Wife vs. Husband.

More About the Bush Family's Brawling.

Rev. Henry, "D. D." Found to Be No Only Sane but Decidely Sharp.

The case of Bush against Bush was continued before Squires Lacey and Smyth, from 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 7 in the evening. On the reassembling of court, Constable Corsant was called, and said that when he went to arrest the old man he picked up a whiffletree to knock him down. After hearing further evidence, the magistrate dismissed the case, and deemed "Rev." Henry Bush, "D.D.," not only rational, but as sharp as a steel trap.

The assault cases were then taken up. The old man charged his son Charles with abusing him on Sunday, July 5. He said he had been given permission to use Mrs. Friendship's horse, and put it in the barn. It had been turned loose on the road on the order of Mrs. Bush. The old man went after it to bring it back, but was intercepted at the gate by his fleet-footed boy, armed with a club. The old man claims Charlie hit him when he went to tear down the gate.

The son denied this, and after the witness had been excluded from the room, swore that his mother was not there at the time.

When the mother was called she said she had been there, but the evidence of Miss Bush was to the effect that her mother was asleep at the time. The magistrate fined him $1, with costs, which will amount to $9 60 in this case.

The charge of assault against the wife was dismissed. She merely held a big club over Bush's head and threatened dire vengeance upon him if he dared to cut any more of her grain.

In summing up the case, Mr. Essery admitted that the old man, who had been accused of insanity, was as sharp as a thousand steel traps, but said he was a disgraceful and careless father. No man with a grain of self-respect would attach "Rev." before his name and "D.D." after it, who had no claim on earth to it.

This morning it was learned that the old man, after having walked all the way home to the ninth concession, and there found that his wife and son had taken the window out of the little domicile on the premises of his wife, in which he has been allowed to live, and which is said to be an undesirable abode from a standpoint of cleanliness, he came in again this morning looking for the magistrate, and more trouble will likely follow.
