LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 10.

RELIGION AND BUSINESS.

The ladies assembled in Toronto the other day discussed very freely what they termed a "double standard" of morals as applied to people of different sexes. But there would appear to be a double standard which some people apply to their own conduct. One standard for private life, and another for public life. One standard for a man as an individual; quite another for the same person as a member of a business corporation.

A striking illustration of this fact may be gathered from the career of the celebrated Standard Oil magnate—Mr. Rockefeller. He has lately published a book of "Reminiscences"—though it is mainly reminiscent of his private life. From it we picture an amiable and affectionable gentleman, most charitably inclined, and devoted to the prosperity of his church and the welfare of his fellowmen. Of course, when a man prepares an autobiography he is very apt to exaggerate his own good qualities. But there is plenty of corroborative evidence, supplied by those who know him intimately, to prove that he has not overdrawn his portrait. And yet what a vastly different picture his public career presents!

Here we have a man who, in one phase of life, shows a most excellent character. A thoroughly religious man, and a prominent member of a Protestant denomination which is not only orthodox, but largely inclined to puritanism. Philanthropic as anyone could desire—giving, not only to great systems of benevolence, but liberal to the poor. Ever ready to help on any good work; no vices of any kind apparent; his chief recreation being golf and Sunday schools. And yet what a contrast is his life as a businessman! He would not pass a poor beggar on the roadside without trying to help him. But as the head of the Standard combination, thousands of men point to him as the man who robbed them of everything they had—who is responsible for untold misery and distress. As a private individual, the Bible is his text book, but the corporation he controls not only violates the law continually but buys up lawmakers and judges. In one capacity, he could not look on the sufferings of a dog without pity; in the other, he is perfectly indifferent to all the suffering of body and mind that falls on the victims of his corporation.

The contrast is startling; but only on account of the prominence of the man, and the magnitude of his operations. There are plenty of men just like him, only their sphere of life is more limited. How is it to be accounted for? Partly, perhaps, because the very puritanism in his nature gives him a self-approving conscience. Whatever he does is right in his own estimation. A great combination like the Standard trust is, in his opinion, necessary for the welfare of mankind; the suffering that may occur to individuals is but an incident in the onward march of a great enterprise—regrettable, perhaps, but unavoidable.

But men of this kind, while by heredity and education they have accepted the Biblical doctrines of altrusism, are by no means altruistic in their nature. It is right to be honest and kind; so they exercise their virtues in private life where they can do no harm. In business the real nature of the man breaks out—selfish, grasping, unscrupulous, trampling over every obstacle in the way of success.

A great many men think they believe in the Bible—would feel insulted at the suggestions that they did not. But a genuine belief that permeates every fibre of the man and influences every action of his life—that is something they have never had. A lie is a lie—whether uttered by Smith as deacon, or Smith as capitalist. To take what does not belong to him is a theft, whether he picks his neighbor's pockets at church, or robs him of his business and property by the relentless operation of a trust. To destroy a neighbor's life is murder, whether a person maliciously runs over a child with an automobile, shoots a man when he is angry, or drives one to suicide by ruining his business.

A double standard of morality is an immoral monstrosity. A man must be judged by only one—if the doctrines of Christianity are true.

A MANITOBA ELECTION OUTRAGE

In the recent trial of two of the special constables appointed by the Manitoba Government to do duty on the occasion of the last Dominion general election, some light was thrown on the methods resorted to by Premier Roblin and his colleagues to assist the Conservative party to gain power at Ottawa.

The action was brought by Iko Grabosky, who took an active part at Gimli in the interest of the Liberal candidate. The evidence went to show that the defendants, who acted on the instructions of another provincial government employee named Szablewski, a road inspector, arrested the plaintiff on a trumped-up charge and locked him up in order to have him out of the way on the day of polling, informing him that he would be released when the polls were closed. That the sole object of the special constables was to deprive Grabosky of his vote is shown by the fact that nothing more has since been heard of the charge on which he was arrested—that of attempted bribery. One of the witnesses, the clerk of the provincial executive council, testified that partisan special constables, who were to be found all over the province during the Dominion election, were appointed under an order-in-council that was made retroactive, and that their names were never gazetted.

The jury took the only reasonable view of the case, namely, that there was no justification whatever for the arrest of Grabosky, that the charge against him had been made solely as a pretext, and awarded him $100.

The Provincial Government did its utmost to shield the leading figure in the affair, Szablewski. During the last session of the Legislature he was examined before the public accounts committee, but the Government succeeded in preventing a full investigation. It was shown, however, that Szablewski was a zealous Conservative worker in the Gimli district, addressing public meetings, and, as inspector of road-making, distributing Provincial Government checks on the eve of polling day.

Such deliberate misuse, for partisan purposes, of the powers vested in provincial authorities, is by no means new in Manitoba. The record, as the Winnipeg Free Press says, is a long one, and extends over the entire nine years during which Mr. Colin H. Campbell, as attorney-general, has been the holder of the seat of justice in the province. The Grabosky case is simply one more item in a record of varied character running a wide gamut of injustice.

WHICH IS IT.

[Hamilton Times.]

A good many of Hon. Adam Beck's audience will agree with the Spectator, which has arrived at the conclusion that in this power matter, "he either does not know what he is talking about or else does know and it talking at random for a purpose." In either case he is not talking for the benefit of Hamilton ratepayers.

A PRACTICAL BODY.

[Ottawa Journal.]

The delegates to the Imperial Press Conference concluded their labors in the formation of a permanent Empire Press Association, with headquarters in London. This was a practical and important thing. The conference was opened with a practical suggestion for action to secure cheaper cable rates within the empire. During the course of the conference it was announced that as a result of the representations of the delegates, the Pacific cable board had decided to cut its rates in two. There is said to be a strong probability that the Atlantic cable companies may be induced to take similar steps. However that may be, the Imperial Press Conference, as the Journal has already remarked, has amply justified the wisdom of its summoning.

THAT OTTER "INTERVIEW."

[Brantford Expositor.]

The New York Herald this week published a dispatch from Winnipeg giving a purported interview with General Otter, who is now in the west. The article in question attributed to General Otter the statements that the United States could never defeat Canada in a war and that Lord Kitchener was only fit to manage a departmental store. It is scarcely necessary to add that General Otter has repudiated the entire interview, not, however, before considerable harm has been done. Many American papers have taken up the issue and a mild sensation has been created. * * * Wide publicity should be given to Gen. Otter's denial. Moreover, the press representative who sent out the interview should be prosecuted by the provincial authorities, on whom the onus rests, under the new federal law regarding the circulation of false news calculated to be detrimental or injurious to the country.

EATEN BY ALLIGATORS.

Pensacola, Fla., July 9. — With the bones stripped of flesh by alligators, the body of Herman Wilcox, of Chicago was found yesterday in Good Time Lake, two miles from Camp Walton, a summer report, where Wilcox had been residing with his mother for the past two months.

Not knowing that the lake contained hundreds of alligators, Wilcox went in for a swim. He had been missing for four days.

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMS. RESULTS

papers on the whole were hard enough, and consequently the results are quite gratifying."

The inspector has been extremely busy the past few weeks getting the examination results in hand, and checking up the returns.

The Robb medal, won by Geordon Munnoch, is purchased from a fund of $500 left by the late Mr. Robb, of New York, a former pupil of the old Hellmuth Boys' College. The Boyle medals are presented by the board of education.

The Separate Schools.

The separate school results were also most pleasing. Inspector Sullivan is delighted with the stand taken by the majority of the pupils, especially the prizewinners.

Over 90 per cent in any subject is remarkable, and to take more than that is to do brilliant work.

KELLY—BROCK

Former London Lady Wedded at Windsor Yesterday.

Windsor, July 10. — One of the most beautiful weddings ever celebrated in this city was performed on Tuesday evening last, when Miss Merle Kenward Brock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Brock, formerly of London, was united in marriage to Dr. Frank A. Kelly, of Detroit, by Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick, rector of All Saints'. The church was very handsomely decorated with marguerites and palms, and presented a beautiful appearance

The bride was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Creena Henderson and Miss Grace Dewar. The matrons of honor were Mrs. Frederick H. Lawrence, of Bruce Mines, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Walter Hayes, Windsor. The groom was attended by Dr. C. M. Hoff.

The bride's gown was an empire of white ivory satin, en train, with corsage of Roman pearl bands. Her traveling gown was a taupe serge tailored gown, with hat to match.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, after which they left for a trip to Cleveland, thence to Muskoka.

They will reside at the Tuller in Detroit until their new home is completed.

ARCHBISHOP'S ANNIVERSARY

Yesterday was the 27th anniversary of the ordination of His Grace Archbishop McEvay to the priesthood of the Church of Rome. And many of his personal friends, and those who have known him through his work in this and other places sent telegrams and letters expressive of their congratulations.

Archbishop McEvay was educated at St. Michael's College, Toronto; the Seminary of St. Francis, at Milwaukee, and the Montreal College, and on July 9, 1882, the Rev. Fergus P. McEvay was admitted to the priesthood of the church of which he holds so prominent and influential a place. After his ordination he was stationed at the parish of Fenelon Falls and from that time on he has placed the whole of his energies and ability at the service of his church. He was well known and highly esteemed in London, and though Londoners were proud of the honor that had come to him when he was called to the archbishopric, they regretted the loss of so firm a friend of the city and its people. And all unite in their heartiest wellwishes on this anniversary of his long service.

THE CROPS IN CANADA ARE AVERAGING WELL

Make a Good Showing Compared With Last Year—Lack of Rain East.

Ottawa, July 9.—A bulletin on the condition of crops and live stock in Canada at date of July 1, has been issued by the census and statistics office today, based on the reports of a large staff of correspondents.

Low temperature and cold rains prevailed over the whole of Canada in May and the early part of June, which delayed seeding, and checked vegetation. Then followed a period of drought thoughout the northern and eastern parts of Ontario, the western and southern sections of Quebec, and nearly the whole of the Maritime Provinces. Grain, hay and root crops were consequently in poor condition in all these regions. On both sides of the St. Lawrence, in the lower parts of Quebec, and in the southwestern counties of Ontario, there were copious showers in June, and all crops were looking well at the end of the month. Fall wheat would be ready for the reapers in the second week of July. A feature of the season, however, has been a series of showers over local areas, and the conditions of crops are irregular. But there is a note of hope in the reports of many correspondents, encouraged by the widely extended rains of the 28th and 29th of June; and in the Maritime Provinces, where the drought was most severely felt, there were heavy rains on the 7th of July.

In the West.

British Columbia has had a like experience of dry weather in June, with rains at the end of the month, and fall wheat is the only good crop there. In the northwest provinces fine growing weather followed the seeding of spring wheat, oats and barley, and correspondents throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are jubilant at the prospects. Rainfall was ample to the end of June, except in a few localities, and although seeding operations were delayed, cereals and grasses are nearly as well advanced as in any previous year. "Ideal," is the favorite word of many correspondents, and it is generally expected that spring wheat would be out in ear by the 10th of July. In Alberta, fall wheat was badly winter-killed, and much of the land has been resown with spring wheat, oats and barley. Spring wheat was heading out at the end of June in the southern parts of Alberta.

Percentages.

For all parts of Canada the per cent condition of the principal crops at the 1st of July, compared with the condition at the same date last year, was 77.2 to 89 for fall wheat; 86.77 to 80 for spring wheat; 93.81 to 90 for oats; 85.60 to 83 for barley; 1.47 to 2 for rye; 84.40 to 82 for peas; 6.58 to 84 for mixed grains; 76 to 7 for hay and clover; and 82.47 to 99 for pasture. In the case of all the grain crops except fall wheat, the per cent condition is higher this year than it was last year; hay and clover and pasture are lower. In the three northwest provinces the average condition of spring wheat at the 1st of July was 95.53, and of oats, 96.56. The condition of live stock for the same periods is in every case higher this year. Horses are 95.80 to 94; milch cows, 95.20 to 94; other horned cattle, 93.77 to 87; sheep, 93 to 83; and swine, 93.30 to 85.

KISS COST HIM $5.

Montreal, July 10.—Leon Beausoleil, of Martien Lane, was fined $6 and costs for kissing a lady without permission. He was drunk at the time, and got $1 for being drunk, and $5 for the kissing.

BODY CLAIMED.

Niagara Falls, July 9.—The body of the woman who it is alleged was killed by George England, a New York Central Railroad brakeman, Wednesday night, was claimed today by W. D. M. Estill, of Youngstown, her husband, who says she deserted him two years ago. England and the woman had been living together, and were known by the neighbors as man and wife England committed suicide after killing the woman.

CORRESPONDENCE

A Telephone Grievance.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I see by your valuable paper that the Bell Telephone Company plan to make a number of improvements in the city shortly, that miles of wire and unsightly poles will disappear, etc. I do not know what they plan to do, but I do know that they are now putting up poles on our street where there have never been any poles before, at least, not for years. A person reading this eulogy of the Bell Company would naturally think that they would begin their improvements at home on their own street, but instead of this they have just erected right across the street from their own building, within ten feet, and almost directly in front of Dr. Roome's office door, one of the most twisted, crooked, dirty, lop-sided specimens of a pole ever erected on a city street; and not content with that, they have, I believe, set this nightmare squarely over my house drain, or at least within a very short distance from it, and also in erecting this monstrosity they have torn up our lawn for several feet around until it looks like the arena of a Roman amphitheatre after a bullfight. It just occurred to me, Mr. Editor, that you had failed to mention these important improvements, the Bell Telephone Company are now carrying on, while eulogizing the work that they plan to do, and I did not think it right they should be cheated out of any part of the credit due them, especially as they are seeking a new franchise shortly
