, but he had breathed in the flames, and from the start his life was despaired of. He leaves a widow and seven small children.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Dr. Yeuell's Addresses Attract Many People in London.

It was remarked last evening by an old member of the First Congregational Church that the great audience present reminded of the palmy days, and all hearts were gladdened. The end of the first week of Dr. Yeuell's work gives ample assurance that a great revival is developing. His sermons yesterday were marked by great power and pathos, and his genius in preaching renders it impossible to give an idea of the effect by repeating the words of his sermon. His whole heart is in his every utterance, and hence the message comes with convincing power.

A union communion service of the First Congregational Church, and the Dundas Street Christian Church was held in the morning. On Saturday evening Dr. Yeuell delighted all in his lecture, "The Story Beautiful and Tragical." This was an illustrated lecture, the matchless pictures shown having been made from the world's most famous paintings, based on the New Testament characters and scenes, and the powerful lantern the lecturer has with him, with such pictures, combine to make each Saturday evening a chance not to be missed, and renders the whole Bible story more understandable, and easier to believe. Dr. Yeuell graphically describes the scenes presented. Dr. Yeuell is an untiring and consecrated worker, and is speaking at the shops to men at the noon hour nearly every day.

REV. DR. HANNON ILL

First Methodist Church Sends a Letter of Sympathy.

Word having reached the First Methodist Church that Rev. Dr. Hannon was probably very near death, a letter of deep sympathy was sent him through his minister in St. Marys, by the First Church officials. His ballot, however, was received, and counted in favor of union.

Stork Is Busy.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Appin, March 4. — Appin's population took one of the biggest jumps last week that it has had in years. This was not due to any new factories coming or land booms, but to the activity of the stork. Triplets at one home, twins at another, and a fine boy at another are the vital statistics.

The boy arrived first at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas King. Twins were next left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hull, and there was double rejoicing. The climax, however, was reached when on the same day triplets were born at the home of Mr. and Mrs Brooks. All are fine healthy babies.

Music and Drama

Enjoyable Concert.

The concert given in the Auditorium on Saturday evening by the Chicago Glee Club quartette, was one of the most enjoyable of the series. The building was crowded to the door, the former appearance of the quartette being pleasantly remembered.

In addition to vocal selections the quartette gave some delightful trombone numbers, the most pleasing being an arrangement of the sextette from "Lucia."

Mr. H. H. Dixon recited some of James Whitcombe Riley's poems in a finished manner.

Marks Company Three Nights.

They have arranged to play here the first half of this week. Special matinee Wednesday. They are playing to capacity at every performance. Tonight they will play "East Lynne." Tomorrow night they will play "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Wednesday matinee, "Kathleen Mavoureen." Wednesday night, "Farmer's Daughter." Friday night and twice Saturday they played to capacity, every seat was occupied, every box was filled, and hundreds of people had to turn reluctantly away. May A Bell Marks, by her consistent work, has won the goodwill of local theatregoers and has made a decided hit in London. They will doubtless play to large houses for their engagement this week. The winners at the baby show on Saturday afternoon were: First prize of a diamond ring to the baby girl of Mrs. Bowen, 101 Wellington street, and second prize of silver cup to baby boy of Mrs. Ryan, Pall Mall street.

"Brewster's Millions."

It is perhaps not too much to say that George Barr McCutcheon's story, "Brewster's Millions," has had as many, if not more readers than any American work of fiction recently published. It is, therefore, natural that the combined armies of fiction readers and theatregoers will look forward to the appearance of Louis Kimball in Frederick Thompson's production of this celebrated story at the Grand Friday and Saturday nights, special matinee Saturday, of this week.

FREDERICK THOMPSON,
The producer of "Brewster's Millions" and other notable dramatic and spectacular successes.

Within the bounds of probability, Mr. McCutcheon's story has an intensely fantastic scheme. It turns the mad chase for dollars topsy-turvy and disposes entirely of the almost universal belief that money is essential to either happiness or contentment. Frederick Thompson's name as sponsor for the dramatic presentation of "Brewster's Millions" is sufficient warrant for public confidence in the excellence of the company and the completeness of the pictorial surroundings. The sale of seats begins Wednesday, 9 a.m.

FARMERS READY TO GATHER MAPLE SYRUP

All Around Ingersoll Owners of Sugar Bushes Are Preparing for Big Yield.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ingersoll, Mar. 4.—Although weather of mid-winter severity still prevails, there is activity in surrounding rural districts that creates the impression that spring is not far distant. Some of the farmers are beginning to give thought to their sap buckets, and very often he is a wise farmer who has spiles, buckets and boiling pans in readiness to receive the first good flow of sap. Quite a number of experienced farmers have predicted a good run of sap this spring, owing to the unusual amount of frost in the ground.

About the most appreciated feature in connection with Saturday's market was a pronounced drop in some of the prices. Butter and eggs were more plentiful than for weeks. In a few cases butter was sold at 30 cents per pound, although 35 cents was the ruling figure. Eggs sold freely at 30 cents a dozen, and the demand was keen.

Many citizens learned with regret of the death of Effie Borland, relict of the late J. H. Borland, which occurred at the family residence, Charles street west, after a long and severe illness. She was in her 70th year, and is survived by one daughter, Miss Annie, at home, and several grown-up sons.

FARMERS' BANK PROBE OPENS IN TORONTO

Sir William Meredith and Others Will Make a Thorough Investigation Shortly.

[Canadian Press.]

Toronto, March 4. — The opening meeting of the royal commission, presided over by Chief Justice Sir William Ralph Meredith, to inquire into the affairs of the Farmers' Bank, was held this morning at Osgoode Hall. As Sir William indicated, it was for the purpose of organization solely and to arrange for future meetings He suggested that he would be at liberty on Monday next and for several days following, and Frank Hodgins, K.C., who represents the Government, asked that the next sitting be held in Ottawa, and that the date be set for Wednesday, March 13, as the first witnesses he wished to examine were connected with the treasury board. This proved satisfactory to the commissioner and those representing the various parties interested, and that date was set for the resumption of the inquiry. It is expected that the Ottawa witnesses can all be examined in three days, and if so the commission will resume in Toronto on Monday, March 18.

Go Into History.

The commission will inquire into the composition and organization of the bank; the application for and the giving of a charter to the bank to carry on business; the conduct and operation of the business of the bank; the cause of its failure, its capital and assets.

William Laidlaw, K.C., was present to watch proceedings on behalf of the contributories, and W. C. Mickel, K.C., of Belleville, and James Nairn, K.C., were in attendance to perform a similar service for the depositors and liquidators. D. I. Grant announced that he was in attendance in the interests of certain parties who had been directors of the bank, and H. H. Dewart, K.C., who represented Travers at the former investigations, and who arrived just as the adjournment was made, said he held "a watching brief."

After adjournment Mr. Hodgins informed Mr. Dewart that he did not know at present whether he would examine the late manager or not. He also stated that he would like to examine Mr. Fielding, but understood he was abroad.

BRITISH FACTORIES

tion. The miners are making holiday. They are, as they put it, "having their fling," while the nation suffers, the poor go cold and hungry, and their fellow-workers are turned into the streets.

The industrial council has been summoned to meet today. It is a body of 26 businessmen and labor representatives, and has no compulsory powers. A statement by the Prime Minister in Parilament today is expected. Unless the arrangements are altered there will be no discussion between the Government and th miners' executive committee, until tomorrow evening. Whatever the executive committee decides must be ratified by the federation, which usually takes two days to assemble."

MEN MARKING TIME.

London, March 3.—The coal strike, the greatest in the history of the British Isles, is marking time over the week-end. One satisfactory feature is the complete absence of any disorders in the districts affected. All negotiations looking to a settlement have ceased, as the leaders who were recently gathered in London have dispersed to various parts of the country to attend to local matters in connection with the strike.

Labor leaders, in speeches during the last day or two, have insisted upon the far-reaching importance of supporting the miners, because now that the Government has decided to institute a minimum wage in connection with the mines, it will be impossible much longer to withhold the establishment of a minimum wage in all industries. Thus, they contend, the strike will become a triumph for the cause of labor all around.

Up to Government.

The next word is with the Government, and Premier Asquith's promised statement tomorrow is awaited with the greatest interest. The parliamentary whips, however, have not yet made any arrangement for the introduction of a minimum wage bill.

At a mass meeting of the dock workers of Bristol today a resolution was adopted to the effect that imports of foreign coal should not be handled.

Most of the railways announce a further curtailment of their services, beginning tomorrow. Fourteen stations in London will be closed down altogether until the strike ends.

Paris, March 3. — The possibility of the French miners following the example of British workers, while remote, nevertheless exists. This subject was discussed by the National Congress recently held at Angers, but the decision was left entirely to the discretion of the executive committee of the Miners' Federation, who, it is known, will order a strike only in the event of Parliament acting unfavorably on various reforms for which the miners are now agitating, so that a strike of French miners could not, strictly speaking, be considered a movement in support of the English strikers.

May Call Strike.

Several district committees of miners have voted in favor of a twenty-four hours' strike on March 11, with the possibility of continuing it indefinitely if Parliament does not take the hint. But the attitude of a majority of the miners in France appears to be on the whole conservative.

The executive committee, which met at Lens yesterday, maintains the strictest secrecy with respect to any conclusions reached, but it may be remarked that prominent members of the Anzin union discredit the act of the secretary of the Anzin committee, who telegraphed on Friday to the British Miners' Federation, congratulating the British workers on the coal strike, and adding: "In a few days the French miners will strike." They declare that he did this on his own responsibility, and characterized his action as an abuse of power.

Buy From Americans.

New York, March 4.—The strike in the British coal fields has caused heavy purchases here of practically all the available supplies of soft coal in the coal ports in and near New York and at Philadelphia and Baltimore in order to meet the needs of the foreign steamship companies using the Atlantic seaboard. Local coal market prices for immediate and prompt deliveries have arisen sharply in consequence.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS DR. YEUELL ON SUNDAY

Addressed Appreciative Listeners in the Auditorium on "Samson."

There was a large attendance of men at the Auditorium Sunday to hear Dr. Yeuell's address on Samson. The delineation of the character was well portrayed. Dr. Yeuell possesses a great deal of personal magnetism, and is intensely dramatic. He said that Samson was a most attractive individual because of his natural beauty and strength, but it was surprising to him that of the many foolhardy things which Samson did, that he should have been chosen to judge Israel for years. "You cannot always tell a man's strength or power by looking at his physical makeup. Samson was strong physically, but he whined like a petted boy when things did not go his way. Many a man has lost his power by playing with sin, as Samson was shorn of his strength when he allowed himself to fall into the hands of the enemy." Dr. Yeuell told in a graphic way of the conversion of John B. Gough, stating that because of the message which John B. Gough left to the young men of the world, "Young man, keep your record clean," has been held all over the world, and through this message thousands of young men have been helped, and like Samson, he was greater in his death than in his life.
