CIRCULAR ON THE ASHES TRADE OF CANADA.

MANUFACTURE OF POT ASHES.—The usual causes of inferiority in ashes are, in the first place, dishonest makers,—the leaching process not being sufficiently perfect, and the raw material in many cases being field ashes mixed with a large portion of dirt.

The next cause is adulterating the ashes with lime, salt, &c. Salt should in no case be used, and lime only in the leaches. On no account should stones, wood, raw ashes, lime, straw or dirt be put in to fill up a barrel.

The next cause is using weak leys. The last run of the leaches, when not able to float an egg or a potato, should never be boiled but kept to wet the next leaches.

Another cause is bad barrels. Whiskey barrels and green or unseasoned casks, the wood of which contains moisture of any kind, will cause the ashes to deteriorate rapidly.—White Oak, and White Ash casks are much preferable, and Red Oak should never be used where it can be avoided. All should be well seasoned.

Ashes should be emptied by coolers into the barrel, two coolers being just sufficient to fill one barrel, and there should be as little breaking of Pot Ashes as possible, as the more they are broken the more rapidly do they deteriorate by the action of the air. Ashes should never be packed hot into the barrels.

If the ashes have begun to melt before packing, the casks may be rubbed with dry slaked lime, to prevent further melting, but lime or raw ashes should never be thrown loosely over them, as this injures the appearance, and must be separated in inspection.

Barrels should weigh at least 80 lbs., when thoroughly seasoned, and they should be accurately weighed, and that weight legibly marked on the barrel before packing. They should be packed quite full, and should be covered with solid round hoops to the extent of two thirds of the barrel. The dimensions of the barrels should be 20 to 22 inches diameter of head, and 30 to 32 length of staves, larger or smaller being condemned by law.—The mark should be quite legible in paint or ink, and only one plain mark and number, should be on each; as when there are two or three marks, there is more liability to confusion. The mark should be the maker's or owner's initials, and the initial of his place of residence, as when the initials of a consignee are used, several lots may get mixed.

After packing, the barrels should be well coopered, with three shingle nails in the hoops of each, to prevent the heads falling out, and put in a dry place where they will not be exposed to moisture.

The grades by law established are first, second and third sorts, and then unbrandable. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and five, each grade being an additional eighth off the selling price of First. Thus, unbrandable No. 5 have seven-eights of the price of Firsts deducted.

First Ashes should contain 77 per cent of pure alkali, at least.

The directions given above have been obtained from the Inspectors.

Pearl Ashes cannot be manufactured except by persons who enter regularly into the business, and who must, consequently, have all necessary knowledge.

JOHN DOUGALL,
Commission Merchant.

Henry Doane, of the City of Toronto, blacksmith, for 'an improved method of Swinging two wheeled Vehicles.'—(Dated 1st April 1859.)

TRUE COURAGE.

A company of boys in ——— Street Boston one day after school, were engaged in snow-balling. William had made a good hard snow-ball. In throwing it he put in too much powder,' the boys say— he threw it too hard—and it went further than he intended right through a parlour window!

All the boys shouted,

"There, you'll catch it now. Run, Bill run!

They then took to their heels.

"I shall not run."

He then started directly for the house where the window had been broken. He rang at the door, acknowledging what he had done, and expressed his regret. He then gave his name and the name of his father and his father's place of business and said the injury should be repaid.

Was not that noble? That was true courage. It is cowardice that would lead a boy, when he has done an injury like that to sneak away and run to conceal it. How noble and brave it is to see a boy confess a fault, and not be afraid to face the consequences. Such a confession, though it costs a great deal of courage is usually the quickest and surest way of repairing any wrong and it brings also peace of mind.

Boys remember that true courage is not to be afraid to do what is right; and and to be afraid to do what is wrong. It often takes more courage to do right than it does to do wrong. And to be afraid to do wrong, in the face of ridicule is sometimes the highest type of courage. Did it not require more courage for William to go and confess what he had done at the risk to of the ridicule of his associates than it would have done to sneak away as the other boys advised him and conceal the matter? Washington never done a braver thing than when he confessed to his father that it was his hatchet that cut his favorite fruit tree.

Give us William whenever any real bravery is called for, rather than all those boys together who cried out,

"Run Bill run.

He'll face the danger, while they will sneak.

FRESH ARRIVALS OF Spring and Summer Goods FOR 1859.

THE Subscriber begs respectfully to announce to the Inhabitants of Pakenham and surrounding country that he has just returned from the Markets with his usual supply of DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, Hardware, Drugs, &c.

The DRY GOODS in particular, comprising a large and varied assortment of Fancy Goods, Muslin and Barege, Dresses, Prints, Shawls, Bonnets and Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, &c., were purchased before the late advance, in the Tariff of Duties, and will consequently be found MUCH CHEAPER than any that can now be brought in.

He would also take this opportunity of sincerely thanking his friends for the liberal patronage with which they have favoured him for these last few years; and at the same time inform them that for the future he intends conducting his business on an entirely different principle from formerly. All goods will now be marked at the LOWEST CASH PRICE, and Credit Customers will therefore buy their good at Cash Prices, but will also have to pay interest of one per cent. per month upon their purchases so long as they leave them unpaid.

This he feels convinced will be by far the best mode that could be adoped, as it obviates the necessity of having TWO PRICES, and consequently avoids all difficulty which may arise from one Customer being charged more than another, for both Cash and Credit Customers will receive their Goods at the same Price, only that the Credit Customer pays interest for his accommodation.

In accordance with this determination of carrying on his business in this method, he has RE-MARKED the whole of his former stock, in order that the old may be as cheap as the new, and he now confidently invites the inspection of the public before making purchases elsewhere.

All kinds of merchantable produce will be taken in payment at market prices.

JAMES DUNNET.

N. B.—All out-standing notes and accounts past due must be settled forthwith. Inattention to this Notice will assuredly involve defaulters in expenses, as no farther intimation will be given.
