BOOM IN JAPAN TURNS TO PANIC

Country's Credit at Home and Abroad Impaired By Economic Policy.

Tokio, March 19.—In attempting to estimate Japan's position among the powers the present economic condition of the nation is interesting and important. This induces examination of the antecedents of the existing commercial and financial depression and of the policy which has brought the country to the verge of a panic by seriously impairing its credit both at home and abroad.

The west is by now tolerably familiar with the general features of the economic policy adopted by Japan immediately after the conclusion of peace with Russia, and enough time has elapsed since this innovation was put into effect to indicate some definite results of it both externally and internally. The external results are significant, but they may perhaps be better viewed from a different angle. It is the internal effects which have more directly contributed to create the present crisis, and with which the Government is now compelled to reckon before it can proceed with the prosecution of its scheme for external expansion.

Government Enters Business.

While there are many co-relative forces, the intrusion of the Government into the purely business affairs of the country is a major cause of the internal trouble which makes a brief review of the origin and progress of the national ownership and promotion policy pertinent. It has been said that in adopting this policy Japan introduced no novelties, only extremities, and this is substantially true. The circumstances which attended its initiation conclusively intimate that expediency played a decisive part in its adoption.

The first need of the Government after the war was revenue, and it cast about for anything which might directly or indirectly be turned into a source of revenue. The nation must have money, and a government can obtain money, as a rule, in only two ways, by taxation and by borrowing. It had been necessary to hypothecate most of the available assets controlled by the Government to obtain the foreign war loans, and it was not practicable to immediately again increase taxation. On the contrary, the Government, then facing the popular indignation which failure to get an indemnity had aroused, felt it necessary to defer announcement that the extraordinary war taxes must be definitely continued.

In this extremity the Government set to work to create assets amenable to its control and which it might, if occasion demanded, hypothecate, and to attract foreign capital to the support of Japanese enterprises. It is not necessary to examine in detail the various methods pursued to accomplish this end, since the purport of the policy may be illustrated by a few pertinent examples. Among these is the nationalization of the railways and the method which was pursued in this case and its results are interesting. The Government arbitrarily took over the railways at a valuation, paying for them with bonds. The project encountered bitter opposition, but the measure was forced through the diet, the occasion of its passage being attended by violent disorder in the house of representatives.

Competition Shut Off.

In this way the Government obtained properties which could be made to produce considerable revenue, since there can be no competition, and which might, in a pinch, be further hypothecated to get a foreign loan. Stimulated in many cases by Government assurance of interest on their bonds, numerous industrial projects were organized, and an attempt made to induce foreign capital to invest in them. For a time this plan had some success, but the support of the Government was so obviously designed to aid Japanese enterprises to stalk the foreign investor that it soon lost force and effect, and eventually caused a reaction. But during the period when optimism was in the saddle, which continued for at least a year after the war, the commercial and industrial activities of the nation experienced an enormous inflation.

Recent statistics show that since July, 1905, the total capitalization of enterprises is $921,612,120, of which $653,879,400 is invested in new enterprises, and $267,732,720 is increased capitalization of concerns which already existed.

An idea of the economic ratio of this expansion to the normal commercial and industrial situation of Japan may be given by stating that this increas of capitalization, immediately following an exhaustive war which more than quadrupled the national debt and tripled the general taxation, amounted to one-sixth of the estimated total wealth of the country when the war began.

"MERRY WIDOWS" PREVENT PANIC

Gorgeous Easter Millinery Obscures a Fire in the Church Pulpit.

St. Louis, Mo., April 20.—Merry Widow millinery, worn by every worshiper on the front row of St. John's Cathedral, shut off the view of the altar from the rest of the congregation and prevented a fire panic during Easter services here today.

As the Rev. Father J. Stepan was praying bouquets of paper lilies, banked about him, became ignited from candles placed among them.

Instantly the blaze spread and almost before the clergyman became aware of what had happened the flames had assumed menacing proportions.

The congregation sat with heads bowed and knew nothing of the threatened disaster.

The Merry Widow contingent was seated almost directly under the sanctuary rail, and its members were in a position where they could not see the flames.

Quickly the priest brought water from the vestry room and under direction of Father Stepan soon had the fire under control. It was put out entirely ere any one else in the church learned of its existence.

The minister then brought his prayer to a close and the service proceeded without further interruption.

No reference was made to the matter until after the congregation filed out at the end of the ceremony. Then the altar boys told of it and many members of the church returned with congratulations.

To the wearers of the hats Father Stepan gave all the credit for saving the day.

The incident teaches a lesson that vanity is not all bad, according to the priest.

"Undoubtedly," he said tonight, "the women's vanity led them to get up in front, where their millinery of much magnitude would be the observed of all observers.

"That fact is all in the world that obviated a pellmell rush for the street.

"I am convinced that had it not been for the line of Merry Widow hats before me this morning the papers would have had to tell of scores injured in the church, and possibly of deaths."

FORCES KIDNEYS TO FILTER ACIDS

Simple Prescription Overcomes All Rheumatism and Bladder Troubles.

To make up enough of the "Dandelion treatment," which is claimed to be relieving nearly every sufferer who uses it for backache, kidney complaint, sore, weak bladder and rheumatism, get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon and three ounces Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal, and again at bedtime.

Those who have tried it claim that it acts gently but thoroughly on the kidneys, relieving backache and bladder trouble and urinary difficulties almost instantly. Many cases of rheumatism are known to have been relieved within a few days, the pain and swelling diminishing with each dose.

A well-known local druggist, who is in a position to know, asserts that this prescription, wherever it becomes known, always ruins the sale of the numerous patent medicine rheumatism cures, kidney cures, etc. It is a recipe which the majority of patent medicine manufacturers, and even certain physicians, dislike to see published. Few cases, indeed, which will fail to fully yield to its peculiarly soothing and healing influence.

Hyde Park, April 20.—Mrs. Harris, of Petrolea, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. D. Barclay, here.

The sport of the season is fishing in the Thames, which is good, some fine catches being brought in.

Mrs. (Rev.) A. H. Rhodes, of Teeswater, is spending the holidays with her parents in Ettrick, and friends in Hyde Park.

INFANTS' HEALTH TO BE FIRST CARE

Exhibition to Show Best Methods for Development in Children.

London, April 19.—Several members of the royal family will give their patronage to the infants' health exhibition which is to be held in London the middle of June. The affair will also be supported by all the leading medical men in the country. There has been much emotional literature written about the appalling high mortality in infants under twelve months old, but as the result of careful inquiries which have been proceeding for some months all over the kingdom another serious factor has been brought to light—namely, the very sad condition of large numbers of infants who do not die.

Serious Condition Shown.

Statistics of infantile mortality afford a very important index of the serious conditions that affect the infant life, but by far the most serious matter affecting the commonwealth in every possible way is the condition of babies who do not die, but who are reared in a condition of hopeless malnutrition.

One of the chief objects of the exhibition will be to teach the people the pure and high ideal of motherhood. Eminent physicians are coming forward with evidence that there is an appalling number of children of the well-to-do class who are born healthful, but who within a few months of birth become desperately ill in consequence of the absence of food adapted to their precise requirements. Improper feeding in infancy often induces convulsions which often run into epilepsy. Epilepsy often ends in madness. According to eminent medical men like Sir Lauder Brunton, Sir James Crichton Brown and Dr. Ralph Vincent the effects of rickets on the nervous system are of the most far-reaching character. The lunatic asylums are largely occupied at the present time by cases of insanity arising from injuries to the nervous system.

"If you go to chest hospitals," says one eminent medical practitioner, "and select patients who are under treatment for pulmonary tuberculosis you will find the majority of them are suffering from deformities of the chest due to rickets. Pulmonary disease is simply the secondary result of injuries to the chest and of injuries to the tissues arising from rickets.

Mind Also Enfeebled.

"Rickets are responsible also for the general and permanent enfeeblement of the mind and body. The disease is entirely caused by malnutrition."

Lectures will be delivered for the purpose of laying stress on the contention that the future of England rests with the future of the children; that a mother should herself nourish her children; that she should be the chief instructor of the child and one whose example of instructed unselfishness should be the chief incentive to her children to lead healthy, noble lives.

Sir James Crichton Brown has said that whether physical deterioration is advancing or declining in the United Kingdom, it certainly exists to a very deplorable extent and that it is high time to deal with it in no half-hearted manner.

He and others, who are leading in the movement seem determined not to wait for some far-off divine event, but intend to grapple promptly with weakness, deformity, deterioration and wretchedness that welter in all large towns in Great Britain and to try to improve the breed of Britishers.

Improvements To Be Shown.

At the June exhibition will be shown all the latest improvements connected with food, clothing, nursery bedroom, recreation, physical exercise and school life.

Lectures will point out that it is not enough to say that mothers' milk is the best food for an infant, but that it must be seen that the mother is able to supply efficient food.

It is well known that some of the worst cases of malnutrition in infants admitted to children's hospitals have been those of infants entirely breast fed.

AMUSED AT SMART SET

French Editor Describes the Haughty Airs of the "400."

Paris, April 20.—New York's "400" highly amused Andre Tardieu, the famous foreign editor of the Temps, with its haughty airs and pretensions. Writing of his observations in society during his recent visit to the United States, he has this to chronicle about Gotham's smart set:

"The recruiting of this sacred battalion is a curious study. Those who belonged to it a quarter of a century ago still speak patronizingly of the newcomers.

"It is said that strategy to secure a position in it often lasts for years. The embassies are the first point of attack. Then from that base of operations the salons are conquered. Then even when Washington is vanquished New York may still hold out.

"Fashionable life is the hardest of all businesses. Five o'clock teas are greatly esteemed in Washington. One of the most interesting is that of Mrs. Cowles, President Roosevelt's sister, who is most charming in manner.

"The fashionable work in American, as elsewhere, is artificial and conventional. Americans are the most hospitable people in the world. American hospitality is not content with external politeness: it seeks to make the guest feel at home.

"The Americans give the impression of being a very young people, who, though sure of their own superiority, are a good deal concerned about the opinion of Europe.

"The longer one lives in the United States the more evident it is that there is no such a thing as the American type, especially in regard to the women. The American woman is a European product—that is, in their novels and plays.

"In Puritan, intellectual Boston, more than anywhere else, the women have that cohesion of family which characterizes the French. They have a certain independence, but not entire liberty of movement. They talk less. They are not so devoted to fashion as are the women of New York and Washington. Their chief originality is intellectual. They can talk to you about politics, the relation of church and state, or Paul Bourget's latest novel. They speak French admirably, which is a kind of certificates of distinction. Yet withal they are not blue stockings."

SIX COAST ON A COW

Port Jarvis, N. J., April 20.—Three couples, while coasting down the long hill, struck Farmer Caldwalder's cow. Sled and all slid down a quarter of a mile on the cow's back, the steel runners of the sled having caught on the cow's horns. At the bottom of the hill the young people were hurled many feet and the cow so badly injured that she had to be shot.

Mr. C. J. Placy, a prominent farmer of Wolverton, Que., was afflicted with serious kidney trouble, for years he suffered tortures with pain in his back. Doctors said he had incurable kidney disease. "I was discouraged," writes Mr. Placey, "when I was advised to try 'Fruit-a-tives.' I used altogether fifteen boxes, and am now well, all signs of kidney trouble having left me."

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices and tonics in tablet form—and never fail to cure all Kidney, Liver, Stomach, Kidney and Bowel Troubles. Fifty cents a box, six for $2 50. At all dealers.

BORAH ON ORCHARD

Haywood Prosecutor Says Steunenberg's Murderer Should Die.

Washington, April 20.—Senator Borah of Idaho, who as special counsel for that state conducted the prosecution of W. D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, on the charge of murdering former Governor Steunenberg, in his maiden speech in the Senate today, expressed his disapproval of any effort to secure leniency for Harry Orchard, the self-confessed thrower of the bomb which caused Steunenberg's death. The utterance was part of a speech on the Brownsville affray and was made in connection with the condemnation of all attempts to condone the offense at Brownsville. It was in part, as follows: "A cold-blooded, inhuman, ingovernor upon the doorstep of his home, is caught and confesses, and before the grave of the man who died a martyr to law and order is green, sentimentalism puts a halo upon the brow of the blackest spirit that ever escaped the crypts of hell.

"Men wearing the uniform of a soldier of the Union, the insignia of government and the symbol of law and order, in the quiet of night, while homes are defenseless, assault and attempt to murder whole families, and finally succeed in committing one murder. To compromise with such an act or such a deed is cowardice; it is betrayal of government; it is an insult to every intelligent and right-thinking negro, for it pre-supposes he is a traitor to his country and a criminal at heart."

The speech was made notable by many striking passages of oratory. Besides containing an analysis of the testimony taken in the Brownsville case it was in reply to Senator Foraker's recent discussion of the same subject.

Mr. Borah made clear his belief that the evidence established a conspiracy on the part of some of the negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Regiment to shoot up the town.

The morale of the army, he said, is paramount to any man's right to remain in it. If any man in the Twenty-fifth Regiment participated in the riot, and if the others connived at the crime by concealing knowledge of it to shield the guilty parties, then both were alike guilty, he declared.

So she bought a tract of land and built herself a villa a little farther down the coast. The fortune of Biarritz was made. Since then it has become the rendezvous of the upper ten of all lands. $1,000 for a Woman.

There may be nothing new under the sun, but "When the Mummy Moves" is certainly an original title for a story. It is, of course, a story of mystery, and it is so ingenious and interesting a mystery that the Chicago Record-Herald, in which it appears serially, offers a first prize of $1,000 to the woman who makes the best solution, with 115 other cash prizes for women and girls who make the next best solutions. The story begins in the Record-Herald, Thursday, April 23, and the conditions of the contest will be found accompanying each installment, in that paper. Those who have been unable to get the Record-Herald containing the early installments may obtain a reprint of those installments by writing to the Prize Mystery Editor, the Record-Herald, Chicago. While the masculine sex is not eligible in this competition, it is probable that it will interest the whole family circle, and there is no reason why men should not help their wives, daughters or friends to a successful solution.

AN AGED PHYSICIAN

AFTER YEARS OF EXPERIENCE GIVES THE FOLLOWING ADVICE.

"If you have anything to do with medicines at all, be pretty sure you know what you are taking."

Mr. Nelles, of the firm of Anderson & Nelles, our local druggists, says this is a strong point in favor of the valuable cod liver preparation, Vinol. Everything it contains is plainly printed on the label, therefore it is not a patent medicine.

Vinol contains in a highly concentrated form all of the medicinal, body-building elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but with the useless, nauseating oil eliminated, and tonic iron, which is a needful constituent for the blood, added.

This is the reason that Vinol accomplishes such wonderful results in curing chronic coughs, colds, bronchial and lung troubles, and there is nothing known to medicine that will so quickly build up the run-down, overworked, tired and debilitated, or give strength and renewed vitality to the aged, as Vinol.

We can only ask every person in London who needs such a medicine to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it fails. Anderson & Nelles, druggists, 268 Dundas street, first store west of Wellington street. Sign, Big Red Cross. Phone No. 20.
