

as if some spirit of darkness, had got into them, and was looking out of them.

The system of manners which they enforce upon their members, renders them of the same temper and complexion as their priesthood. Dancing is proscribed among them; and those school-masters and school-mistresses who admit dancing masters into their schools, and those parents who employ them for their children, are, for that offence, excluded from the society. Snuff-taking is condemned as a general vice; and Joshua Sylvester himself, when he planted his battery against tobacco, and poured his volley of holy shot from Mount Helicon against the pipes, was not more inveterate than Wesley against smoking.

The Editors of the Methodist Magazine (which is the official publication of the sect) inform us that God prohibited Noah and his posterity from eating the blood of animals, and that the prohibition has been sanctioned and enforced anew in the New Testament.—Acts xv. 20. "If a professor, therefore, will eat black puddings, he does it at his peril." "A custom," they say, "has long prevailed in this country, of drinking wine while at dinner; this is downright pampering: it vitiates the taste, and destroys healthful appetite. The custom ought to be proscribed among all religious people immediately." "As it has been suggested," said the Conference of 1807, "that our rule respecting the exclusion of Barbers who shave or dress their customers, on the Lord's Day, is not sufficiently explicit and positive, what is the decision of the Conference on this important point?" And the important point is decided in these words: "Let it be fully understood that no such person is to be suffered to remain in any of our societies. We charge all our Superintendents to execute this rule in every place without partiality, and without delay." "The sisters are exhorted to dress as becometh those who profess to walk with God, and their husbands are charged to use all the influences of love and piety in that behalf." But what if the husband should wish his wife to dress like the vain women of the world? whom is she then to study to please, and which is she then to obey, her husband, or her helper? Wesley has answered the question, and left directions that said tickers are not to be given to married women who dress in the fashion, and plead that they do it in conformity to their husband's wish. The theatre is an abomination, and though Te Deum was not actually sung in any of the tabernacles for the destruction of Covent Garden and Drury Lane, many a triumphant hint was given that those conflagrations were to be considered as divine judgments. Singing indeed when restricted to hymns and psalms, is highly encouraged; but an anthem is pronounced against complex tunes and anthems."

THOROUGHLY DRIED POTATOES WILL ALWAYS PRODUCE A CROP FREE FROM DISEASE.—Such is the positive assertion of a Professor in the Russian Agricultural Institution. In a pamphlet by this gentleman it is asserted, as an unquestionable fact, that mere drying, if conducted at a sufficiently high temperature is a complete antidote to the disease. The temperature required to produce the desired result is not clearly made out. Mr. Bullman's room in which his first potatoes were dried was heated to 72 deg. and higher. The process occupied three weeks. By way of experiment, he placed others in the chambers of the stove, itself where the thermometer stood at 136 deg. He also ascertained that the vitality of the potato is not effected even if the rind is charred. In the meanwhile, those who have the use of a malt or lime kiln might now try the effect.

WHAT IT COSTS TO BOMBARD A CITY.—That war is an expensive occupation the British Government and People are beginning to understand by means of augmented taxes; and the opening of the fire of the Allies suggests a calculation as to the cost of the iron balls which have been thrown into Sebastopol by the five hundred cannon which have vomited them in what Gortschakoff called "an infernal fire." The accounts by the Asia represent that each of these guns fired one hundred and twenty rounds a day, which gives a total for the five hundred of sixty thousand rounds. This fire had been continued for thirteen days, making an aggregate of seven hundred and eighty thousand missiles rained upon the city. The weight of the shot fired from the guns of the Allies varies probably from nineteen to one hundred and forty pounds, and of the shells from fifteen to one hundred and ten pounds and forty-five pounds would probably be a low estimate for an average. This would give a daily delivery of iron to the Russians, amount to two millions seven hundred thousands pounds, and a total for the thirteen days of thirty-five million one hundred thousand pounds—the prime cost of which, in the rough, at the average price of pig iron in England for the last year, was not less than three hundred and thirteen thousand three hundred and eighty dollars. This is, of course, without any regard to the enormous cost of transportation to the Crimea. If the cannon balls fired from the Allied lines, during the thirteen days, were rolled in rail bars, weighing sixty pounds to the yard, the bars would extend three hundred and thirty-two miles; or if laid as a railroad, would suffice for a single track road from New York to Albany, with all the necessary turn outs. The charge of powder for each gun would probably average about six pounds, which would show an expenditure for the thirteen days of four millions six hundred and eighty thousand pounds of powder. Such powder is worth here eighteen cents a pound, but in England would not probably cost more than fifteen cents, at which price the powder cost seven hundred and two thousand dollars.—N. Y. Courier & Enquirer.

A captain of the Royal navy, one of the old school, being at a ball at Portsmouth, had been accepted by a beautiful partner, a lady of rank, who, in the most delicate manner possible, hinted to him the propriety of putting on a pair of gloves. "Oh!" was the elegant reply, "never mind me, ma'am I shall wash my hands when I've done dancing."

Charles Fox once received a severe lecture from his father about his extravagance, who concluded by saying he wondered he could enjoy a moment's repose, when he considered the immense sums he owed. "O, Sir," replied he, "you shouldn't wonder at that; but father think how my creditors can."

Son: "said Mr. N.: 'How could you marry an Irish girl?' Why, father," said the son, "I'm not able to keep two women—and if I'd marry a Yankee girl, I had to have hired an Irish girl to take care of her."

THE LATE CZAR'S BREECHES.—Imagine only—but it is difficult to put a case sufficiently absurd—imagine only the late Lord Londonderry's old leather breeches received by his Regiment of Life Guards as a precious relic, to the solemn sound of a Te Deum and the loyal strains of "God save the Queen!" Imagine the hearts of the soldiers to beat high at the sight of the venerable deposit—their faces to flush with martial ardour—each warrior instinctively to clutch the hilt of his good sword, or to press the trigger of his carbine—resolved to do or die in defence of the article above mentioned. An English pantomime-writer dare not introduce such an incident upon the stage, for there are some improbabilities too violent for the digestion even of a Christmas audience. The scene, however, has been acted in broad daylight, partly at Potsdam, and partly at Brauenburg. The King of Prussia and the 6th Regiment of Chirassiers—unwilling sharers in the Tomfoolery, no doubt—were the active agents in the transaction. A deputation from the regiment, now stationed at Brauenburg was told off for the solemn duty, and proceeded to Potsdam to receive the old clothes of the late Czar. The King handed them over to sub-officers chosen from the regiment for their trustworthiness, and then the deputation returned with the bundle to Brauenburg. They found the regiment under arms at the railway station ready to receive the graceful donation with all due enthusiasm. The old clothes were shaken out—given to the winds as one may say—and straightway the regiment present arms, and the band struck up the Russian national hymn. Nor was this all; the 6th Prussian Cuirassiers were next formed into a square, that the soldiers might have the benefit of hearing an oration from their Colonel upon the honour which had been conferred on them by their being selected as the recipients of so holy a relic. Our correspondent most unfortunately has not furnished us with even an epitome of the arguments and considerations urged by the military orator in his treatment of so lofty a theme. The German race generally labour under a peculiar inaptitude for appreciating a ridiculous situation; but one would have supposed such an occasion would have been too trying even for their simplicity. What can one say about old clothes?—"Soldiers of the 6th Cuirassiers,—brave companions in neutrality,—be diligent in brushing these venerable relics, and occasionally air them." We are at the end of our eloquence, but a Northern German would, no doubt, be able to divagate into space upon so touching a theme, and to connect, the old clothes with the loftiest emotions of his imperfect nature.—Times.

THE LIVER PILLS.

The Liver Pills of Dr. M'Lane were first used by him exclusively in his own practice. So efficacious were they in all cases of Liver complaint, that they became famous, and attracting the attention of the medical faculty, passed into general use. They act with great certainty and regularity; the patient almost immediately feels the dispersion of his disease and is gradually restored to health. With some the effect is almost miraculous, frequently experiencing immediate relief, after having for months resorted to drugs and medicines of another description, in vain. Diseases of the Liver are very common in this country, and are often frightful in character. Those who experience any of the promontory symptoms of this dangerous and complicated disease, should at once procure a box of Dr. M'Lane's Pills, and perhaps, thereby, be saved a word of misery.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for, DR. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS, and take none else. There are other Pills, purporting to be Liver Pills, now before the public. Dr. M'Lane's Liver Pills, also his Celebrated Vermifuge, can now be had at all respectable Drug Stores in the United States and Canada.
