The Ladies' Friend.

A decided improvement in Washing Machines or washing made easy by the use of Bright & Co's patent Washing Machine—decidedly the greatest invention of the age in which we live.

By the use of the above machine, a child of fifteen years of age will do the washing of an ordinary family in two hours; they also effect a great saving of fuel and soap.

The machines are manufactured by Burke & Co. at William Darville & Sons Pail Factory Talbot Street north, and for sale at their store on Dundas Street East, adjoining Smith's Block; London C. W. where they will always be prepared to furnish the article at short notice and on favorable terms. They are also authorized by the patentees to sell letters patent for the following Townships, viz: Southwold, Yarmouth, Delaware, Lobo, Malahide and Bayham

CERTIFICATES.

This is to certify that we the undersigned have used Wright & Co's. Washing Machines and can safely say that out of five or six kinds of machines used under our inspection, we have not found its equal for saving labor, time, soap, and also there is a great saving in wear and tear of clothing by the use of this machine, over any other we have seen or used.

The Song of the Camp.

A CRIMEAN INCIDENT.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

The touching incident on which the following verses are founded is, doubtless, fresh in the memory of many of our readers. They were written for the New York Tribune, and appeared in that paper a few days ago.

"Give us a song!" the soldiers cried,
The outer trenches guarding,
When the heated guns of the camp allied
Grew weary of bombarding.

The dark Redan in silent scoff,
Lay grim and threatening, under;
And the tawny mound of the Malakhoff
No longer belched its thunder,

There was a pause. The guardsman said:
"We storm the forts to-morrow;
Sing while we may, another day
Will bring enough of sorrow."

They lay along the battery's side,
Below the smoking cannon—
Brave hearts from Severn and from Clyde,
And from the banks of Shannon.

They sang of love and not of fame,
Forgot was Britain's glory,
Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang "Annie Laurie."

Voice after voice got up the song,
Until its tender passion
Rose like an anthem clear and strong—
Their battle eve confession.

Dear girl, her name we dared not speak,
Yet as the song grew louder,
Something upon the soldiers cheek,
Washed off the stains of powder.

Beyond the darkening ocean burned
The bloody sunset's embers,
While the Crimean valleys learned
How English love remembers.

And once again a fire of hell
Rained on the Russian quarters,
With scream of shot and burst of shell,
And bellowing of mortars.

And Irish Norah's eyes are dim
For a singer dumb and gory;
And English Mary mourns for him
Who sang of "Annie Laurie."

Ah, soldiers! to your honored rest,
Your truth and honor bearing;
The bravest are the tenderest—
The loving are the daring.

The Old Doctor; or Stray Leaves from my Journal.

THE POOR ARTIST.

"Poor creatures! what will become of them through the long months of winter?"

Such was the exclamation that greeted my ears as I entered the parlor one evening in December, 1834, having taken off my India Rubbers in the passage, and called the servant to shake the snow from my overcoat, for it was snowing and blowing furiously out of doors. One of those regular old New York snow storms, which, in my time, used to visit us before Christmas; but which now come upon us scarce as "angels visits."

"May I ask who is the especial object of your commiseration?" I said, advancing towards a couple of young ladies (my nieces) who were seated by the fire, and who had been so earnestly engaged in conversation, that they had not heard my steps in in the passage.

"Oh, uncle," we are so glad to see you," said the elder of the girls, both of whom were daughters of my wife's elder sister. "Patty and I came up from Boston this morning to spend Christmas, according to your invitation, and brother Uriah will come up on Saturday;" and I received a hearty kiss from each of the two bouncing, rosy-cheeked New England girls. "Why," continued Mary, the first speaker, "you had not left the house to go into town half an hour before our sleigh drove up to the door; had he, Aunt Susanna?"

"No my dear, your uncle could scarcely have reached the house of his first patient, before I heard the sleigh stop at the door, and quickly I guessed who it was," replied my wife.

For some minutes the conversation was engrossed with enquiries after all the folks at home, and a variety of family matters of no interest to any but those acquainted with the family affairs.

At length, conversation having become general, I suddenly bethought me of the exclamation I had heard on entering the parlor, and I repeated my former and still unanswered question.

"Who was the object of your special commiseration when I entered the parlor this evening? If I mistake not I heard some remark made about the difficulties some poor creature would have to get through the winter."

"Oh!" said my wife, "we were speaking of a poor family whom the girls and I called upon to-day, for Patty insisted on dragging me out for that purpose, as soon as we had taken lunch. They were passengers in the stage from Boston with them, at least the mother and child were, and father is sick here in New York, and two other children are with them. The delicate health and lady-like appearance of the mother, and the helplessness of the baby and the mother's evident pover
