AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER

The Weekly Monitor from now till the first day of January, 1893, for only Two Cents Per Copy.

It is not often that we indulge in self-praise, but we should be lacking in our duty to the MONITOR did we not gratefully acknowledge the many kind and complimentary notices we are lately in receipt of.

We endeavor to make our paper interesting to all our readers at home as well as to those who are absent, by letters and communications from every section of our county, knowing that to many dear ones far away, the MONITOR comes like a message from home, giving details of births, marriages, deaths, improvements, changes, personal goings and comings, and a variety of other matter tending to keep up their interest in the old friends and land of their birth.

They write us that our columns are eagerly read and all advertisements closely scanned, and never without a fond memory when a familiar name greets their sight, and a review of the changes that have taken place since they left, causing alternately gladness or sorrow, but always a feeling of pleasure that they can follow through our instrumentality and the courtesy of our numerous correspondents, news of the old folks, the young folks and "home."

To still further increase our circulation, and as an inducement to new subscribers, we have decided to mail to any address in Canada or the United States from now till the 1st OF JANUARY, 1893,

our paper at the usual price of $1.50, cash in advance, making a total of SIXTEEN MONTHS.

What further inducement should be needed to induce parents, brothers or sisters, to become subscribers at once?

How many of you have relatives living in various parts of the States and the Dominion, who are looking eagerly and longingly for letters from home? and how keenly the disappointment is felt at their non-arrival, owing to business cares and other obstacles of hindrance daily occurring.

Now is the time to have our paper mailed regularly every week to them.

It costs but a trifling sum to assure them every week that you bear them in fond remembrance.

There are hundreds from Annapolis County scattered abroad, and how welcome the MONITOR, with its local details from every portion of the county would be.

It would cost you in stationery and postage at least five cents per week to write letters, when we, by making of mailing to any address requested, our paper for the above sum stated, $1.50 cash in advance, from now till the 1st of January, 1893, (and changing address whenever required), only ask of you TWO CENTS per week.

Lose no time in availing yourselves of this opportunity, as the earlier you subscribe, the more value for your money.

Your sons, daughters, or friends, are longing for home news which the MONITOR affords, in lack of the letter which so often fails them, and which those away from their homes always most heartily appreciate.

☞ By this offer we hope to show our readers that we are not unmindful of their patronage and encouragement, which we hope in the future, as in the past, to deserve, by ever writing up the progress and advancement of our county, widely circulating the industry and enterprise of our merchants, as shown by their increasing business; keeping up the interest of the absent by reminiscences from "Home, Sweet Home," and generally using every effort to make our paper a welcome guest in every household which it enters.

Poetry.

[Written for the MONITOR.]

The Golden Street.

The toil is very long and I am tired,
Oh, Father, I am weary of the way!
Give me that rest I have so long desired,
Bring me that Sabbath's cool refreshing day,
And let the fever of my world-worn feet
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

Tired—very tired! And I at times have seen,
When the fair pearly gates were open thrown
For those who walk no more with me, the green
Sweet foliage of the trees that there alone
At last wave over those whose world-worn feet,
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

When the gates open and before they close—
Sad hours but holy—I have watched the tide
Whose living crystal there forever flows
Before the throne, and sadly have I sighed
To think how long until my world-worn feet
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

They shall not wander from that blessed way;
Nor heat, nor cold, nor weariness, nor sin,
Nor any clouds in that eternal day,
Trouble them more who once have entered in,
But all is rest to them whose world-worn feet
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

Thus the gates close and I behold no more,
Though, as I wait, they open oftener now
For those who've left me and gone on before;
And I am lonely also while I bow
And think of those loved ones whose world-worn feet,
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

Tired—very tired! but I will patient be,
Nor will I murmur at the weary way;
I too shall walk beside the crystal sea,
And sing glad songs all that God-lit day,
When Thou, O Lord, shall let my feet
Press the cool smoothness of the golden street.

SELF-RESPECT.—Never hurt any one's self-respect. Never trample on any soul, though it may be lying in the veriest mire; for that last spark of self-respect is its only chance, the last seed of a new and better life; the voice of God which still whispers to it, "You are not what you ought to be, and you are not what you can be; you are still God's child, still an immortal soul. You may be a man yet, after the likeness of Christ who died for you." Oh, why crush that voice in any heart? If you do, the poor creature is lost, and never tries to rise again.—Charles Kingsley.

—Mrs. Birchall, wife of the Woodstock murderer, is said to have passed through Montreal recently in disguise for Winnipeg, and it is believed she will make efforts to obtain possession of her husband's body. If this is correct, the previous rumor of her marriage in England was probably incorrect.

—Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Burchard is dead. He was the clergyman who made use of the remark at a Blaine reception in New York, during his campaign against Cleveland, that the chief feature of his support was Rum, Romanism and Rebellion. This had a damaging effect on Blaine's cause and is said to have lost him the election.

Victory at Vivian.

"In our family faithful work has been done by Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry as a sure and quick cure for diarrhœa, dysentery and all summer complaints. I can recommend it to all as a family friend, always true and faithful."—Mrs. W. Bishop, Vivian, Ont.

About Colts.

Colts are born with perfect feet. Nature intended them to run on the ground constantly, and if they did, their hoofs would wear away evenly; but instead they are kept indoors about five months in the year. The hoofs become long and break off in pieces from time to time. If a considerable piece breaks off the side, the foot runs over like an old boot and the colt acquires the habit of walking partially on the side of the foot, which is very difficult to remedy. Sometimes both sides break off, leaving the toe unnaturally long, thus throwing more weight on the heels, causing them to wear away faster than they should. This produces flat feet. The uneven breaking off of the hoofs before the animal matures causes most of the imperfections in the feet of the horses, with resultant ring bones, spavins, curbs and other ailments. When a horse with a bad foot comes to be shod, if it runs over at the side it should be leveled up gradually at several succeeding shoeings and by making the shoe thicker at one side and paring down the hoof a little more on the opposite side.

If the feet are flat the heels should be let alone and the toes cut down as far as will answer at every shoeing. The shoes should never bear on the sole of the foot, but on wall alone. If the sole is low and presents a convex surface, as is often the case, the shoes will either be made concave to match, or very narrow to fit only on the horny shell. If the animal has contracted feet the heels should be cut away all it will do, as well as the horn on the bottom of the foot, and the shoes should be beveled out from the quarters back, that the feet may have a tendency to spread. If the animal has ringbone or any stiffness in the joints, the toes should be cut back. This rule applies also to cases of spavin, thoroughpin, curbs, &c. Bad feet in horses are generally traceable to inattention of man. The feet of colts should be attended to once in three months from the time they are first stabled in the fall until they reach maturity, and then permanent good feet will be assured. If agricultural societies would employ a skilful man to shoe horses at their fairs and give illustrative lectures, they would accomplish more good than they do now by some of their transactions.—Western Sportsman.

Scrub Cows.

Under this somewhat disrespectful name comes that vast body of farm cows that eat, are milked and killed. It these days of great booms for fancy stock the natives are forgotten, and their merits, if they have any, are never once thought of. We have naught to say against a man's keeping fine stock if he can afford to; it speaks well for him; but there are many who, if they would take better care of the stock they have—of their "scrubs" if you please—would reap much greater benefits from them. Native stock and their products at the pail and the churn have no right to be compared with those of the Jerseys or Holsteins, the latter are fed for the definite purpose of getting the largest possible product from them, and the former are fed to keep them alive; and if, besides getting a living, they can turn some of their food into milk, it's about all that is expected of them. Give the same treatment, the same feed, the same protection from the elements to the average native cow that the Jersey or other fancy breed now has, and there would be much less difference in the products of the two, both in quality and quantity.

Notice the difference in amount of milk in the early season when pasturage is fresh and abundant, and the latter, when it is, perhaps, parched and dry. That these native cows do make more butter when they have good feed reveals the fact that they are capable of doing so longer, providing they have sufficient and nutritious food.

Put your best Jersey cow on a parched and barren pasture, with only poor water and little of it to drink, and see how much more milk she will give than does the ordinary cow. Such an experiment would more accurately determine the comparative merits of the two animals. We do not give the "scrub" cow the credit that is due her; and until we do she will be looked upon as a necessary evil, nothing more.

Talk to Your Horse.

Some man, unknown to the writer hereof, has given to the world a saying that sticks: "Talk to your cow as you would to a lady." There is a world of common sense in it. There is more; there is good sound religion in it. What else is it but the language of the Bible applied to animals: "A soft answer turneth away wrath." A pleasant word to a horse in time of trouble has prevented many a disaster where the horse has learned that pleasant word mean a guaranty that danger for punishment is not imminent. One morning a big, muscular groom said to his employer: "I can't exercise that horse any more. He will bolt and run at anything he sees." The owner, a small man and ill at the time, asked that the horse be hooked up. Stepping into the skeleton, he drove a couple of miles, and then asked the groom to station along the road such objects as the horse was afraid of. This was done, and the horse was driven by them quietly, back and forth, loose lines slapping on his back. The whole secret was in a voice that inspired confidence. The man had been frightened at everything he saw that he supposed the horse would fear. The fear went to the horse like an electric message. Then came a punishing pull on the lines, with jerking and the whip. Talk to your horse as you would to your sweetheart. Do not fear but that he understands and appreciates loving tones, if not the words, while it is by no means certain that the sensitive intelligence of many a horse does not comprehend the latter.—Breeders' Gazette.

WINTER FUEL.—A provident farmer writes: "The winter fuel should always be stored under a shed of some kind before it is wanted. By timely attention before regular bad weather set in, a great deal of what would otherwise rot and become rubbish if left out exposed to rain and snow can be gathered up and cut into right length for stove wood. This man included old fence rails that are no longer useful for that purpose, old boxes and barrel staves and the branches of trees that have been blown off in the woods or that have been pruned off in the orchards. A great many farmers who pile up their limbs and brush and burn them in that way have a great deal to learn about the value of apple tree wood as fuel. When seasoned, I consider it much better than the average wood we get out of the forest, and for making a hot fire would place it almost next to hickory. The trunks of old apple trees are well worth cutting up for this purpose, and the branches that are pruned off from the standing trees in the orchard will make good stove wood or kindling wood for coal fires.

JAMAICA GINGER FOR THE BLUES.—A farmer in northern Maine recently drank three bottles of Jamaica ginger to drive away the "blues." He afterward went to sleep in the barn, and a cow laid down on him and broke two of his ribs. He hasn't done a day's work since, and at last accounts he was "bluer" than ever.—Kennebec Journal.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
