A good second-hand buggy for sale at A. James.'

Love in this civilized age should be spelled Love.

A large stock of wall paper at Phil. Wiltse & Co.'s.

A year ago all lakes and streams were free of ice and seeding had commenced in some sections.

1,000 calf skins wanted at Mott & Robeson's.

Mr. S. J. Kilpatrick, insurance agent, of Lyn, was in Athens last week and gave the Reporter office a call.

800 yds. all-wool double-fold dress goods for 80c yard, at G. W. Beach's.

This promises to be a poor spring for sugar-making and the present price will probably advance.

Mrs. J. L. Gallagher spent last week with her sister, Mrs. B. J. Saunders, Brockville.

1000 gals. maple syrup wanted at Mott & Robeson's.

A farmer sold a horse for $90 and bought it back for $80 and then sold him for $100. How much did he make in the trade?"

1,000 buyers wanted for the great stock of new spring goods at G. W. Beach's.

The boys are spinning tops once more, the girls are skipping rope, and gentle spring has come again, and come to stay we hope.

Remember, G. W. Beach sells Ferd Rouillon's celebrated kid gloves. Every pair guaranteed.

Mr. Jas. Judson, who has been in Syracuse for the past six months, returned to Athens on Wednesday last and will trim carriages for D. Fisher this spring.

New dress goods at Phil. Wiltse & Co.'s.

At the drawing of the Mount Royal Lottery in Montreal on 15th March, the capital prize of $3,750 was drawn by Miss Pamelia Rancourt of Rat Portage, Ontario.

Carriages built to order, repairing and painting done in first class style at moderate prices.—A. James.

Athens Oddfellows will commemorate the 74th anniversary of the order, which occurs on the 26th inst., by having a special service in the Methodist church on Sunday morning, 23rd inst.

Don't fail to see our new stock of boots and shoes.—Phil. Wiltse & Co.

At McLaughlin's store, Athens, at 2 o'clock p.m., on Saturday, April 15, Mrs. Edw'd Whitmore will offer for sale a number of vehicles and farm implements. Geo. W. Lee, auctioneer.

Money saved by going to Phil. Wiltse & Co.'s for dress goods, boots and shoes.

Dairymen throughout this section will watch with interest the use of the Babcock milk test to be used at Glen Buell factory this season. Later in the season the Reporter will tell them all about it. The factory opened on the 3rd inst.

We will give extra value in dress goods. All the latest styles.—Phil. Wiltse & Co.

Messrs. Hazelton & Son, Delta, the well-known shoemakers, have purchased a large stock of boots and shoes of Montreal manufacture, and, as usual, "Honest Jack" can be relied upon to give his patrons full value for their money. All new goods, remember—see them.

If your druggist says he does not know anything about the cures Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure have affected, write to Peterboro Medicine Co. Limited, Peterboro, Ont. Ask J. P. Lamb, chemist, about it.

D. Waters, Campbellford, Out. says that the Peterboro Medicine Co., (Limited), are at liberty to use his name in the interest of all who may be suffering as he was before he used Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure. Ask J. P. Lamb, Athens, about it.

A Muskoka pastor has declined an addition of one hundred dollars a year to his salary on the ground that the hardest part of his labors hitherto has been the collection of his salary, and it would kill him to undertake the collection of one hundred dollars more.

Referring to the cost of living in Chicago during the World's Fair, the Inter Ocean says that it will be very easy for a rich visitor to spend $25 or $50 per day, and it will be quite as easy for an economist to find a room at the rate of $2.50 per week and feed himself for 75c per day.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft or calloused Lumps and Blemishes from horses, Blood Spavin, Curbs, Splints, Ring Bone, Sweeney, Stifles, Sprains, Sore and Swollen Throat, Coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted by J. P. Lamb.

On Saturday last Miss Lizzie Mills, of Kingston, Ont., was compelled to yawn while preparing breakfast. She has not since been able to close her mouth. The doctors are astonished, but state that the young lady's distressing predicament is due to paralysis of one of the jaws.

Suckers and pike have commenced running.

Mrs. (Dr.) Chamberlain spent last week visiting Mrs. Judd at Morton.

Cheese brought 10½c. in Brockville last week.

Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Flach visited friends in Milton last week.

The Newboro Standard has resumed publication and looks as if its vacation had been beneficial.

A Westport correspondent says that a Brockville printing press will shortly be running in that village.

Do you want 20 pounds of tea? If so, you can save just Two Dollars by getting it at The Tea Store, Brockville.—T. W. Dennis.

Our readers will regret to learn of the misfortunes that befell Messrs. Almeron Robeson and Geo. P. Wight, reported by our Hard Island correspondent this week.

At a meeting of the patrons of Bissell's Willow factory on Wednesday last the following officers were elected: Salesman, Jas. Bissell with Geo. Dudley and Alex. Lawson as assistants; secretary, Andrew McNish; treasurer, H. Bissell.

Richard Downey, a young man of 18 years, was gathering sap in the sugar bush of Virgil Phillips, near Philipsville, on Tuesday last, when a falling limb struck him on the head and broke his skull. He never regained consciousness and died the next day.

A corn festival under the auspices of the Baptist church will be held on Wednesday evening, 19th inst. The bill-of-fare is unique and attractive and the programme to be presented will be excellent. A similar entertainment given at Gouverneur last fall was a big success, and no doubt this will draw a large audience.

Last Tuesday while Mr. G. K. Brennan, an old and highly respected resident of Athens, was transacting business at the banking house of A. Parish & Son, he felt himself growing weak and turned to find a chair, when he fell to the floor insensible, remaining unconscious for some time. We are pleased to say that he is now able to be around all right.

Dr. P. W. Chamberlain, of Morrisburg, has been appointed Inspector of Boards of Health for Eastern Ontario, by the Ontario government. Similar appointments have been made covering the other parts of the province. This is part of the plan of operations decided on to forestall the dreaded cholera. The sanitary regulations will be very strict and enforced fully.

The Globe is authority for the statement that game wardens have been notified not to prosecute any one one for trapping muskrat during April. The law is to be amended so that the the close season will commence on May 1st instead of April 1st as at present. The contemplated change is a very sensible one, and will meet with the approval of all trappers and furriers.

The adjourned inquest in the Kemptville poisoning case was held on Tuesday last, when the evidence adduced fully sustained the jury in the verdict they returned, which is as follows: "We the jury have come to the unanimous decision that Alexander Kennedy came to his death by arsenical poison administered by some person or persons unknown to the jury."

On Tuesday evening last Miss Lucy Kelly, teacher of Lillie's school, Plum Hollow, met with a severe and very painful accident. In company with another lady she was returning from the sugar bush of Mr. Holmes Eyre, seated on a sap sled, when, in passing a large stone, her foot was caught between the stone and sled and her ankle wrenched out of joint. Of course, the pain was intense, but realizing the necessity of prompt action Miss Kelly very pluckily twisted her foot back into its correct position. She was at once conveyed to the residence of her sister, Mrs. C. Niblock, Athens, medical aid summoned, and she is now progressing favorably.

The keen man is quite as apt to come to grief as his dull fellow-mortal. It is the well-sharpened pencil that is most likely to be broken.—Boston Transcript.

Only one person in one thousand dies of old age. So it seems that old age is not so dangerous as the insurance tables would have us believe.—Boston Transcript.

He who went to town meeting Monday to vote on the "ways and means," for another year had to try some mighty mean ways before he got there.—Lowell Courier.

Her Objections Technically Stated.

"You have no objection to me personally, Miss Feathercroft, I hope," remarked the young lady's somewhat elderly admirer.

"Why, Mr. Glaspy," she replied, "you are not acting as a proxy for some other man, are you?"

"As a proxy? Do I understand you correctly, Miss Feathercroft? As a proxy for some other man? Certainly not."

"In asking me to be your wife you meant yours individually, did you not?"

"I certainly did."

"Then my objections to marrying you, Mr. Glaspy, must have some personal application to yourself, must they not?"

"Of course, but—"

"Very good. Let us dispose of this point first. You asked me to marry you. I declined. You inquired whether I had any objections to you personally. I asked you in reply if you were acting as agent for some other man. You said you were not. Now, then, if the fact be considered established that you wish me to marry you and I refuse to do so, it follows inexorably that my refusal is based on the fact that it is you, yourself, whom I do not wish to marry. Do you follow me?"

"I—I think I do," said Mr. Glaspy, somewhat bewildered, "but—."

"One moment. Observe, now, that this refusal has nothing to do with any other man. Hence, whatever reasons I may have for not wishing to marry you apply to you personally, and nobody else. Therefore they are personal to yourself. Is that entirely clear in your mind?"

"Why, yes," gasped the discomfited Mr. Glaspy, helplessly, "but still—."

"Hence, it must be apparent to you," she proceeded, raising her voice, pointing her finger at him argumentatively, and following his now retreating form around the room, "it must be apparent to you that I do have some objections to you personally, and your question, or, rather, your assumption, to characterize it more accurately, was founded on a manifest misconception. I proceed now to give some of my objections. Firstly—"

"You needn't, Miss Feathercroft!" exclaimed Mr. Glaspy, recovering himself. "You needn't proceed to state the objections. I'm glad you've got objections!" he went on, firmly grasping his hat. "But for those objections I might have been by this time the promised husband of a walking rhetoric and female Demosthenes! Thank heaven for the objections! I have the honor, madam, to congratulate myself on escaping a horrible fate and to wish you a very good evening!"

What He Said.

The young man had been to call on the girl the night before and she was expecting to hear something of especial interest to her, but somehow, though he talked a great deal, he did not say those things she wanted to hear most. The next morning her mother, who also was somewhat interested, broached the subject.

"Mr. Henderson stayed quite late last night, didn't he?" she asked.

"Yes, mamma, until 11 o'clock."

"He kept up a very active conversation I should say, from what I heard?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Did he say anything?" the mother asked nervously.

"Yes, mamma."

"What?"

"Well, he said something about nothing I cared to hear and nothing about something I cared to hear," and she broke down and wept from sheer vexation.

A Pointer for Advertisers.

Try to sell your best good first. Talk more about the goods than the price. Most people will pay for what they want. Make them want it. Have an advantage of some point over your competitors, and advertise that point. Don't claim what you haven't got. Don't say yours is the cheapest when some one else undersells you. Don't say it is the best when a better is made. But advertise yours as the only one with a blue stripe, or the only one with sugar in it, or the only one with a brass handle. Add some particular thing worth having to your goods, and let people know it. Immense capital may be required to be the best or the cheapest, but it only requires a little brains or gumption to sell something different from others, and a little better in some respect. Bear this all in mind and prepare it accordingly, and then insert it in the Reporter—and it will bear you fruit of at least a hundred per cent. profit.

The Luckey murder trial will come up at the Brockville assizes which open there a week from Monday. The Kemptville and Gananoque murder cases will be heard at the same court.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

A Touching Estimate of the Character of Major Scott.

IN MEMORIAM.—In its proper place in this issue will be found the obituary notice of Major John M. Scott, whose sudden demise was a shock to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. While many of our readers would no doubt prefer that we filled this space with an account of a murder or an elopement, we cannot let the opportunity pass to say a few words regarding one so closely identified with the interests of this community.

When we entered this town three years ago, we were dead broke and had 16 blisters on each foot, having hoofed it over 200 miles. Our printing outfit was packed on the back of a burro, and consisted of 40 pounds of type, half a bundle of print paper and five or six half column plates of patent medicine advertisements. That first night we slept under a wagon on the public square, while our burro satisfied his hunger by nibbling a cactus. The first man to speak to us next morning was Major Scott. He offered us a drink and lent us $3 in cash, and thus assisted us to lay the foundation of our present prosperity.

Now that the major has passed from earth away we may state in 1880 he was sentenced to state prison in Ohio for borrowing horses. He was an ambitious critter and dug his way out and headed for Sunset. We could have given him away any day during the last two years, but he knew that he was safe in our hands. Many of our citizens noticed that the major always exhibited considerable nervousness when the stage came in, and if there was a stranger in town he kept in the background until some one ascertained what business had brought the man here.

While we loved the major in a general way, we were not blind to his bad points. He would get drunk. He would cheat at cards. On one occasion he stole our mule. On another he raised us out of a game of poker by presenting two guns at our unprotected breast. It will be remembered that we had to shoot him in 1890 and again in 1891 in self defense. He nominated us for mayor in one of the flowriest speeches ever uncorked in this sublime portion of the civilized world, and the very next day went around town abusing the memory of our dead father and predicting that we would be defeated by 500 majority. It was the majority who encouraged us to introduce the white shirt and collars and cuffs into this town, and yet the very first time we appeared in public wearing these articles he headed the mob which thirsted for our life. On several occasions he urged us to shoot the postmaster; on several other occasions he urged the postmaster to shoot us.

There were times when the deceased would take our advice in a brotherly way, and there were other times when he'd see us clear into New Mexico before he'd admit that we knew beans. It was this erratic disposition of his which finally led to his sad end. The major was a great liar, but a poor hand with a gun. Everybody knew this, and when he felt just right he would admit it himself. A few days ago ex-Judge Goodhue of Lone Tree, in a moment of abstraction, mentioned the major's failing. The major felt insulted and decided to remove the judge to a happier world. We talked and argued and advised, but he was pigheaded. We tried to convince him that the judge was lightning on the draw, but it was no go. He went over to Lone Tree to drop the judge, and he will never return. He hadn't got his hand to his hip before the judge dropped him.

Major Scott's spirit has crossed the great divide. What it found on the other side no one can say. All may err. Every man has ways unto himself. While we have not attempted to gloss over his faults, we earnestly and sincerely hope that his virtues have proved more than an offset in the land beyond our ken.

Mrs. Jones' Mistake.

"How long is it since you've seen Hank Smith?" asked Mrs. Jones as she washed up the silver and put it in the china closet.

"I saw him yesterday," said Mr. Jones pensively; "he was buried——"

"Mercy goodness, Jeptha! You don't mean to tell me that great strong Hank Smith was buried yesterday! Dear, dear, what are we coming to? And so Mrs. Hank Smith's a widow? I do wonder how she'll look in black. Won't she splurge round, though, on Hank's money! She isn't a little bit good looking, but she thinks she is. Poor Hank, the world isn't worth much to a man when his wife's a widow. Something has stained that butter knife black. Do you suppose it's sterling silver? I know Mr. Sterling's name is on it somewhere. And so poor Hank Smith is gone?"

"Gone where?" asked Mr. Jones, looking up with a curious twinkle in his eye.

"How should I know, Jeptha? That depends on how he has lived. What was it that carried the poor fellow off?"

"Who said anything about his being carried off?"

"Why, you did, Mr. Jones, you said he was buried yesterday."

"So he was, but you chipped in, as usual, and interrupted me before I got to the end of my sentence—he was buried in thought."

"The land sakes!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones as she dropped a dozen teaspoons on the floor, "what a turn you've given me, Jeptha, and all for nothing."

Proof Positive.

She—"There is no doubt about it that marriage does improve a man's politeness." He—"How so?" She—"Well you frequently get up and offer me your chair now. Before we were married you never gave me more than half of it."—The General Manager.

High Pressure Persiflage.

"Feel dry?" asked the Safety Valve.

"Oh, no! I'm tanked up," answered the Boiler.

"Glad to hear it," was the reply; "I was about to blow you off;" and the rest of the conversation was lost in the hissing that followed.

Time to Act.

"The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals ought to interfere in behalf of this man-eating zebra."

"Why?"

"The poor beast has been here several weeks, and hasn't had a man to eat yet."

That Drove Him To It.

Fangle—"I see that Mr. Pullman contemplates improving the ventilation of his sleeping-cars."

Cumso—"Indeed? He must have been compelled to pass a night in one."

MOTT & ROBESON

They Have Got To Go.

About 800 pairs of Ladies' India, American, and Dongola Kid Button Boots must be disposed of before 1st of May.

Every pair is marked at a price to sell. We don't want them, but you do. Why not secure them while you can get them at 20 to 25 per cent less than regular prices.

Our Bargain Tables are filled with Ladies' Button Boots worth from $1.25 to $3.00 per pair, and you can take your choice. Table No. 1 for 97c.; No. 2 for $1.19; No. 3 for $1.49; No. 4 for $2.50. There is a big bargain in every pair on those tables waiting for you. It will pay you to buy now.

Have you seen our new Spring Stock? It is wonderfully cheap and complete in every department, comprising a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's American Boots and Shoes.
