A DARING OUTLAW.

Remarkable Career of a Man Just Shot by a Philadelphia Detective.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]

Few criminals have passed a more adventurous life than John Cannon, alias Davis, who was shot by detective Gray several nights ago in attempting to escape, after being arrested on the charge of robbing hotel rooms at Harrisburg during the convention. His real name is neither Cannon nor Davis, but he is a Canadian by birth and a man of great daring and remarkable resources. His line of operations has always been the robbery of hotel rooms. He was heard of before the outbreak of the war, when the Mississippi steamers, which were patronized by wealthy planters going to and returning from New Orleans, and the high-toned gamblers who fleeced them alike became victims for the agile "room-worker." Cannon, Dave Cummings, and Billy Forrester are said to have begun their life of crime on the floating palaces of the Mississippi, and each at times had narrow escapes from the vengeance of the plundered gamblers. Cannon was the object of at least one daring rescue from prison. He had been operating in the south, and had been arrested at Mobile, Alabama, for a heavy hotel robbery. The sheriff and jailer occupied quarters at the prison. A resolute party of Cannon's confederates visited the jail, and by the argument of the revolver compelled the sheriff and jailer to liberate Cannon.

He was afterward in prison at Richmond, Va., and then went south again in company with George Dubois, alias Henry Burton, who was afterward captured here, four years ago, while breaking into a silk store on South Eleventh street, on a Sunday. They committed a heavy robbery of a jewelry salesman at the Planter's hotel in St Louis in 1872, and, after another heavy job at New Orleans, Cannon, becoming hard pushed by the detectives, fled to the west, where he became associated with a band of the most desperate trainwreckers who harrassed the traveling community. Having amassed a large fortune he retired from train-robbing and settled at St. Catharines, Ont, as a grain merchant. Speculation devoured his ill-gotten wealth, but he saw an opportunity to recuperate and came to Philadelphia during the centennial. Tillie Miller, alias Mrs. Robert Howland, a notorious New York thief, obtained the trunks of a lady who was staying at the same hotel where Cannon had his family, and this circumstance and his inexplicable identification by a gentleman whom he visited alarmed him lest he might be suspected of having a hand in Mrs. Miller's work, and he shook the dust of Philadelphia precipitately from his feet, finding the sands of Cape May a far more agreeable footing. A few more years of criminal adventure, and Cannon's career had a three-years blank introduced into it, when he went to Trenton for a jewelry robbery at Newark. After his term expired he returned to Philadelphia with his family and established himself on South Eighth street as a dealer in watches, a thin disguise as the detectives now believe for a "fence" or a place for receiving stolen goods, in partnership with a man who had been driven from Chicago and Pittsburgh by the authorities because he was one of the most notorious receivers of plunder from the more successful class of thieves who rob hotels and jewelry houses. The expedition from which Cannon was returning when he was overtaken by the detectives indicates possibly the deriviation of much of the plunder which passed over the counter. Billy Forrester, who is fully as desperate and ready a villian as exists, was an accomplice of Cannon in many of his south-western exploits.

The Khedive's Reforms.

The khedive of Egypt has restored to the state the lands and palaces on which his father squandered many millions of the public money. In private and in public he is simple and economical. Married to a single wife he sets an example of home life much needed among Mohammedans, and his short reign has been marked by great reforms, both political and religious. The taxes are now reduced to a reasonable amount, and collected at fixed seasons after service of due notice on printed forms. The regulation of the finances was, until the recent revolution which brought in Arabi Bey, wisely left in the hands of skilled European comptrollers, public salaries were paid regularly, education was everywhere encouraged, and the khedive built and endowed at his own cost a high school in Cairo for the sons of the noble. Moreover, the slave trade was fast disappearing. Ismail, the former khedive, while despatching Col. Gordon to suppress the trade in Upper Egypt, was the greatest buyer of slaves in the east. As many as 100 slaves arrived for him at one time in Cairo, and for a single Carcassian he once gave $125,000. On the other hand, Tewfik has none but paid servants in his household, he has never bought a single slave, and from his heart he abhors the whole system.

IRELAND'S REPRESSION.

THE BILL FURTHER DISCUSSED IN PARLIAMENT.

Mr. O'Donnell's Amendments Ruled Out—The Irish Judges Denounce the Abolition of Trial by Jury—Movements in America.

LONDON, May 18.

In the house of commons this evening, on the motion for the second reading of the repression bill, the speaker announced that the only paragraph of O'Donnell's amendment in order was that declaring the bill a fatal obstacle of good government and tranquility. O'Donnell denounced the bill.

Col. Hurst, liberal for the county of Cork, supported the repression bill. He condemned as cowards those who issued the no-rent manifesto and did not protest against murders committed in support of it.

Mr. Trevelyan called attention to the failure of justice in Ireland, and declared the new bill would facilitate witnesses. The government would be slow to use their power regarding public meetings, and where meetings were held they would regard less utterances than the evident intention of what was enunciated. He defended the provisions of the bill against the publication of seditious articles. The government had reason to think that in their efforts to suppress outrage they would have the assistance of those who had become tired of the toryism to which they had been so long subjected.

Mr. Dillon said the bill would have no other effect than to provoke secret organizations. When the measure expired the land league would rise again and parliament would have the work to do over again.

All the Irish judges except the lord chancellor have resolved to send a strong remonstrance to the government against the abolition of trial by jury.

Two policemen constantly attend Mr. Trevelyan. In consequence of a suspected defection of Parnell from the extremists, a movement is afoot to demand on behalf of American subscribers the publication of the land league accounts for the last two years.

The fear of being arrested in connection with the murder of Cavendish and Burke is now so general in Ireland that the peasantry travelling outside of their own district apply to the police for passports. Many emigrants leaving the south of Ireland for America resort to the same course.

A meeting of the Irish Parliamentary party to-day unanimously condemned the repression bill as an unworthy Irish bill, and fraught with the direst consequences to them. It was decided to ask Gladstone to expedite the arrears bill.

PRAYERS FOR IRELAND.

CANTERBURY, May 18.—The house of convocation have agreed upon a form of prayer for use during the present troubles in Ireland. It asks for preservation from secret conspiracies, open violence, appeasement of the tumult in Ireland, and the healing of her sores.

MOVEMENTS IN AMERICA.

Arrests at New York—United States Citizens in Great Britain.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Michael Turner, a suspicious passenger on the steamer Wisconsin, has been arrested. He denied any complicity in the Dublin assassinations.

The house bill passed to-day providing that any person being originally a citizen of the United States who had been naturalized as a subject of Great Britain, may publicly declare renunciation of such naturalization, and resume the character and privileges of a citizen of the United States by signing an instrument to that effect.

It is stated the search for the Phoenix park assassins on incoming steamers from Europe will be abandoned on account of the impossibility of their escaping to this country on a steamer.

FUNDS FROM IOWA.

DES MOINES, May 18.—Two thousand three hundred dollars are already subscribed here as a reward for information leading to the arrest of the "Irish landlords who hired the murderers of Cavendish and Burke."

EVICTIONS TO BE RESUMED.

BOSTON, May 18.—The Herald's Dublin special says the evictions of tenants will be resumed in many parts of Ireland. In the county of Galway alone 300 tenant farmers were evicted inside a week. The proposed measures of the repression bill are creating revolutionary feelings throughout the country. The people do not favor any compromise with the government. The opinion of the nationalists is that if Parnell would continue to be the Irish leader he must push forward without looking back.

INSTITUTE OF ACCOUNTANTS.

Address of President Harman—The Objects and Advantages of the Society.

The Institute of Accountants for the province of Ontario met last night in the council chambers, the president, Mr. S. B. Harman, in the chair. The following gentlemen who had been proposed as members were unanimously received: W. R. Harris, D. Kirkwood, C. Howell, W. D. Shutt, W. Sterling, R. W. Tomlinson, James Mason, W. B. Tindall, A. E. Black.

The chairman delivered an address, in which he warmly thanked the members for the honor they had conferred on him by appointing him president of the association. He stated that the importance of such an organization as theirs has engaged the attention of leading men connected with the trade and commerce of the United Kingdom, and that so much importance was attached to this profession in that country that a royal charter was granted to them. He stated that our universities and colleges of state and private endowment, and institutes to foster and encourage science and art have been founded to give the stamp of efficiency to those they send forth as their recognized alumni; but the profession of an accountant seems to have been hardly yet recognized as one deserving like recognition. In speaking thus he said he did not overlook the mercantile colleges, but that he desired to show that in success lay the after association of mind with mind among practised accountants, and the enlisting in their ranks of men who would not shrink from seeking a test of proficiency which will compare with the collegiate degree of the learned professions. They should endeavor as far as possible to avoid anything like centralization in their organization. While Toronto has been selected as the headquarters of the institute it was to be hoped that the sympathies of all the large cities and towns in the province would largely contribute to their membership.

Several resolutions were adopted approving of the objects of the society, as set forth in the address of the president, as well as the advantages to be obtained by securing a special act of incorporation from the city, and declaring the benefits to be gained from studying more deeply trade and finance.

DESTRUCTION OF THE ALLAN STEAMER PROGRESS.

Three Lives Lost on the Ill-Fated Boat—The Provisions for the Peruvian Passengers Laid Waste.

MONTREAL, May 18.—The steamer Progress, sent to provision the passengers of the Allan steamer Peruvian, was burned last night near Riviere du Loup, and is a total loss.

RIRVIERE DU LOUP, Que., May 18.—The steamer Progress was burned to the water's edge at an early hour last night, near Green island, ten miles below this town. The Progress left Quebec yesterday morning with provisions and coal to go to the assistance of the Allan line mail steamer Peruvian, which was reported at Father Point on Sunday, by passing steamships, in the ice in the vicinity of Newfoundland, with her screw gone and wanting assistance. All appears to have gone well with the Progress till about 8 p.m., when it is said fire declared itself in the lamp-house; but this cannot be verified, and as yet how or where the fire originated remains a mystery. The most melancholy part of the affair rests in the fact that three human creatures on board the Progress are said to have been burned to death, and their bodies, as far as known, still remain on board the burning vessel. The tug Resolute, Capt. Keilly, happened to be in the vicinity of the burning vessel about the time the fire broke out, trying to make arrangements to tow the Norwegian bark Felicite, inward bound, into Quebec. The Progress was in mid-channel and making all possible speed to the relief of the Peruvian at the time of the accident, which seems to be all of a sudden, as the crew of the Progress were picked up in two boats by the steamer Resolute, some without shoes or stockings and others without a covering on their heads. Even one of the lifeboats of the Progress, in which some of the crew were saved, was very badly singed, showing the narrow escape the crew must have had. The captain and crew of the doomed vessel were landed from on board the Resolute at 12:30 this morning at the wharf, two miles distant from town, and left by early train for Quebec. The Resolute returned again to the assistance of the burning steamer, and towed her to the northwest end of the long wharf, where the Progress grounded. On the rising of the tide at noon the Resolute took the still burning vessel in tow again and moored her to the southwest side of the wharf. The engines will likely be saved. The Progress was considered the finest boat of her kind in the Dominion, and rendered much valuable service to the shipping trade below Quebec during the close of navigation. A new boiler was put in her last fall, and she received other necessary repairs. She was built in Quebec about six years ago. She was valued at $80,000 and insured for $50,000. She carried $20,000 worth of provisions and coal for the relief of the Peruvian.

The total loss will amount to $100,000, with insurance of $30,000, divided as follows: North British and Newcastle, Imperial Canada, Fire and Marine, and Commercial Union, each $5000, and the City of London $10,000.

The names of the three men lost are Octave Begault, aged 30; Ed. Petit, aged 27, and J. B. Berube.
