ROSE-BELFORD'S CANADIAN MONTHLY AND NATIONAL REVIEW.

Edited by G. MERCER ADAM.

THE PUBLISHERS OF "THE CANADIAN MONTHLY" may fittingly congratulate themselves and the reading public of the Dominion on the maintenance and progress of the publication. With the next number Sixteen volumes (three of the present series) will have been issued since the original prospectus of the MAGAZINE gave expression to the conviction that "the intellectual life of the Canadian nation ought to have some organ in the form of a good periodical." It may be safely said that THE MONTHLY has during the period established its claim to be "a good periodical" at least, while it has done something towards developing the intellectual resources and cultivating the literary taste of the people. As perhaps the most important vehicle of thought and opinion in Canada, its continued and increasing support might well be a matter of individual concern to every Canadian. Relying on this, the publishers will seek to maintain the high character which THE MONTHLY has hitherto won for itself, and endeavour to make it a still worthier exponent of the national and intellectual life of the country.
