lie will really believe in Father Chiniquy's tens of thousands already, converted, and the other tens of thousands whom he is yet to bring into the fold, they may be as well entitled to hug themselves in their delusion as the child who is persuaded that the archmagician really had tuns of all sorts of choice liquids capable of being dispensed at will from his amazing bottle. We shall not, therefore, interrupt the occupation of the estimable convert, or interfere with the amusement of his credulous audience. But we may. for the information of our own renders, send before them a statement which will enable them to judge how far they need tremble for the stability of the Catholic faith in America.

BANQUET GIVEN BY THE OFFICERS OF No. 4 & 5 COMPANIES OF THE 1st OR PRINCE OF WALES REGIMENT OF VOLUNTEER

On Wednesday evening, 3rd instant, the officers of the above Volunteer Companies entertained their men at Dinner, which was given at the Armory,

Victoria Square. That fine apartment, well lit up with gas, and graced with flags and banners appropriate to the occasion, interspersed with Irish harps and Prince of Wales Plumes, looked very gay. We noticed several mottoes appended to the walls-"United we Stand," "Semper paratus," "Let Erin remember the Days of old," "Ich Dien," "Coad Mille Failthe."

Behind the Chair was placed the Royal Arms, a large green banner having the Union Jack, a picture of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and one of Prince Albert on the opposite side, a large representation of the Prince of Wales Plume, &c, &.

The Chair was then taken at 8 o'clock by Capt. Kavanagh, [No. 5 Company], supported by Colonel Wily, commanding the regiment, on the right, and Captain Daly [No 4 Company] on the left. At the cross table were also seated as guests, Major Devlin, Captain Hanson, Marcus Doherty, Esq., President St. Patrick's Society, and Mr. Ivers. Lieut. Gillies occupied the front of one table, and Lieut. Rooney the other. Ensigns Gallagher, Burns, Murphy and Farrell mixed with the men, "on hospitable cares intent."

Justice having been done to the various viands, substantial and artistic, the chairman rose and sain -The officers of No. 4 and 5 Companies were happy to meet their men on this occasion. It was intended to entertain them on St. Patrick's Day, but as that national festival, the anniversary of the Patron Saint or Ireland fell in Holy Week, it was thought best to defer it : that that was the first available night; and hoped, on the part of the officers, that they would all enjoy themselves.

Rising again, the Chairman said he had to claim their attention-Whenever the subjects of Queen Victoria met around the festive board, the first of the standard toasts was, as it ought to be, the Health of Her Most Gracious Majesty. (Applause.) Irishmen are true in their allegiance to their lawful sovereign; with them it is not mere lip loyalty, and they have proved to the death how they cherished that noble sentiment; how they felt and how they could act when fidelity to their legitimate King was tried by the fieriest of tests. Irish Catholics have sometimes been taunted with disloyalty; every act of that body, in their native land, when writhing under oppression, or even when struggling within the limits of the Constitution to obtain what they believed were birth-rights, were branded as treason by men fattening on the spoils of usurpation, or basking in the sunshine of pince and power and privilege. Irishmen can discriminate between the Head of the Government and those who administer it; and too often have the acts of the Executive in England, flowing through evil channels, been made to assume in Ireland the most repulsive shapes, the most unnatural proportions. But these are things of the Past, thank, God, rather than the Present; brighter days are dawning on the land of our hearts' affections, and we rejoice in her good prospects, while we are not insensible to the claims of the land of our adoption. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, we belong to an Empire the greatest on earth, and that is something to be proud of; of which it has been said and often repeated, but it bears repetition, that the roll of her morning drum follows the sun round the globe. Yet there was a time when Irishmen felt little enthusiasm when the arms of England were covered with victory. They shared none of the triumph, because they looked upon the conqueror as an enemy-and her statesmen have since admitted that they had had but too much cause—the glory was not theirs, though their sons and brothers had gallantly fought, and largely contributed to the result. Still, it was the English soldier who got the praise. It was England who won, and Ireland was not heard of. However, now the Victoria Cross, given to merit alone, for acts of bravery on the field of battle or in presence of the enemy hangs on the breast of many a true Milesian, and in fact to read the lists of the heroes thus honoured sounds very like calling the roll of No. 4 or 5 Company. [Loud applause.] And as merit is acknowledged, and ability takes the prize, in many departments young frishmen are carrying all before them.

Gentlemen, Victoria is our Queen, as just as she is good, and both our temporal and spiritual duty dictate obedience to the higher powers, and if there is a people on earth who ought to be loyal, it is the Canadian people [Cheers.] I therefore give you, "The Queen." God bless her.

The toast was received and drank with every demonstration of devoted loyalty and enthusiasm, and with all the honors.

After the cheering had subsided, Captain Hanson sung, in good style, "God Save the Queen," the company all standing.

The Chairman soon again called upon the company to fill their glasses, and said-When the Prince of Wales came to put the finishing touch on that, great triumph of engineering shill which now spans our magnificent liver-and which may be classed with the wonders of the world—gladdened the hearts of Lower Canadians, and left the most agreeable impressions behind, and his acts subsequently prove he does not forget us .- His connexion with us is intimate - the 100th Regiment, sons of the soil, is called after him, but what comes closer home to us, is that ours — the first Canadian Regiment—is the Prince of Wales' own-and long may the 1st carry its colors unsullied-and long may they friendly, and bravely, and honorably bear their motto-"Nulla secundus"-engraved as it is, on our breast plates, beneath the Prince's Plume. [Loud cheers.] I give you the health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. Drunk with all honors-amid rounds of cheers, till the roof rang again with "Hip, hip, hurrn,"and one cheer more.

Song by Sergeant Herbert-" The Bold Soger

The next toast was, "The Governor General." Capt. Daly in proposing the toast said, that as a commander of one of the companies who were their guests that evening, he had been asked to share the duties of chairman, and that the toast he was about We can find no reason for believ to propose, therefore, fell to his share; that to every British subject there were certain stereotype healths or pledges which must always be drunk. The British colonist there was another which they would, he felt sure, drink heartily that evening. He knew that he addressed an audience of militiamen of Oanada, who sat before him clothed in the uniform of that service to which they belonged, and in which they had enlisted for the benefit of the land in which they lived. He knew well that, as had been said by his friend the chairman, next to the dearland of their birth from which their race had come, the land of their adoption was the dearest to them on earth .-

under which they lived and which had not been enjoyed elsewhere. At the head of that constitutional system under which they lived was found the official personage who represented the Queen of the British Empire-be meant the Governor General-who was entitled to a tribute of respect from them that evening, as being their commonder-in-chief as militiamen of Canada. He, therefore, felt it to be his duty and his pleasure to propose the health of "The Governor General, the Commander-in-Chief."

Captain Daly next gave, "The Volunteers of Canach"-introducing the toast in a very appropriate manner

Song by Capt. Hanson-" The Slave Ship." Captain Daly rose again, and said he was sure the health he had to propose would be well received—it was that of Major Devlin, who had raised No. 4 Company, of which he, Captain Daly had then the honor of commanding. (Cheers) He dilated on all the difficulties an officer raising a Company had to encounter, and gave full credit where it was due. He would therefore, give them the good health of Major Devlin. (Loud cheers.)

The toast was drank in a rapturous manner, three times three..." For he's a right good fellow," &c. Major Devlin returned thanks, and spoke at considerable length on the formation of his company [No: 4], dwelling on its growth, success, and present position, and ended by recommending the men follow his example and become teetotallers. Before sitting down, he said he had much pleasure in pro posing the healths of the officers at present in command of No. 4 and No. 5 Companies, whom he would not separate, and dwelt at some length on what he considered the respective merits of each. He gave the health of Captain Kavanagh and Captain Daly.

The toast was received with vociferous applause. Captain Kavanagh and Captain Daly severally returned thanks.

Captain Daly then proposed-prefacing the toast in suitable terms—" Colonel Wily and our Guests." Col. Wily, in returning thanks, spoke of the Vo-lunteers of Montreal as his children—sons he was proud of. He related an anecdote in connection with the Prince's visit: that when His Royal Highness was about to land on our wharf, his military attaches, pointing to the Volunteers drawn up as a guard of honor, said, "Are these regular soldiers," which, he said was the highest compliment that could be paid to them. The Colonel concluded a long address by proposing " The Non-Commissioned Officers of the Regiment."

Drank with thunders of applause. Captain Hanson, as another of the guests, returned thanks in a short and soldierlike speech, which was very well received.

Marcus Doberty, Esq., next returned thanks, and spoke long and eloquently on the Volunteer system in general, and our own in particular.

Mr. Ivers returned thanks, and related several interesting anecdotes of the bravery of the Irish soldiers in action, and concluded by singing that beautiful song—"I saw from the beech."

The Chairman then rose and called for a bumper, as he had to propose the health of one whom they held in high esteem. Speaking of the necessity of military instruction for men who might any day he called out in aid of the civil power, or to repel invasion, he said they would anticipate who he meant. That if the men before him were efficient in drill, they were indebted for it to their friend, Lieutenant Rooney. [Great applause.] Continuing in this he spoke warmly of what the officers and strain, men of the two companies owed their Drill Instructor-from the first day they met-as a nucleus to the present. Alluding to his extensive knowledge gained as a non-commissioned officer in the British army to his excellent method of communicating instruction, and hoped to see the day when he would be high in the Active Volunteer Force of this city .-He gave "The health of Lieut. Rooney." [Long consinued cheering.]

Lieut, Rooney returned thanks to Captain Kayanagh, and the officers and men, in an excellent address, which was cheered to the echo.

Captain Daly proposed the health of " Lieut, Gilhes," saying how much he owed that officer, and and the influence that he deservedly had with them.

Lieut. Gillies returned thanks. Song-"The Shamrock," followed by several Comic and Sentimental Songs. Captain Daly proposed the two following toasts-The Press," and "The Ladies."

Mr. Ivers, in a very enthusiastic manner, returned thanks for the latter, and so amid song and glee, and social merriment, tht evening past on-the company emed to enjoy themselves slipped off soon after 12 o'clock; still the laugh and jihe, and merry roundelay, and hearty cheer, and "the jingling of glasses," which they say "all music surpasses," went on till the wee short hour and at half-past one; the party broke up, after spending, it would appear, a very pleasant evenink.

THE PROTESTANT BISHOPS AND THE SEVEN ESSAYS. -The condemnation of the seven essays by the Bench of Bishops, has not only caused the books to be read more extensively than they would otherwise have been; but they have induced a very active research into the expressed opinions of some of the present Episcopal censors. The search has brought to light among other things, some unorthodox writings of the Rev. Dr. Thirlwall, now Bishop of St. Davids, and one of those who has just sat in judgment on the essayists. In 1825 the Bishop translated Schleiermacher's Essay on St. Luke, and wrote an introduction to the translation. The author was a learned, but well-known rationalistic writer, and encountered for that rason the warm onposition of the late pious King of Prussia; but this fact did not prevent one of the most rationalistic of his books from being put into an English dress by an English clergyman, accompanied by an original discourse. approving of and enforcing the German's views. The following are some of Bishop Thirlwall's very unothodox remarks :-

On Inspiration .- That doctrine of inspiration, once universally prevalent in the Christian Church, according to which the sacred writers were merely passive organs or instruments of the Holy Spirit, has been so long abandoned, that it would now be waste of time to attack it; when I say it has been abandoned. I mean of course by the learned, for, undoubtedly, it is still a generally received notion.

Among theologians this doctrine of literal inspiration has been softened into a more flexible theory the agency of the spirit has been represented as accommodating itself to circumstances, and assuming, as occasion required, two different forms—one the inspiration of suggestions—the other the inspiration of superintendency.—Ib. P. xii.

As the more rigid theory of inspiration was abandoned on account of the insuperable difficulties opposed to it by the discrepancies found in the Gospels, by the Church. so these same discrepancies compel us to admit that the superintending control of the Spirit was not exerted to exempt the sacred writers altogether from

We can find no reason for believing the inspiration of suggestion was in any instance necessary to the composition of the Gospils, consequently we cannot helieve that it was ever exerted.

We must seek the operation of the Spirit, not in any temporary, physical, or even intellectual changes wrought on its subjects. But in the continual presence and action of what is most vital and essential in Christianity itself .- P. xix. With this view of our Gospels, we certainly need not be alarmed at the course which may be taken by any investigations instituted to explain their mutual relation, or even scruple to prosecute them ourselves.

Among the chief attractions to this land, and among The Templation .- The narrative of this temptation the principal reasons for their attachment to it, was must have been wholly unintelligible to the new the free, liberal, and constitutional government converts, and could only have given rise to wild, phantastical, and most unprofitable speculations

P. lxxxvi. Cunonical Gospels - Our canonical gospels about the middle of the second century were introduced into general and public use, and thenceforth became the objects of constantly increasing veneration .-P. cxxxvi.

After the four gospels were universally received in the Catholic Church, Tertullian thought it safer to decline appealing to them in any disputed question of doctrine, and considered the Apostolic tradition as the only sure foundation of Christien faith; the same maxims continued to prevail both in the Eastern and Western churcher, till the Reformation. The regula fidei-which both in its origin, and its subsequent enlargements and modifications, was independent of scripture, always constituted the principal part of the catechumen's education .- P. cxxxvi.

At Antioch itself, in the most flourishing period of Christian literature, before the Reformation, in the time of Chrysostom, it was thought by no means inconsistent with a reputation for extraordinary sanctity, that a person so distinguished was destitute of acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures .-P. cxxxvi.

Trunslator's Opinion of the Essay .- The discussions of Dr. Schleiermacher lead, in several instances, to results differing widely from those commonly received, - when this is the case, the reader is requested to suspend his jugdment till he has compared the view here presented with that to which he has been accustomed. Such a comparison will probably, in general, prove favourable to the former .-

It would seem from this that experience establishes a satisfactory mode of converting Clergymen into Christians. If Dr. Thirlwall's promotion to the Episcopal Bench has had the effect of enlightening him spiritually, would it not be well, instead of condemning the essayists ex Cathedra, or even arguing with them, to make them Bishops too? It is a pity that, with all the discussion about orthodoxy, there is not a little more straightforward honest. It there were no man who professes belief in the Thirty-nine Articles could write like Dr. Thirlwall in 1825, or the Essayists in 1860. It is bad enough for politicians to show that their opinions are nothing as compared to their places; but it is worse to find the same weakness in parsons Intelligence has been received of the ship Muldlesex with a large number of people on board. This ship, which was upwards of 1400 tons register, and commanded by Captain Parmelee, was bound for New York, from Liverpool, with a general cargo, and crew and passengers numbering 60 souls. A few hundred miles from the Irish coast, in consequence of the severe weather experienced, it was found necessary to lannch the boats with a view of abandoning the vessel, which was momentarily expected to go down. As is but too frequently the case in such emergencies all the boats successively, save one were stove in, and this only resource capable of containing but fifteen of the imperilled lives. The remaining forty-five were left to their fate. Four days after the boat reached Basket Island having in that time lost two of its crew.

DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. I have used the medicine known as Perry Davis' Pain Killer in my family for the last twelve months, and have great pleasure in testifying in favor of its very valuable properties. I would not on any account be without it. During the existence of the cholera last year, I used no medicine of any sort but the Pain Killer, although myself and several members of my family were attacked by it severely. and I am happy to say that the Pain Killer was equal to every emergency-it was both a preventive and a certain cure I consider I should not be doing my daty to the community did I not say this much. If I were attacked by the cholera to-day the Pain Killer should be the only remedy I would use. I have thoroughly tested it and know it can be relied F. E. BERGINCEND, Galena, Ill.

Eor Sale, at Wholesale, by Lyman, Savage & Co.; Carter, Kerry & Co., Lamplough & Campbell, Wholesale agents for Montreal.

The following remedies are offered to the public a, the best, most perfect, which medical science can afford. Ayen's Cathannie Phas have been prepared with the utmost skill which the medical profession of this age possesses, and their effects show they have virtues which surpass any combination of medicines hitherto known. Other preparations do more or less good; but this cures such dangerous complaints, so quick and so surely, as to prove an efficacy and a power to uproot disease beyond any thing which men have known before. By removing the obstructions of the internal organs and stimulating them into healthy action, they renovate the fountains of life and vigor, - health courses anew through the body, and the sick man is well again. They are adapted to disease, and disease only, for when taken by one in health they produce but little effect. This is the perfection of medicine. It is antagonistic to disease, and no more. Tember children may take them with impunity. If they are sick they will care them, if they are well they will do them no harm.

Give them to some patient who has been pros-trated with billious complaint; see his been-up, tot-tering form straighten with strength again; see his long-lost appetite return; see his channy features blossom into health. Give them to some sufferer whose foul blood has burst out in scrofula till his skin is covered with sores; who stands, or sits, or lies in anguish. He has been drenched inside and out with every potion which ingenuity could suggest. Give him these PILLs, and mark the effect; see the scabs fall from his body; see the new, fair with that has grown under those; we the late lates. skin that has grown under them; see the late leper that is clean. Give them to him whose angry humors have planted rheumatism in his joints and bones; move him, and he screeches with pain; he too has been soaked through every muscle of his body with liniments and salves; give him these Fills to purify his blood; they may not cure him, for, alas! there are cases which no mortal power can reach; but mark, he walks with crutches now, and now he walks alone; they have cured him. Give them to the lean, sour, haggard dyspeptic, whose gnawing stomach has long ago caten every smile from his face and every muscle from his hady. See his appetite return, and with it his health; see the new man. See her that was radiant with health and loveliness blasted and too early withering away; want of exercise or mental anguish, or some lurking disease, has deranged the internal organs of digestion, assimilation or secretion, till they do their office ill. Her blood is vitiated, her health is gone. Give her these Pills to stimulate the vital principle into renewed vigor, to east out the obstructions, and infuse a new vitality into the blood. Now look again — the roses blossom on her check, and where lately sorrow sat joy hursts from every feature. See the sweet infant wasted with worms. Its wan, sickly features tell you without disgnise, and painfully distinct, that they are cating its life away. Its pinched-up nose and cars, and restless sleepings, tell the dreadful truth in language which every mother knows. Give it the Pills in large doses to sweep these vile parasites from the body. Now turn again and see the ruddy bloom of child-hood. Is it nothing to do these things? Nay, are they not the marvel of this age? And yet they are done around you every day.

Have you the less serious symptoms of these distempers, they are the easier cured. Jaundice, Costiveness, Headache, Sideache, Hearthurn, Foul Stomach, Nausea, Pain in the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, King's Evil, Neuralgie, Gout, and kindred complaints all arise from the derangements which these PILLS rapidly cure. Take them perse-veringly, and under the counsel of a good Physician if you can; if not, take them judiciously by such advice as we give you, and the distressing, dangerous diseases they cure, which afflict so many mil-lions of the human race, are east out like the devils of old - they must burrow in the brutes and in the Sees. Price 25 cents per box - 5 boxes for $1.

Through a trial of many years and through every nation of civilized men, Ayen's Cherney Protonal has been found to afford more relief and to cure more cases of pulmonary disease than any other remedy known to mankind. Cases of apparently settled consumption have been cured by it, and thousands of sufferers who were deemed beyond the reach of human aid have been restored to their friends and usefulness, to sound health and the enjoyments of life, by this all-powerful antidote to diseases of the hugs and throat. Here a cold had scitled on the hugs. The dry, hacking cough, the glassy eye, and the pale, thin features of him who was lately lusty and strong, whisper to all but him Consequences. He tries every thing; but the disease is greating at his vitals, and shows its fatal symptoms more and more over all his frame. He is taking the Chemry Prevoual now; it has stopped his cough and made his breathing easy; his sleep is sound at night; his appetite returns, and with it his strength. The dart which pierced his side is broken. Scarcely any neighborhood can be found which has not some living trophy like this to shadow forth the virtues which have won for the to shadow forth the virtues which have now to But CHERRY PECTORAL an imperishable renown. But its usefulness does not end here. Nay, it accom-plishes more by prevention than cure. The countplishes more by prevention than care. The countless colds and coughs which it cares are the seed which would have ripeaed into a dreadful harvest of incurable diseases. Influenza, Croup, Brouchitis, Hoaseness, Fleurisy, Whooping Cough, and all irritations of the throat and lungs are easily cured by the Chenny Protonal if taken in season. Every family should have it by them, and they will find it an invaluable protection from the insidious prowler which carries off the parent sheep from many a flock, the darling lamb from many a home.

Authenticated evidence of these facts, with directions for the treatment of each complaint, may be found in Ayer's American Almanae, of which we publish three millions, and scatter them broadcast over the earth, in order that the sick every where may have before them the information it contains. Druggists and dealers in medicine generally have them for distribution gratis, and also for sale these remedies, prepared by Dn. J. C. Ayen, Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.
