SUICIDE OF TWO LOVERS.

They Went Out Driving and Drank Strychnine.

WILMINGTON, Ohio, June 29.—Gilbert Palmer of Jamestown, about 21 years old, procured a horse and buggy at a livery stable here Saturday night, as he said, to go to Port William about four miles north. He was last seen at this place about 10 o'clock in company with Mary Concklin, aged 16, the daughter of a widow living in Port William. Miss Concklin's mother objected strenuously to her association with Palmer.

Yesterday morning Palmer and Miss Concklin were discovered on the roadside, both dead. They had taken the robes out of the buggy and spread them down on the ground, and placed the buggy cushion on them for a head rest. Near them were found two glasses and two papers that contained strychnine. A note was found written on one of the labels reading as follows: "Bury us as close together as possible. Good-bye."

"EL PADRE."

Packed 100 in a box; two bundles, 50 cigars in each, with ribbons marked "Reina Victoria." Each cigar has around it a narrow purple band with our name thereon as a protection (from fraud) to the consumer.

The Apiary.

Out in the bright June sunshine,
Under the apple trees
Stand in a row together
The homes of my honey-bees.

This swarm I call "old cressys"—
Hybrids, and full of spite,
Farthest away from the pathway,
Working from morning till night

Next, "the Italian beauties"—
Gold, 'gainst the hive's white ground,
Ready to swarm first in spring-time,
Hive full of bees the year round.

Then, "the Italian's daughter,"
Hive in one week full of brood—
She may soon equal her mother,
And prove, when tasted, as good.

Next, the red hive, with inmates,
The kindest and gentlest of all;
And sections packed full of honey
I'll take from the hive in the fall.

So, as I walk through the clover,
Or down to the end of the row,
And pause by each doorway a moment,
When, busy, they rush to and fro,

I think, in this world's busy harvest,
We people are somewhat like bees—
Some robbers, some drones, and some workers
None thrive with whom work disagrees.
—(Nebraska Bee-Keeper.)

—The purity of honey cannot be absolutely determined by analysis. The difference in atmosphere and soil makes it impossible to invariably decide whether it is adulterated or not.

—Excellent honey-gathering bees have been introduced from Cyprus. When the Venetians owned the island, 200,000 hives of bees were kept there. People used honey for sugar in those days. Now there are only 30,000 hives of bees, owing to oppressive taxes levied upon the industry by the Turks. The residents are usually unwilling to sell any of their bees, believing that those left behind will fly away after the ones which are disposed of. Accordingly, the purchaser is commonly obliged to buy 50 colonies to secure 50 queens.

—The standard for Italian bees lately adopted by the National Beekeepers' Association requires them to have three bands of a color, varying from a golden yellow to leather color; to be quiet when handled; to adhere to the comb when properly handled without rushing around, clustering or falling to the ground; and they must put their honey in compact shape in times of scarcity, or, in other words, when too much rushed with business. This is probably the first established standard where the behavior is placed higher than the color, markings or pedigree.

—A fruit-grower in England established an extensive greenhouse, and stocked it with choice native and exotic fruit trees. He expected in due time that he would have an abundance of fruit. There were plenty of blossoms on each tree, but no fruit. A great many different plans were employed to bring the trees to bearing, but they were all unsuccessful. Finally a friend suggested to him to place a colony of bees in his greenhouse to fertilize the blossoms. The next season there was an abundance of fruit. The bees had distributed the pollen from flower to flower, and thus fertilized the blossoms.
