POLITICS AT COBOURG.

Mr. Blake and Sir Charles Tupper Measure Swords.

TWO PARTIES DEFENDED.

A Grand Rally of West Northumberland's Electorate.

HOW THE SURPLUS WAS OBTAINED

Mr. Blake Says the Liberals Will Not Interfere With Trade.

(Special Despatch to The Toronto World.)

COBOURG, Dec. 15.—According to the statement of the chairman of the meeting the audience at Victoria hall to-night was the largest concourse of people ever assembled in Cobourg. The place down stairs was densely packed and in the gallery were a large number of ladies. The best order prevailed throughout. At 7.30 Mr. Blake and Sir Charles Tupper accompanied by the leading local men, who, too, took seats on the stage of the hall. Both statesmen were loudly applauded on their appearance before the public. Mr. Blake quietly took a seat to the right of the chairman. Sir Charles, on the left, politely bowed to the audience three or four times, while he relieved himself of has fur cap and Persian lamb coat. According to the arrangement of the meeting one hour was to be allowed Sir Charles, Mr. Blake to follow with the rest of the evening at his disposal. The speech of the former was, briefly stated, a on the virtues of the present government, and on the want of ability in the opposition. He declared it was a good thing to be able to show a surplus of four millions, and stated boldly that the reformers, when in office, were willing to give sixty million more for building the Pacific railway than was given to the syndicate by the present government. The audience apparently swallowed the assertion and applauded the knight to the skies for this wonderful statement. In regard to the above sixty million dollars, as afterwards remarked by Mr. Blake. Sir Charles' speech was rather an old one, and sounded a little wearisome in mine ears, to speak politically. Mr. Blake's speech was of quite a different nature, and wrestled with facts and figures. Being called on to speak, Sir Charles deplored the

CAME ON THE PLATFORM,

COLLECTION OF BROAD ASSERTIONS

and then paid a gallant tribute to the beauty and fashion of Cobourg, which he was pleased to observe so largely represented in the gallery. He said that as he had just returned from the west on an as extensive a visit as had ever been made by any public man of Canada in the same period of time, having travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific, he was in a position to know the state of the country, and he defied any person to show him a country that was more prosperous and exhibited more progress than Canada now did. The adoption of the national policy by the government, had caused Canada to be respected by the Americans, who now recognized us as a people and an ability to legislate for ourselves. Sir Charles then proceeded to explain why he had styled Mr. Blake as the special pleader of the desperate condition of the reform party, and contrasted his sluggish support to Mr. Mackenzie with his present political activity. He attached great importance to this election because the Globe had asserted that the result of this contest would be the key-note in Ontario in the next general election. If that were true it was the duty of the supporters of the government policy to show to capitalists whose money was now being so largely that national industries would be safe and not threatened with depression by a reversion of the national policy. After he had spoken for forty minutes, Sir Charles referred to the Pacific railway, and produced figures and made computations to show that the reformers were willing and anxious to have the railway built at a cost exceeding that of the present contract at $60,000,000. The second syndicate was an insult to the country, and the most transparent sham ever placed before the country. Even if it had been a genuine offer the government would have treated it with contempt. The total value of money and wealth represented by the second syndicate was $2,600,000, as estimated and computed by Bradstreets and those who know the financial position of the capitalists of the country.

WITH COMMENDABLE SPIRITS

Mr. Blake, on coming forward, was loudly and enthusiastically applauded. He spoke for exactly three hours. After some introductory remarks he said that among the reasons of the increased prosperity of the country was the increased export of agricultural products and lumber. In 1878-79 the amount of these exports was $46,000,000; in 1879-80 it was $56,000,000, and for the last six months of the official year the amount was $45,000,000, showing clearly the increased prosperity came from our extended markets, and not from our legislation at Ottawa. The speaker very forcibly explained the meaning of a surplus of 4,000,000 in the government treasury. It was not a reason for because they had a surplus, but rather a forcible indictment against them for taking hard-earded money out of the pockets of the people whose interests they were supposed to represent. Where did that surplus come from? $400,000 of it came from the duty on coal, and $365,000 on our breadstuffs. In Ontario not only had nature handicapped us with very severe weather and no corresponding supply of coal, but the government had imposed a duty on this article so as to further handicap us artificially, and to refuse to take advantage of the natural resources of the coal supply in Pennsylvania and other places. As regards breadstuffs it was of no avail in raising the price of wheat to impose a duty on them except in the case where there was not a surplus of wheat in the country. The price of wheat at Liverpool decided the price of that article here, and the speaker quoted from a commercial article of the Mail to support his statement. The policy of the reform party as regards the tariff

WAS OFTEN MISREPRESENTED

by the other side. The policy of his party was not to introduce such changes in the tariff as would disturb the course of trade, but they would seek to alter their present system so that we should no longer suffer by the inequalities and enormities of the present tariff. He would have a tariff by which a man would be taxed according to his means, and not a tariff that taxed a man according to his poverty and not according to his wealth. Several quotations furnished by wholesale dry goods men were read to prove that the exorbitantly for his coarse cottons and blankets, while the richer individual escaped with much lighter taxation. Among the quotations may be mentioned that of blankets, the speaker showing that while the duty on the best of these articles was 33 per cent., as high as 69 per cent. was charged on such blankets as were used by lumbermen and poor people. Again, the speaker denied that the return of the

would disturb the manufacturing interests of this country. When Mr. Blake stated that the liberal party sought office for no personal triumph but for the triumph of a great cause, and that it was not for these trappings of office and knighthood (looking towards Sir Charles), the audience and Sir Charles, after a short hesitation, took out his pencil and made a note of it. Among the other points touched on were the unwarranted interference by the Dominion in provincial rights, such as their disallowance of the streams bill and their action in the boundary case. The Pacific railway question was dealt upon at length, and the speaker closed his address amid long continued applause.

Sir Charles Tupper then came forward and was loudly applauded. He said if Mr. Blake had known that he (Sir Charles) would have been allowed to reply to him that he (Mr. Blake) would not have ventured to make he did.

Mr. Blake replied that he was very well aware that Sir Charles was going to make such a remark as that, and if he had not made it to-night he would have made it on Saturday night.

Sir Charles rose again, but could not obtain a hearing on account of the great cheering and shouting. He walked over to the reporters' table and spoke to the Mail reporter, saying Mr. Blake knew he (Sir Charles) would make that remark for the reason that it would be deservedly made.

The meeting broke up at midnight with cheers for the candidates and speakers. The Mail was represented by two reporters. Mr. Blake had begun his speech before the single representative of the Globe arrived on the scene, he having come down at the last moment by the local train.

FAIR EMIGRANTS.

Holding out Inducements to Women to Emigrate to Canada—Protecting our New Comers.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—At a meeting of the Woman's Emigration society to-day Lord Lorne presided, and called attention to the great demand in Canada for domestic servants. He pointed out the advantages which Canada possessed over other colonies. He thought that committees sending women to Canada should have affiliated committees in Canada who should send reports to London monthly. He specially dwelt upon the capabilities of the Northwest.

Sir A. T. Galt, resident minister of the Dominion in Great Britain, regretted that the British government had never recognized the importance of protected emigration. He hoped the government would soon meet the liberal offer of Canada, and co-operate in promoting emigration of England's surplus population to the Dominion.

Sir Bartle Frere spoke highly of Canada as a field for emigration.

STUDENTS AND POLICE.

ALMOST A SERIOUS RIOT LAST NIGHT.

A Squad of Twenty Police Accompany 400 Students to Yorkville—Shall Students Sing on the Street—Yorkville Invaded—Toronto Officers Asked to Aid Yorkville.

The seven or eight hundred students assembled in Temperance hall last night filed quietly out of the door into the street after the close of their meeting. They were in twos and threes, and were singing quietly. As the column swung into Yonge street a number of policemen were observed as if awaiting their arrival. By the time Queen street was reached twenty policemen were following the column, which was singing Litoria with some vim. At Queen street the students took the road. A great crowd began to gather. Things looked like a row, and any provocation that was apparent came from the police.

"Leave them alone," said Ald. Love, in a good natured way to some of the officers.

"We are going to stop them," said a sergeant, and thereupon the policeman rushed into the column or rather right along side of it. The men had their batons shoved round to the front and ready for drawing. Sergeant Stark was in command and said he would stop the singing. Whenever a student was seen singing he was requested to stop. But the officers were powerless to stop it. The students began to be nettled but kept their temper. Collisions were on the point of breaking out several times. Above Wilton avenue the column broke into the double. The line of police on their side did the same. This comical race was kept up for a block till every one laughed at it—policemen included. Then the singing began again; then another race in which the police in their heavy coats had hard time to keep up. The officers kept their temper though hot words were every now and then passing between an individual officer and an individual student in which a request for "your number" always formed a part. The twenty policemen were kept hurrying from one end of the column to the other by the strength of the singing. One minute the head of the column would make most noise; the police would rush up to the head; then it would be at the tail and the officers would fall back.

YORKVILLE INVADED.

The students kept right on up Yonge st. and once over Bloor street derisive cheers were given for the police. Sergeant Stark crossed over and stood quietly among the crowd: his men stood on the Toronto side. Then a student was hoisted up and made a speech.

CHIEF CONSTABLE JOHNSTON

of the village here appeared upon the scene. He looked as if he had just got up and was greatly excited. The one-man police force had too much on its hands so it crossed over into Toronto and spoke to the metropolitan force in these words:

"I request you in the name of her majesty the queen, to assist me to disperse thon crowd. I'm a single man."

The Toronto officers were only too ready to comply and they went into Yorkville. The speech was stopped and the students went north though a number called for the riot act to be read. One foolish student wanted the crowd to go in in sixes into French's hotel to get a drink, but the offer was denounced by the students, and Johnston also commanded the hotel man to close up. In a moment all the doors were barred. On up Yonge street the column continued until the hollow was reached, the students singing their songs. At Severn's brewery Sergeant Stark called off his men, and after insisting on one student whom he said seemed to take an active part in the proceedings to give his name, they marched back to the city.

TWO STUDENTS ARRESTED.

It seems that some of the students did not proceed home after they dispersed in Yorkville. Louis Hawkesworth, a law student, came down Yonge street at 1 o'clock. Policeman Long, who says he was acting in a disorderly manner, arrested him.

The other student who fell into the clutches of the police was Robert Murray a medical who hails from Ottawa. Policeman Slemin says he was drunk on Church street at 2 o'clock this morning.

Bail was offered for both prisoners by a number of their fellow students but was refused.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 15.—Edward Brewis has sued the city and village of Duluth to recover coupons overdue on the bonds of the city of Duluth. The legislature created the village of Duluth out of the territory occupied by the city. A demurrer was interposed by the village of Duluth, United States. Judge Nelson overrules the demurrer, and declares the creating of the village of Duluth interferes with the rights of the creditors, most of whom are eastern capitalists.

THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' DEBTS.

The creditors of the Toronto Christian brothers' met at O'Sullivan & Perdue's law office yesterday afternoon. The assets of the order were reported to be: Lands and buildings on Duke street, $8000; vacant lot, $1000; houses and land on George street $6000; furniture, $1163; book debts with a face value of $6000, valued at $1000. This last item is made up of fees owing by parents for their sons' tuition and board. The secured liabilities amount to about $10,000, being as follows: Building and loan association $4700; Merchants bank, $903; G. H. Schreiber, $3220; T. Walsh, $836; P. O'Connor, $362. The unsecured liabilities foot up to nearly $20,000, among the principal creditors being James Britton, $1000; P. Burns, $1376; D. & J. Sadlier (Montreal) $8015; the archbishop of Toronto, $5073; Hughes Bros., $1749; J. Mallon & Co, $753. To meet these claims the brothers have literally nothing. The creditors passed a resolution giving the brothers the option of paying up in one, two and three years without interest, or of paying 85 cents on the dollar within six months The provincial of the order who came up from Montreal to attend the meeting accepted the latter alternative. They will ask the brothers in France to advance the money, proposing to repay them by making an assessment of $50 per year on the salaries of all the brothers in Ontario and Quebec engaged as teachers. In this province the brothers each get $250; in Quebec their salaries run from $120 to $180. They will have little to live on after the $50 is deducted all round.

Fatal Gun Accident.

ASHDOWN, Muskoka, Dec. 15.—On Tuesday of last week a sixteen-year-old son of Mr. Stutters of Cardwell township, Muskoka, went out to visit some traps, taking a gun with him. Before leaving the house he remarked to his sister that if she heard the report of the gun and afterward a whistle, that all was well, but if no whistle then something was wrong. The report but no whistle was heard, and the sister went out and found her brother lying dead some few yards from where the gun had been discharged. It appears that on finding a live mink in the trap he had attempted to strike the animal with the butt end of the gun, when the latter discharged the ball into his side. The body will be conveyed to Seaforth for interment.

NOT A LUNATIC AT ALL.

NONE OF GUITEAU'S FORMER ACQUAINTANCES THINK HIM INSANE.

The Evidence of the Assassin's Divorced Wife Refused—The Prisoner's Dinner Conversation With a Washington Clergyman.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Clarkson N. Potter, Gov. Philips of Vermont, and Cortandt Parker of New Jersey, sat upon the bench to-day. Guiteau said: "Your honor, it will be a great misfortune if anything should happen to this jury. They are very honest, intelligent men and I want the best care taken of them. There are some of them unaccustomed to good wholesome food, consequently they have indigestion. I want the court to order them out every morning for a walk for four or five miles before breakfast. I have two or three more little speeches to make, but this will do for this time."

Judge Cox—"The court will attend to the wants of the jury."

Henry Collier was recalled. Witness never detected any signs of insanity in prisoner.

Re-examined by Corkhill—In my opinion, at the time I knew him the prisoner was perfectly competent to distinguish between right and wrong.

J. M. Justice, a lawyer of Logansport, Ind., met the prisoner in 1878. The prisoner was selling a little book of the life of Moody.

During the examination of this witness Guiteau called him a liar.

Rev. Rush Shipper, pastor of All Souls' church, Washington, boarded in the same house and occupied a seat at the same table with the prisoner from April last until the day before the murder of the president, when he disappeared from the house. Witness had frequent conversations with the prisoner. Both had lived in Chicago, and that formed the basis of their conversations, which led to quite a familiar acquaintanceship. Prisoner was chatty and polite, a little quick or nervous in utterance, but not sufficiently so to indicate a marked peculiarity. Witness never detected anything to indicate insanity and never entertained the slightest suspicion of it in connection with the prisoner. The striking feature of Shipper's testimony was a statement of the usual topics of conversation between himself and prisoner at the table, where they met three times a day, were the Conkling-Garfield emeroglio and the New Testament revision, and on no occasion did prisoner exhibit more excitement than any other person might do, the former being the subject which Guiteau alleges impelled him upon the president. Shippen's testimony is considered of the highest value to the prosecution.

Mrs. Dumiere, formerly the wife of Guiteau, then took the stand. She married prisoner in July 1869.

Scoville objected to the testimony unless a second proof of a divorce was shown.

Witness was then withdrawn, Corkhill remarking that he would introduce witness later, after he obtained the necessary copy of the court record.

Doctor Noble Young, physician at the jail where Guiteau has been confined, related several conversations he had with prisoner. At one time he asked prisoner why he "removed" the president. Prisoner replied, "Because I was inspired to do so," and a little afterwards, "If the president should die I would be convinced that my inspiration was from the deity, but if he should recover I would be in doubt about it."

Witness considered the prisoner a perfectly sane man, and bright, quick and intelligent.

Gen. Jas. A. Reynolds, a lawyer of Chicago, knew prisoner first about May, 1868, in Chicago. Prisoner applied for permission to enter witness' law office as a student. He was allowed to do so and remained some months. He disappeared and in 1875 re-appeared and approached witness on the subject of his Inter-Ocean scheme. Witness thought his ideas on the subject remarkably good and some of them, to witness' knowledge, have since been adopted by the management of that paper. Witness thought at the time that the prisoner would make a successful lawyer if he devoted himself to it.

After recess Guiteau said: "I suppose I have given a thousand autographs since the trial began. It has been suggested that I shall charge twenty-five cents for them, but I decline. We want money, however, for this trial. There are certain office holders in this city and throughout the country that never would have had their positions but for my inspiration. I want these men, if they have got any consciences, to respond to this appeal and send us some money. If they don't do it I shall speak out in a meeting and give their names next time. Some rich men in New York gave Mrs. Garfield several hundred thousand. 'Twas a noble act and I applaud it. Now I want them to give me some. I demand it in the name of justice and right."

No further evidence of interest was manifested from the witnesses. Guiteau exclaimed loudly that he was hungry—he is always hungry—and the court adjourned.
