What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. IMITATION COUGH CURES

Is an Imitation Cough Medicine Good Enough for Your Children?

When you are sick and send for the doctor you don't want him to send a young medical student he has in his office. You would rather have the young fellow experiment on somebody else.

No more do you want imitations of the medicine you know to be of proven value in the cure of disease.

The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the cure of croup, bronchitis and colds has proven too great a temptation to imitators. They expect you to take chances with their medicines because the price is a few cents less.

Imitations are never sold on merit, but depend on the merit of the article they imitate. You don't want to be experimented on, and for this reason will insist on seeing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the bottle you buy.

As it is made of simple ingredients of proven value, it is well suited for as a treatment for children. That it is effective in the cure of croup, bronchitis, whooping cough and the most severe coughs and colds is attested by its many years of continued success and enormous sales. 25 cents all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

JUBILEE CELEBRATION

The celebration services were continued in St. Mary's and St. Jude's churches last evening and proved very enjoyable. St. Mary's school room was filled with a happy throng, the evening being given up to a Sunday school festival with Archdeacon Raymond, the rector, presiding. The programme included addresses by the chairman; Archdeacon Newnham, a former rector of the church, and by Mrs. G. A. Kuhring; choral selections by the children; reading by Doris Ingraham; piano solos by Louise Eckebrecht and Harry Coleman, and a duet by Miss Maud Willis and Eddie Willis. After the entertainment the children enjoyed a series of indoor sports and games followed by the presentation of prizes by the rector.

In St. Jude's church a thanksgiving service was conducted at 8 p. m. and this was followed by a historical and social evening in the school house.

The services in these churches this evening promise to be interesting. In St. Mary's church it will be known as historical evening. Brief addresses are to be given by Archdeacon Newnham and Rev. Joseph Smith, former ministers of this church; also by J. N. Rogers and D. C. Fisher. It is expected that many of the clergy of the city, together with His Worship Mayor Frink and possibly Hon. Mr. Hazen and others, will be present. The St. Mary's band will play one or two selections during the evening.

In St. Jude's church there is to be a musical evening, the programme to be carried out in the school room.

CRIBBS HONORABLY DISCHARGED.

(Chatham Gazette.)

This morning James McMillan gave evidence showing that Cribbs was with him and three other companions on the evening of the robbery from 7 o'clock until after the crowd gathered around the store. The magistrate dismissed the case.

ELECTION BEFORE END OF YEAR IS POSSIBLE

Ottawa, May 8—There will be a general election before Christmas if the opposition stick to their avowed intention of obstruction after the adjournment is ended.

The census figures will be ready by October. The government can win easily on reciprocity. Expansion of the I. C. R., building of the Hudson Bay Railway, C. N. R. bond guaranteed for extension, Georgian Bay canal, enlargement of Welland Canal will also enter into the contest.

There will likely be a declaration that the government feels a start should at once be made with both the Georgian Bay canal and the enlargement of the Welland canal.

Finally the country is likely to be asked to declare for or against a reasonable closure being adopted in the house of commons so that no opposition will hereafter be able to carry obstruction to such an unreasonable degree that the minority has the appearance of running parliament.

The government would welcome the opportunity of having the country pronounce upon all of these questions and would be pleased if the opposition would only keep on talking until there is a chance for redistribution and election.

SHE HAD CONSTANT PAIN

Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dewittville, N.Y.—"Before I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered nearly all the time with headaches, backaches, and bearing down pains, and had a continuous pain in my left side. It made me sick if I tried to walk much, my back was so weak that I was obliged to wear corsets all the time. But now I do not have any of those troubles. I have a fine strong baby daughter now, which I did not have before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. A. A. Giles, Route 44, Dewittville, N. Y.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

FAMOUS GEMS OF PROSE

CONFEDERATE SOLDIER FARMER OF 1865

By Henry W. Grady, 1887

THERE is a figure with which history has dealt lightly, but that, standing pathetic and heroic in the genesis of our new growth, has interested me greatly—our soldier farmer of 1865. What chance had he for the future as he wandered amid his empty barns, his stock, labor and implements gone—gathered up the fragments of his wreck—urging kindly his borrowed mule—paying 60 per cent for all that he bought, and buying all on credit—his crop mortgaged before it was planted—his children in want, his neighborhood in chaos—working under new conditions and retrieving every error by a cost-ly year—plodding all day down the furrow, hopeless and adrift, save when at night he went back to his broken home, where his wife, cheerful even then, renewed his courage, while she ministered to him in loving tenderness. Who would have thought as during those lonely and terrible days he walked behind the plough, locking the sunshine in the glory of his harvest and spreading the showers in the verdure of his field—no friend near, save nature that smiled at his earnest touch, and God that sent him the message of good cheer through the passing breeze and the whispering leaves—that he would in 20 years, have carried these burdens, uncomplaining make a crop of $800,000,000. Yet this he has done, and from his bounty the south has rebuilther cities, and recouped her losses. While we exult in his splendid achievement, let us take account of his standing.

Whence this enormous growth? For 10 years the world has been at peace. The pioneer has replaced the soldier. Commerce has whitened new seas, and the merchant has occupied new areas. Steam has made of the earth a chessboard, on which men play for markets. Our western wheat-grower competes in London with the Russian and the East Indian. The Ohio wool-grower watches the Australian shepherd, and the bleat of the now historic sheep of Vermont is answered from the steppes of Asia. The herds that merged from the dust of your amazing prairies might hear in their pauses the hoofbeats of antipodean herds marching to meet them. Under Holland's dykes, the cheese and butter makers fight American dairies. The hen cackles around the world. California challenges vine-clad France. The dark continent is disclosed through meshes of light. There is competition everywhere.

The husbandman, driven from his market, balances price against starvation and undercuts his rival. This conflict often runs to panic, and profit vanishes. The Iowa farmer burning his corn for fuel is not an unusual type. Amid this universal conflict, where stands the South? While the producer of everything we eat and wear, in every land, is fighting through glutted markets for bare existence, what of the southern farmer? In his industrial as in his political problem he is set apart—not in doubt, but in assured independence. Cotton makes him king. Not the fleeces that Jasson sought can rival the richness of this plant, as it unfurls its banners in our fields. It is gold from the instant it puts forth its tiny shoot. The shower that whispers to it is heard around the world. The trespass of a worm on its green leaf means more to England than the advance of the Russians on her Asiatic outposts. When its fibre, current in every bank, is marketed, it renders back to the south $350,000,000 every year. Its seed will yield $60,000,000 worth of oil to the press and $40,000,000 in food for soil and beast, making the stupendous total of $450,000,000 annual income from this crop.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

A GREAT many parents take a positively unfair advantage of their little helpless babies."

"If there were fewer cute babies there would be fewer fretful and nervous children."

"The baby under a year old who can do any sort of a cute trick hasn't had a square deal."

Such are some of the statements I recently heard a mother who really thinks, make about babies.

In the course of the conversation someone had spoken of a baby who happened to be the first grandson and nephew on both sides of the family and who, at Christmas time, when he was only five months old, received nine toys, five picture books and eight rattles from admiring friends and relatives.

The mother who really thinks said she pitied both the mother and the baby.

We asked why.

"Because too many toys spoil the child," she answered promptly.

"I think this crowding little babies with toys and teaching them tricks is positively wicked. You know that a baby's brain isn't its full size until after he is a year old. Well, just think of all that growing brain has to assimilate without our distracting it with playthings or confusing it with rattles or forcing more efforts in the way of tricks upon it.

"Perhaps you've heard what a good baby my Gretchen is. Everyone thinks it's remarkable how little trouble she is and says I'm very fortunate.

"I don't think it's wholly that I'm fortunate. I think it's partly because I'm sensible. Because I've applied what I learned from my other babies to her.

"My baby is eight months old and allthe toys she has ever had are two spools and a blue celluloid ball.

"I think if you don't give a child so many playthings it will be not only better off, but happier.

"You know how it is with the average child—he is put down in a chair with a tray full of playthings. He looks at them a few minutes and then there are so many that he gets confused and fretful, and begins to throw them all over the floor.

"Now this is the way I do with Gretchen. Say I'm getting dinner. I put her in her chair where she can watch me and I don't give her any playthings at all. Then she is quite content to watch me for about half an hour. When she begins to get restless I give her spools and she plays with them for awhile, and when she is tired of them she has her blue celluloid ball tied to a string and hung from the ceiling. She is happy with that at least half an hour and by that time dinner is probably gotten and eaten, and Gretchen instead of being nervous and cross and tired as she would have been if I had plied her with playthings and talked to her and shaken a rattle at her half the time, is a s good as a kitten.

"People think she is a remarkable baby. I don't. I think any baby would be just as good if its parents gave it a chance from the beginning.

"I don't think there is any excuse for those mothers who can't find time to do anything but take care of one baby. It's bad for them and bad for the baby. Except for her washing, Gretchen isn't much more bother than if she wasn't in the house at all, and I think almost any mother could have things just the same way if she would only train her baby right from the beginning."

Perhaps every mother won't agree with all these conclusions, but surely she will find this an interesting and suggestive point of view.

QUEBEC'S NEW GOVERNOR

Sir Francis Langelier, the new Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, who was sworn in on Saturday. This is his latest picture.

OLD GUILDHALL TO GO

London, May 7—A new building is to take the place of the old Middlesex Guildhall at Westminster. From early times, certainly from the time of Edward the Confessor, this spot was a place of sanctuary in connection with the abbey, and here it is said that Margaret Woodville, wife of Edward IV., bade farewell to the two princes, when they were carried to the tower by their uncle, Richard III.

The present building which stands almost under the shadow of the twin towers of the abbey, and close to Westminster hall, is of mushroom growth compared to its great neighbors, since it was built only in 1770 when the old sanctuary was removed.

In 1889 it was remodeled, and now, in its turn, it is to give place to a modern and more capacious building, having been found altogether inadequate to meet the needs of the present day. An upstart under the gray masses of the abbey, with no beauty to recommend it, it will pass away unregretted.

CALL TO PASTOR.

At a congregational meeting held in Bathurst Presbyterian church, a unanimous call was extended to Walter M. Matthews, of Chatham, to become their pastor. They offer a salary of $950 and free manse and glebe and four weeks' holidays. The Presbytery of the Miramichi will meet in Newcastle tomorrow to deal with this call, and also to dispose of the call from Loggieville to Rev. E. E. Mowatt of Redbank.—Chatham Gazette.

A Cleveland mother caused the news of her daughter's engagement to be announced in a novel way. At a luncheon a small white satin bag was at each place. The guests were asked not to open the bags until a given signal. When they did the guests found tiny china kittens, each with a card tied to its neck, reading "Mary Robinson Jones announces her engagement to Robert John Wilson." That was the way the cat was let out of the bag.

A GREAT WORK THE FORESTERS ARE DOING

Caring for the Orphans of the Order.—A "Happiness Fund" a Feature

(Toronto World)

The work in connection with the orphan and fatherless children of members of the order occupies a warm spot among the members of the Independent Order of Foresters, and the report of the finance committee recommending that the contribution to this fund be 2c. per month instead of 1c. was carried unanimously. The work of caring for the orphan and fatherless children is naturally of a philanthropic character.

The Home for Orphans, which is situated at Oakville, about twenty miles from Toronto, took tangible form in 1905, and in November of that year was opened. Its international characteristic at once became evident, for the first child to arrive was a little English girl, and she was followed by six fatherless litle ones from Peru, Indiana.

While the originator of the home idea, the late Dr. Oronhyatekha, contemplated a home for those who were left absolutely friendless, yet a wider view of this noble philanthropy was seized by the present supreme chief ranger, Elliot G. Stevenson, who learned of many children of deceased Foresters, whose condition was quite as hopeless as if they had been left absolutely orphans. Widows were left in distressing state of poverty, and were face to face with forced separation from their dear ones by sending them to public institutions or distributing them in the neighborhood.

The result was that instructions were finally issued that in cases where a high standing committee found that a widow of one of the members was engaged in a hand to hand struggle to keep her family together, to feed, clothe and educate them, a money grant, varying, of course, according to the conditions found, should be made through the recording secretary of the local court.

Under this arrangement 273 homes each essential and valuable in its sphere, have been held together and protected, while 528 children, drawn from England, Ireland and Scotland, as well as from all parts of the United States and Canada, are being cared for by the society. Over fifty more have been benefitted indirectly because, through this relief, the mother has been able to remarry happily. So that in all 575 children in these few years have been protected by the ministrations of the society, at that period in their lives when care and discretion are most needed.

A "Happiness Fund"

The organization of the society is so maintained that these wards are in constant touch with the head office. In some cases the children are many miles away, but they are encouraged in educational progress, prizes are awarded for high standing in class and frequently the little ones address the kindly hearted superintendent as "your affectionate boy," or "your loving child." These evidences of appreciation are not wasted upon the big hearts at the head of the order.

Not the least significant feature in this connection is the "Orphan's Happiness Fund"—a trust fund made up entirely of voluntary contributions from high courts, subordinate courts and private members, which is so disbursed that a Christmas present and a birthday gift go regularly to each child, as well as prizes to those who are successful at school. The system is so followed that the child who has been bereft of his natural parents finds in the 240,000 odd members of the society foster parents whose sympathies are touched and whose purses are opened. Who knows that time has not in her keeping the day when these little ones will not of their foster parents "rise up and call them blessed."
