PROTECTION AGAINST PESTS.

Important Action Taken by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association.

Hamilton, June 21.—The Ontario Fruit Growers' Association have adopted resolutions to be addressed to the minister of agriculture for the Dominion as follows:

1. That the importation of nursery stock and such fruits as are affected by the San Jose scale be entirely prohibited from the United States, or any other country where the San Jose scale is known to exist.

2. A thorough inspection of all nurseries and of orchards in those districts in which the scale has been found to exist be at once entered upon, and that the trees so affected shall be uprooted and burned, and that the growers who may thus be subjected to serious monetary loss be in a measure compensated for their destruction.

3. And we beg most respectfully to request the minister of agriculture to take such action as will effectually destroy this enemy to the horticultural interest of our country and prevent the importation of trees and fruit in which may be concealed the germs for future development.

It was also resolved to send a copy to the provincial minister of agriculture, asking for his co-operation.

—Grand military parade at Queen's Park tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, when 3,000 of her Majesty's picked troops will have a sham battle and grand military review.

—The grandest society parade that ever took place in Canada will form at 2 p.m. at Victoria Park, and march to Queen's Park tomorrow. Twenty-five different social, fraternal and national societies in line of march, headed by the Seventh Battalion and other military bands, Highland pipers and fife and drums.

London Full to Overflowing

The Metropolis Gay With a Great Galaxy of Guests.

All Races and Nationalities Do Honor to Queen Victoria.

Streets, Hotels, Mansions and Barracks Thronged.

Some of the Notabilities Who Are Royalty's Guests.

Programme of Festivities for the Week of Rejoicing.

London, June 21.—Never in the history of England has London so strikingly shown itself the heart of the world as now. At all times the busiest hive of the human race, today London is crowded to its intermost door by a stupendous gathering of strangers, representing nearly every race under the sun, and nearly every country found upon the map. The common object of this crowd—participation in the greatest historical pageant yet witnessed in the history of the British Empire—gives tone and complexion to every minute of time, to every thought and action. There is nothing in men's minds at this hour, from the highest prince in the palaces to the lowest sneak thief in the streets, but the jubilee!

THE PREDOMINANT NOTES.

It is impossible to pass along any of the crowded thoroughfares without everywhere remarking the two predominant notes of the occasion, the world's desire to honor Queen Victoria, and the proud wish of her subjects in doing so to impressively demonstrate the strength and vastness of her empire. The streets, hotels and stately mansions of the west end are crowded with the great, who have already come to honor the Queen, while barracks and bivouacs in and around the metropolis are thronged with soldiers in every uniform known to the British administration—from the head-hunting Dyaks of the Borneo police, the mounted men of Australia, India and Africa, fort soldiers from the West Indies, Zaptichs from Cyprus to the stalwart representatives of Canada. Suggestively, it is a rare kaleidoscopic picture of races, men and creeds, a vivid panorama of the march of that empire upon which, as Daniel Webster said, the sun never sets. The air is alive with expectancy, thousands upon thousands of flags and banners float in the evening breeze, the decorations which have easily cost a million of English money are in place, myriads of lights are glowing, or stand ready for their flame—London smiles in self-content.

The list of notabilities, guests of the Queen, who are gathered in London, to offer congratulations from the nations of the earth, is long and imposing. It includes, on behalf of the United States, Mr. Whitelaw Reid, proprietor of the New York Tribune, with Gen. Nelson A. Miles, to represent the army, and Rear Admiral J. N. Miller, the navy, with their aids. The sister republic, France, has sent an extraordinary mission, headed by Gen. Davoust, Duke of Auerstadt, grand chancellor of the Legion of Honor, and grand-nephew of Napoleon's famous general, Marshal Davoust. Two generals of division accompany the marshal, one of whom especially represents President Faure, together with a staff of brilliantly uniformed officers, and M. Crozier, chief of the Protocol. Monarchical Europe has accredited special representatives of its sovereigns, accompanied by a regiment of princes, dukes and titled people. The Emperor of Germany has for his alter ego Prince Albert of Prussia, Prince Regent of Brunswick, with a staff of eight general officers. Integral portions of the kaiser's empire are represented by Duke Albert of Wurtemburg; Prince Rupert of Bavaria, grandson of the prince regent, and a lineal descendant of the Stuart dynasty; Prince Frederick Augustus, Duke of Saxony; the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, accompanied by the hereditary prince and Princess Beatrice; Grand Dukes and Duchesses of Hesse and Mecklenburg Strelitz, and the hereditary Prince and Princess of Hohenlohe-Langenburg; Prince Hermann of Baden and Herr Von Brauer, minister of the grand duchy of Baden and Duchry of Baden. Russia has delegated her compliments to their imperial highnesses the Grand Duke Serglus and the Grand Duchess Elizabeth Feodrovna, who have brought with them a large suite of habitues of the czar's court. The Austro-Hungarian empire is present in the person of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir presumptive to the throne. He is accompanied by a princely entourage, and Italy contributes their royal highnesses, the Prince and Princess of Naples, and a suite of ten—all of whom are at Chesterfield House, that house of famous memories!

AMONG THE MINOR POWERS.

Turning to the minor powers and countries further afield, Sweden and Norway have an interesting representative in tall Prince Eugene, fourth son of King Oscar. Roumania appears in the person of its ruler, Prince Ferdinand, accompanied by his princess and their suite; Bulgaria, its prince and princess; Montenegro, its Crown Prince Danilo, and Servia M. Mijatovich. Belgium sends Prince Charles de Ligne; the United Netherlands the Counts Van Lynden and Bylandt, and tiny, trivial Luxemburg its hereditary grand duke, Adolph William Charles Augustus Frederick, accompanied by Baron von Grunstein, the grand ducal chamberlain. From the Iberian peninsula, there has arrived H. R. H. the Duke of Oporto, brother of King Carlos, and from Spain the Duke of Sotomayer. Switzerland's sympathy in the rejoicing is too shown by M. Bourcart, a former president of the republic.

The orient, loving a pageant as orientals do, contributes bountifully to the brilliancy of the occasion in envoys whose every appearance is a delight to the thronging crowds. Turkey, flushed with the wine of Greek defeat, has intrusted Ottoman homage in the hands of Munir Pasha. Egypt sends the khedive's brother, Prince Mohammed Ali Khan, who is accompanied by Tigrane Pacha; Persia, the Emir Khan; Siam, the Crown Prince Mahit; Japan, his imperial highness Prince Arisugwa and a large suite, the most conspicuous member of which is the Marquis Ito; Corea, his excellency Min Yong Hoan and a suite of yellow-faced gentlemen with almost unspellable names. China closes the eastern list with an imposing array of nineteen celestials, led by Chiang Ting Huen, the emperor's envoy. The Hawaiian Islands are represented by Mr. S. M. Damon.

SOUTH AMERICANS THERE.

Countries to the south of the United States do not swell the list of the titled, but they are eminently represented. President Diaz has deputed Don Antonio Mier Y. Oelis, Mexican minister to France, to attend on behalf of the republic; the Greater Republic of Central America has appointed Signor Medina, Guatemala's representative is Dr. Cruz, and Don Dometrio Inglerias has arrived from Costa Rica. South America leads off with M. de Souza Correa, the Brazilian minister to Great Britain, as representing the erstwhile empire; Ecuador has Senor Calso Nevaris; Peru, Sir Canevara, Peruvian minister to the Court of St. James; Chili, M. Ramon Subercaseaux, and Uruguay Dr. Alberto Nin. Most of these gentlemen have suites in attendance.

Finally, though no longer a temporal sovereign, Leo XIII. has sent to represent the holy Roman see Monsignor Cesare Sambucetti, titular archbishop of Corinth and canon of St. Mary Majoris.

THE COLONIAL PREMIERS.

Turning from those in London who have come to testify the homage of the world beyond British boundary lines to those who represent that empire within them, the array of envoys is no less imposing, no less picturesque, while far more pregnant with meaning to the man in the street—for they typify the vastness and variety of the empire to which he belongs.

Easily foremost in this group stands the Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, premier of the Dominion, who, with Mrs. Laurier and the other colonial premiers, are guests of her Majesty at the Hotel Cecil, before the doors of which—as at all hotels and houses where royal guests are domiciled—soldiers of the Queen are placed on sentry duty.

In the same wing with Mr. Laurier are, from Newfoundland, Hon. Sir Wm. Whiteway, K.C.M.G., and Lady Whiteway; from New South Wales, Hon. G. H. Reid; from Victoria, Hon. Sir Geo. Turner, K.C.M.G., Lady and Miss Turner; from Queensland, Hon. Sir Hugh Moir Nelson, K.C.M.G., Lady Nelson, Mr. and Miss Nelson; from Tasmania, Hon. Sir E. N. Coventry Braddon, K. C. M. G., and Lady Braddon; from South Australia, Hon. C. C. Kingston and Mrs. Kingston; from Western Australia, Hon. Sir John Forrest, K. C.M.G., and Lady Forest; from New Zealand, Hon. Richard J. Seddon, Mrs. and Misses Seddon; from the Cape of Good Hope, Hon. Sir J. Gordon Sprigg, K.C.M.G., and Lady Sprigg; and from Natal, Hon. Harry Escombe and Mrs. Escombe.

FROM INDIA.

Hardly less important and certainly more picturesque are the envoys from India, princes of feudatory states, men of strange titles, of dark-skinned, immutable faces, clad in costumes of color and gold ever emblematic of the gorgeous east. Just who and what they are is hardly known outside the India office, but they are all resplendent Jorsmages, and are thus described: The Thakore Sahib of Gondal; the Rajah of Kapurthala; the Thakore Sahib of Morvi; the Maharajah Dhiraj Sir Pratab Singh, Regent Jodhpur, accompanied by the Thakore Hari Singh; Sunayet Singh, a cousin of the Maharajah of Kashmir. Others of the many Indian states are thus represented: Faliala, by Naud Singh; Nabha, by Kishan Singh, a sirlar of state; Alwar, by Dawa Khan; Bhartpur, by Chatru Singh; Bikaner, by Rai Makur Dip Singh; Jaipur, by Dhunpat Rai; Gwalior, by Abdul Ganny; Indore, by Rao Matkai; Ehopal, by Commandant Mirza Kurim Beg; Rampur, by Nazir Khan; Bharnagur, by Dhan Singh, a near relative of the maharajah, and Hyderabad, by Mir Hashim Ali Khan, who holds an important post under the ruler of the Deccan, the Nizam of Hyderabad. Last, though not least, is that odd, familiar name—associated with so much of Indian princely charity—Sir James Jamsetjee Jejoebhoy.

THE QUEEN.

The Queen is at Windsor, in excellent health and spirits, considering the work of the past month, settling and debating a whole dictionary of details connected with the arduous historical week just begun. For no arrangement, however trifling, in the programme of the next seven days but what received royal sanction and consideration. Not merely the sorting and disposition of innumerable guests for royal functions, hours of coming and going, bestowal of honors and orders and the like, but the endless details regarding reception of addresses, memorials and gifts. The addresses that are to be presented by the home secretary are from every conceivable public body in every imaginable part of the empire and out of it, and number thousands—not counting masses of "odes" and private memorials addressed to the throne and which have found a resting place in the capacious waste-paper baskets of Windsor. The principal address to be received is that from the Lords and faithful Commons. Of presents there are no end.

NO END OF PRESENTS.

The most interesting of these is perhaps the magnificent set of emeralds sent by the czar and czarina, valued at a cost of $100,000. From China, India, Japan, Persia, the continent and elsewhere, enough of the rare and costly sent by the high and mighty has arrived to fill a bijou museum, while if her Majesty had relaxed the rule which forbids accepting presents from private people unknown to her, she might have covered the walls of Windsor with the samples of home work in every material existing, that now cumber the lumber rooms and cellars of the castle. Yet even these which she has not seen have had a reflex action upon the Queen's attention. It is therefore a matter of sincere congratulation that she has stood the strain so well.

NOTHING BUT JUBILEE.

The jubilee is now in complete possession of London and all its inhabitants. Those for whom the whole subject has become a nightmare and a horror have taken flight, and the millions who remain are in full sympathy with the great occasion. The influx of visitors from the provinces and abroad now amounts to a mighty invasion. London has never been so crowded before. The streets were never so congested, save once, and that was four years ago, on the occasion of the Duke of York's marriage. These numbers will be vastly augmented on Tuesday, and it is almost appalling to contemplate the situation on jubilee day, which will present the greatest aggregation of human beings within the smallest area they sun ever looked down upon. The average stranger hardly knows in what spirit to regard London's attempts at fete-making. It probably depends upon his disposition what view he will finally take.

EXTORTIONATE PRICES.

The charges for food for the jubilee are likely to be enormous. The great caterers, weeks ago, charged $15 to $20 per head for dinner parties. Many in the past fortnight have refused to take fresh orders. Those who have delayed making arrangements are now lucky to get off for $25 per head. One man has paid $2,000 for a room on James street, with refreshments, for a party of ten. Another has paid $5,000 for a room, breakfast and lunch for a party of twenty. Another interesting feature of the feeding of the multitude appears in the price charged for the hire of spoons, knives and forks, which has reached dollars for a quarter of a dozen. As regards vehicles, it is already impossible to reach the city and the west end cheaply. The underground railway is overcrowded night and day. The coupe companies' immense stock of carriages, of all descriptions, is entirely engaged at the rate of $75 a day, without regard to the distance. The livery stable keepers have contracted their vehicles already to the utmost limit of their resources. The lowest charge for taking a party to its destination is $25, with a very doubtful chance of bringing it back again. The current price for a seat at the gala night at the opera is $125.

THE FAVORED ONES.

Lord Salisbury went to Windsor on Friday and had an audience with the Queen. There is no doubt that he brought back the list of the coveted honors, which will be published on Tuesday. There is some hope that the honor list will contain the name of at least one man, who did a good deed without a thought of reward. The man is Mr. Scott Murray, secretary and friend of the late Sir Richard Wallace and afterward of Lady Wallace. The latter wanted to bequeath the famous Wallace art collection to Mr. Murray, but he persuaded her to leave it to the British nation. The unselfish patriotism of the recommendation may be appraised from the fact that the collection has been this week valued for probate purposes by the well-known expert, Mr. Wood, at $16,000,000.

THE OPENING ACT.

Saturday afternoon witnessed the first act of the jubilee drama—a procession of mounted troops through the heart of the poorest, the eastern, district of London, from Victoria Park, passing the People's Palace, through the Mile End road and Whitechapel, and round to the Mansion House. The troops consisted of 12 squadrons of Life and Dragoon Guards, with six bands of music and three batteries of the picturesquely-uniformed Royal Horse Artillery, nine batteries of the Royal Artillery, with field batteries, and all of the colonial mounted troops. The Indian cavalry were alone unable to attend, being present at Windsor. The streets along the route, which began to fill early in the morning, were packed to suffocation and the gates of Victoria Park were almost impassable when the procession started at 2:20 p.m. The troopers and the bands made a brave show, and there was the greatest enthusiasm among the onlookers. Even in the poorest places the people had done their utmost to decorate, and flags, bunting and mottoes hung out of the windows and across the streets everywhere. The People's Palace bore the motto, "Welcome to Our Brave Defenders." All of these decorations were genuine local east ender efforts. The lord mayor and all of the Indian princes were present at the Mansion House to view the procession, which passed off without a hitch. The thanks of the east end were given to Mr. Frederick Woonton Isaacson, M. P. for the Stepney division of Tower Hamlets, who conceived the idea of the parade, and who entertained all the troops in Victoria Park before starting.

ILLUMINATING BEGUN.

Thousands of persons crowded into the city to see the illuminations. The Mansion House, the official residence of the lord mayor, and the Bank of England presented an especially brilliant appearance, being ablaze with colored lamps, which were ranged to form the letters "V. R.," while others represented the imperial crown. There was also a display of illuminated mottoes. At about 9 o'clock it began to rain, which drove the sightseers to places of shelter. There was some hissing and groaning at the omnibuses, the owners of which, owing to the heavy jubilee traffic, have raised the fares, usually one penny, to sixpence and one shilling.

Everybody you meet has some pet private theory of impending danger. One foresees a murderous sweep of fire through the streets of scaffolding and stands. Another prophesies a deadly collapse of some of these giant structures, or a hideous crushing of the crowds, or an attempt on the Queen's life by some witless loon, whose inferior brain has been crazed by the universal excitement. There is also observable that prevalence of peevishness which generates among people forced to wait unduly for some grand event after they are ready.

WATCHING THE SKIES.

Two questions are agitating London: The prospective weather on jubilee days—the procession day, Tuesday, especially—and how to get to the seats from which to view the procession. The weather recently has been cold, boisterous and rainy, and the latest reports show that the cyclonic system is passing away eastward. The barometer is rising and the prospects are for more settled weather. A storm on Tuesday would almost amount to a calamity. The majority of the immense stands along the route are quite uncovered, and even the House of Commons stands do not boast of awnings. In many cases seat owners have been notified that they will not be allowed to use umbrellas. The transport to the seats is a serious question. There is an absolute corner in all kinds of vehicles, and it will cost more to drive to the seats than it has cost to purchase the seats themselves.

THE GUESTS.

Shoals of royal personages and special missions have been pouring into London. The principal railway stations on the continental lines present an animated appearance. The platforms are covered with red carpets, and royal carriages are continually arriving and departing with palace officials and brilliantly uniformed ambassadors. The situation is complicated by a furious gale in the channel, which is upsetting all calculations. Ex-Empress Frederick of Germany and party, who started in the royal yacht Victoria and Albert from Flushing, were obliged to put back. Each royal party comes in a special train.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE COLONIALS.

The British Empire League has organized a water party to Maidenhead for the entertainment of the colonial premiers. On the afternoon of the same day Mr. William Waldorf Astor will receive the visitors.

Premier Laurier has written a letter of regret at his inability to attend the "at home" given by the members of Holloway Club to the colonial visitors.

The officers of the several colonial military contingents were entertained by the Raneiagh Club. The Canadian officers were present.

The parade of the colonial troops aroused the enthusiasm of the vast crowds of spectators to a high pitch. The cheering was incessant.

PROGRAMME FOR THE WEEK.

The jubilee programme to which her Majesty has given her assent covers the seven days beginning tomorrow—though all envoys are guests of the Queen until Monday, June 28. The programme begins approximately on Tuesday—Accession Day—the 60th anniversary of that fair June morning when as day broke the Archbishop of Canterbury and the lord chamberlain announced to the hastily awakened princess that during the silent watches of the night the mantle of majesty had fallen upon her! The programme is as follows:

Monday, June 21—Her Majesty arrives at Buckingham Palace, 12:30 p.m. Afternoon: The Queen receives her imperial and royal guests. Evening: Royal full dress banquet at Buckingham Palace, followed by reception of the diplomatic corps

Tuesday, June 22, Queen's Day—Morning: The procession to St.
