A WAVE OF WELCOME.

THE TRIUMPHANT PROGRESS OF THE KAISER TO GUILDHALL.

Thousands of Eyes Regaled by the Grand Imperial Pageant—The Streets a Mass of Flowers and Bunting—Huge Cheering Crowds of the Queen's Subjects—Address Presented in a Splendid Gold Casket.

LONDON, July 10.—The inhabitants of London and vicinity turned out in immense force in order to witness the progress in state of Emperor William of Germany from Buckingham palace to Guildhall, and back to the palace after partaking of the hospitality of the lord mayor of London.

From the earliest hours of the morning crowds of people literally poured toward Buckingham Palace, St. James' Park, the Strand, Fleet street, Ludgate Hill and the city generally, in order to take up some position where they could get a good sight of the imperial procession.

From the earliest hours also, in addition to the crowds of pedestrians flocking cityward, there were large bodies of regular troops and volunteers to be met marching toward the positions they had been assigned to occupy along the route, and, beside the soldiers, there were fully 8000 policemen in motion with the same object in view.

At 9.30 a. m. all traffic along the route and through the streets bordering it had been stopped.

As the hour for starting the procession—midday—drew near, the crowds pressed upon the soldiers and police in a good natured, though so forcible manner that it required the utmost efforts of the red coats and the blue coats to keep them from breaking through the red and blue lines formed from the palace to Guildhall.

Just before starting on his journey to Guildhall, The Emperor received brief telegraphic and courier reports upon the position of affairs from various points along the line of the procession.

All these reports concurred in the promise that an orderly and magnificent reception would be accorded to the Emperor of Germany by the loyal subjects of the Queen of England.

It was drawn by eight superb horses, flanked by mounted life guardsmen and mounted police, and conducted by white-bewigged footmen and coachmen of immense size.

The royal carriages upon leaving the palace, passed toward Marlboro gate, through lines of grenadier guards and police, backed up by huge, swaying, cheering crowds of people.

As the procession left the palace, from every quarter within and without the city boundaries, peals of bells rung out from the church steeples, announcing to the expectant masses that the imperial pageant had commenced.

Though there were great crowds at every point, and real density of the masses of spectators commencing at Charing Cross and about the streets debouching there, Pall Mall, Trafalgar square Whitehall, Northumberland avenue, Cockspur street and the Haymarket were packed as far as the eye could see.

Up the strand the decorations were superb, not through unity of design, at which there was no attempt, but through sheer plenitude of display.

Every inch of the way from the Strand Guildhall abounded in color. The fronts of the buildings were everywhere draped with flowers, innumerable lines hanging in festoons or arching the streets.

Flags, of course, were also everywhere to be seen, and the bunting of almost every nationality was displayed.

The union jack, the royal standard, and the various German flags were the most in favor, but conspicuous among all of them were hundreds of American flags.

These appeared at intervals along the line followed by the procession, and were specially prominent in the Strand, in Fleet street and about Ludgate hill and Ludgate circus.

Strange to say, no great number of on-lookers appeared at the club windows in the West end, nor was there any great popular effusiveness of feeling apparent until the party approached Trafalgar square.

There a mighty roar of acclamations filled the air as the Emperor's carriage drew near. This wave of welcome was taken up and passed along from street to street with the passage of the state carriages into the Strand.

From that point to Guildhall there was an incessant series of ovations, and all doubt as to the popular character of the reception was dispelled long before the imperial guests entered Cheapside.

The imperial party reached Guildhall at 1.25 o'clock.

The approaches to Guildhall bore various mottoes expressive of greeting to the imperial visitors.

The lord mayor received the guests at the entrance, and a procession was formed, and moved to the library, where a court of the common council was held, and the recorder of the city of London read an address to His Majesty, declaring that the lord mayor and corporation desired to offer him a sincere welcome, declaring his visit to the Queen to be a happy augury of the continuance of the friendly and affectionate relations so long existing between the two nations; also welcoming the Empress, declaring that they heartily appreciated her presence, and praying that his majesty might long be spared to reign.

The Emperor replied to the lord mayor's address in the following terms:

"My Lord: Please receive my heartfelt thanks for the warm welcome extended to us by the citizens of this ancient metropolis. I beg your lordship to kindly transmit the expression of my feelings to those in whose name you have spoken.

I have always felt at home in this lovely country, being a grandson of your Queen, whose name will ever be remembered as that of a noble character and of a lady great in the wisdom of her counsels, and whose reign has conferred lasting blessing upon England. Moreover, the same blood runs in English as in German veins, and, following the examples of my grandfather and of my ever-lamented father, I shall always, so far as in my power, maintain the historical friendship existing between these, our two nations, which, as your lordship has mentioned, have so often been seen side by side in defence of liberty and of justice.

"I feel encouraged in my task when I see that wise, capable men such as are gathered here today, do justice to the earnestness and honesty of my intentions.

"My aim is, above all, the maintenance of peace; for peace alone can give the confidence necessary to a healthy development of science, art and trade. Only so long as peace reigns are we at liberty to bestow earnest thoughts upon the great problems, the solution af which in fairness and equity, I consider the most prominent duty of our time.

"You may therefore rest assured that I shall continue to do my best to maintain and constantly increase the good relations existing between Germany and other nations.

"I shall always be found ready to unite with you and with them in the common labor for peaceful progress, friendly intercourse and the advancement of civilization."

The address of the municipality of London was presented to the Emperor in a splendid gold casket, richly enamelled and ornamented with precious stones.

The designs on the casket embodied features illustrative of the relations existing between England and Germany. On the cover of the casket are displayed views of the different historic parts of the city, and in their centre is the crest of the city of London, with a central figure representing the city. The centrepiece is surrounded with German eagles. Under the second canopy in the body of the casket are the imperial arms in full blazon.

Canopied figures ornament the sides of this casket and show out prettily against the blue enamel. The body of the casket is supported upon four open arches, one on each side, and at each corner of the casket are griffins holding the arms of the city of London. The eyes of the griffins are fine diamonds, and the cross in the imperial arms is also composed of diamonds. The whole frame work of the city of London's gift is of 18 carat gold.

The lord mayor personally handed the casket containing the address to the imperial guest of the municipality, bowing deeply as he did so.

A number of the most distinguished city officials and others were then presented to the German Emperor. After these ceremonies the procession was reformed and proceeded in solemn state to the great hall of the guild, where a most sumptuous spread was served.

The Emperor led the way into the banquet hall, having upon his arm the lady mayoress (Lady Savory). They were followed by the lord mayor and the Empress of Germany, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the other members of the royal family who graced the occasion with their presence.

When the city's guests had been refreshed, formal speeches of welcome were exchanged over the wine.

At 3.20 p. m. the journey back to Buckingham and other palaces was begun by way of the Thames embankment. On the way to the embankment, at Ludgate circus, where the rougher element of the city was packed in all the numerous thoroughfares branching into that frequented centre, there were some exciting incidents.

It was understood that the rowdy element had prepared a lively reception for the Prince of Wales, so the carriage containing him and his wife was driven more rapidly than the gait of the rest of the procession, and had passed the dangerous spot before the main body of the crowd was aware that the prince was in their midst.

As it was, however, in spite of the presence of the Princess of Wales beside him, the prince was greeted with repeated outbursts of jeering and "boorings," which were only slightly set off by a few faint cheers.

In face of this hostile demonstration, the Prince of Wales, apparently unmoved, looked straight ahead. This reception was in strong contrast to the hearty, ringing cheers which greeted the Duke of Connaught, the prince's brother, by the Ludgate circus crowd, as he passed over the same ground.

While the procession was on its way back to Buckingham palace and Marlborough house, the main body of American sight-seers gathered at the windows of the big new "American" hotels along the Thames embankment, and had splendid views of the whole affair.

This has been to all intents and purposes a full holiday in London, and to-morrow will be a second holiday, on account of the great review of 20,000 volunteers and regulars.

Many arrests were made to-day, but the German societies and the French Anarchist element was, apparently, absent, or subdued into a state of passive submissiveness by the warnings sent out by the police, to the effect that any anarchistic or socialistic outbreak would be most severely dealt with and remembered against the agitators in the future.

Justice at Last.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

CHICAGO, July 13.—After a wearisome wait of six years justice has been done to Miss Serotia Alexander of Brattleboro' Vermont. A quarter of a century ago she abandoned her lucrative profession of music, which she had adopted in Boston, in obedience to the wishes of her brother, Elijah S. Alexander, and remained at her old home, caring for her parents until their death. For this self-sacrifice her brother, who was amassing a fortune in Chicago, promised to reward her with $10,000, and an annuity equal to what she would have earned. But when he died here six years ago, a rich man, not a cent from his estate had been left to his sister. Miss Alexander took the case into the court in 1887, and the heirs fought the claim to the last stage. Yesterday, however, Lawyer Edwin Walker, as administrator of the estate, signed a check for $30,500, payable to Miss Alexander.

THE MILL STRIKE.

TWO WEEKS SINCE THE TEN HOUR NOTICES WERE POSTED.

No Change in the Position of Affairs Yet—Both Parties Standing on Their Dignity—The Mills Likely to remain Closed Unless one Side Gives in a Little.

It is just two weeks today since the following notice was posted up in the saw mills of Messrs Stetson, Cutler & Co. at Indiantown and Pleasant Point.

"In view of the depressed state of the lumber market, we the undersigned mill-owners, find that we cannot compete with other places in the manufacture of lumber, where the mills are run from 10 to 12 hours. Therefore we give notice that on and after the 13th day of July next ten hours shall constitute a day's work, except on Saturdays when our mills will stop at 5 o'clock p. m. No alteration to be made in wages on account of the above.

(Signed),
W. H. Murray, Miller & Woodman, E. G. Dunn, A. Cushing & Co., Stetson, Cutler & Co., James R. Warner & Co., Hilyard Bros., E. D. Jewett & Co., W. C. Purvis, Randolph & Baker, and George E. Barnhill.

The mill hands came in at 7 o'clock a. m. to go to work as usual, but they read the notices and went out refusing to go to work at all. Word was sent around to the other eleven mills whose owners had signed the ten hour notice but most of whom had not posted it up, and at every mill the men quit work. Thus thirteen of the largest saw mills of the city ceased running, and the hands to the number of 1500 have for the most part been idle ever since; the production of lumber ceased, and the coasting trade and many other trades have begun to suffer in consequence.

As matters stand now both the mill men and the mill owners appear to be to a large extent standing on their dignity, neither party wishing to give way to the other enough to suggest some means of arriving at a settlement, and while public sympathy is mostly with the men in their stand to retain the nine hour system it looks as though they are much heavier losers for the present in consequence of the strike than are the mill owners.

A GAZETTE reporter lately had a conversation with Mr. Henry Hilyard, of the firm of Hilyard Bros., on the matter. He said, "The position of affairs is about this: The mill owners had decided upon this move and gave the men two weeks' notice so that if they were not satisfied to return to the ten hour system the matter could be talked over so that some arrangement might be arrived at between the owners and the men, to keep the mills going. Some of the large American mills might have been forced by the dullness of the markets and the low price of lumber to shut down anyway after the 13th but the men would have had, their two weeks work and if there was any sign of trade improving in the near future many of the mill owners were disposed to do anything they could to keep the mills at work and give the men employment the season through. We were disposed to keep running, although we had begun to pile lumber. But the men quit work and shut us down. Nothing has been said by any of them to our firm in the way of proposals for arriving at a settlement of the matter and so far as I know none of the other owners have been approached. The mill owners feel that as the men have taken this action and shut down the mills that any proposals for a settlement should come from them.

Mr. Gregory of Mr. W. H. Murray's office also said that the mill owners felt that under the circumstances the men were the ones to begin negotiations for a settlement of the difficulties. As there seemed to be no disposition on their part to do this, Mr. Murray would start for Ottawa to-morrow and let matters take their course.

One of the committee men of the Mill Labourer's Union said that as this was the mill owners strike not the strike of the men the latter felt that it was the place of the owners to make any propositions that may be necessary to bring about a settlement. So the matter stands and as long as both sides refuse to give way any the mills will remain shut down.

Fredericton.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

FREDERICTON, July 13.—The twelfth was celebrated here yesterday by the Orangemen of this city, St. Mary's and Marysville attending service at the Baptist church in the morning where the grand chaplain of the order, Rev. B. H. Thomas of Carleton Co., preached, taking for his text Deutreonomy XXXII, 7. The church was crowded. At 10.45 the following lodges marched in procession from their hall down Queen street:

Walker Lodge No. 35.
Graham Lodge No. 20.
Rossmal lodge, St. Mary's No. 21 and Pickard lodge, Marysville No. 40.

At the close of the service the procession marched up Brunswick street to Queen, thence to their hall. Past grand master Wilson, M. P. P. was supported on his right by knight Thomas Colter M. P. P. and on his left by knight William Rosborough. Joseph Walker acted as marshal.

Rev. T. E. Dowling who has lately returned from Jerusalem and other parts of the Holy Land, occupied the pulpit of Christ church (St. Ann's) yesterday afternoon. On Thursday evening next the reverend gentleman will deliver a lecture in the church hall on Jerusalem.

THE DOMINION'S FINANCES.

A Big Surplus for the Year just Ended.

OTTAWA, July 13th.—The Canada Gazette contains the statement of revenue and expenditure for the month of June, and enables a calculation of the revenue and expenditure for the whole fiscal year 1890-91. The receipts for the month were:—

Customs	$1,703,987
Excise	646,938
Post Office	189,717
Public works and railways	206,238
Miscellaneous	98,883
Total	$2,848,764

The expenditure during the month was $1,989,135, upon consolidated fund account, and $247,710 on capital account, giving a total of $2,236,845 and showing a surplus on the month of $611,919.

The total revenue for the fiscal year was $37,689,130, against which is to be charged a total expenditure of $34,948,585, showing a surplus over and above all expenditure of $2,740,545. The above expenditure includes $4,039,395 spent upon capital account. If that is deducted the surplus for the year of revenue over ordinary expenditure is found to be $6,779,960. This amount may be somewhat reduced when all the payments for the year are made, but the net surplus will be about as stated by the Finance Minister in his Budget speech.

Each item in the receipts for June shows an increase over the corresponding month last year, the total being above $300,000. The debt statement shows the public debt at the end of June to have been $233,530,221, a decrease of $612,150 on the month and of $154.580 for the year.

White Wear
For Ladies and Children.

IT IS A FACT NOW RECOGNIZED by large numbers of ladies that White Cotton Undergarments can be purchased ready-made at prices actually less than the same can be made up in their own homes, and thereby save all the worry and inconvenience in selecting the necessary materials to make up a trousseau. At the same time, while the prices are lower than ever, qualities, sewing and fit have not deteriorated in any degree, but, on the contrary, we are showing better garments for less money than ever before in the history of our White Wear trade.

This has been caused by the wonderful improvements in the machinery used and the rapidity with which large quantities can be produced by skilled help, better sewn and finished than can be done by ordinary hand labor.

While we keep an immense variety of styles and qualities in White Wear, we make a specialty of NIGHTDRESSES in three leading prices, the quality of which we can confidently say is not excelled in any city in America for value. They are
