NOSE WAS BROKEN IN A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Sam Levi, a Hebrew peddler, had a narrow escape from being crushed under the wheels of a Wabash freight locomotive, at the Queen St. crossing at 4.30 yesterday afternoon. Levi was driving down the street, just as the watchman was about to lower the gates to stop traffic while the freight passed through. He yelled at the man to stop, but Levi paid no heed, and drove onto the track before the train dropped. His rig was demolished by the engine, and he was thrown some distance. Dr. J. L. Bray, the Wabash physician, was sent for and ordered the man to be taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his injuries were attended to. Levi's nose was broken, and he was bruised up considerably. None of his injuries are very serious. The watchman also had a narrow escape. He was struck by flying pieces of the vehicle and thrown violently to the ground. Levi came here from Cleveland.

John Blake also had an exciting experience on Queen street about the same time. His horse took fright and ran away, throwing him out of hiring, and giving him a bad shaking up.

WORK OF SNEAK THIEVES

Twenty Hens Disappear From G. W. Cowan's Roost

Faubert Pays Dearly For Throwing Water On Cunningham

Some party or parties visited Mayor Geo. W. Cowan's chicken coop when the shadows were deep last night. The result was that twenty of his best layers were missing when he went to win some eggs this morning. It was a complete clean up, and no trace of the chickens could be found. The coop was in a good, dry place, and the birds were fed regularly and kept in good trim for winter to day. A genial Mayor is a expensive luxury. Even a shed with a lock on it was no barrier to the thieves, who took the chickens without any ceremony. One hen was found dead on the floor of the coop this morning, and it was evident that the thieves had killed some of the fowls before taking them away, as some of the heads were left behind. The case has been reported to the police, and Acting Chief Deneau is instituting an investigation.

The Cunningham-Faubert assault case which was adjourned yesterday came up this morning when Judge Houston found Faubert guilty. He was fined $8 and the costs—$7.50 in all. As he did not have the money, he had to take fifteen days in jail.

In handing down his decision, the judge gave out a point in law that is not generally understood. A man is liable for assault if he purposely inflicts an injury on another, said Mr. Houston. He is also liable if he does something negligently without caring what injury he may do another, even if at the time he is not fully aware that the injury will be done.

This judgment applied in particular to the case this morning. Faubert threw water out his window and the water fell on Cunningham's bank. Space will not permit of giving the full particulars of the case, which were really funny at times. Judge Houston instructed the police to see the Health Inspector, who will be detailed to make an investigation of the rooms in which Faubert and Cunningham live. The defendant claimed that there are no sinks in the buildings and that the landlord had told them to throw their refuse out the back windows. This is contrary to the health laws of the city. Ward Seaworth prosecuted and Martin appeared for the defense.

The Zakoor Tavato assault case came up in City Police Court yesterday afternoon. The defendant did not put in an appearance, but the gentleman who put up the bail paid his fine $33, which, with the costs, amounted to $38 in all. Now, that his fine is paid Tavato is privileged to come back to Chatham and do business. W. P. Smith prosecuted on behalf of Zakoor, and R. L. Brackin acted for the defendant.

She was a very highly respected woman and loved by all who knew her for her many true womanly qualities.
