To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23.

An interesting and lively day is presaged from this day's planetary configurations. Mars is strong—bringing energy, enterprise and stimulus to all lines of endeavor. There is need for caution, however, in the threatening position of Neptune with relation to Moon and Mercury. The danger is from fraud, treachery and misrepresentation. Sign all papers and documents carefully. Money should also be handled with care, as the Jupiter influence, though weak, is not favorable for speculation, investment or other financial outlay. The mental faculties may receive fine impetus from the energizing principle of Mars in aspect with Mercury. The mind may also trend toward the occult or mystical under a Neptune vibration.

Those whose birthday it is may have a successful year if they handle affairs with discretion and care, and avoid risk of money. A child born on this day will be active, intelligent and successful.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND
ADELE GARRISON'S NEW PHASE OF REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The News Mrs. Durkee Blurted Out To Madge.

June loafed its lazy length along, and somehow—neither of us ever knew just how—Alice Holcombe and I managed to pull the Bayview high school pupils through the trying ordeals of "Regents" (the final examinations prescribed by the state board), and to wind up the business of the year in fairly creditable fashion.

Kenneth Stockbridge, behind jail bars, still retained his dogged, incomprehensible silence. From Alice, who, of course, was in a position to know all the gossip of the village, I learned that the principal's uncle—his parents, fortunately, were both dead—had arrived in the village, bringing with him an eminent attorney for the defence of his nephew.

The uncle was rich, Alice said, and had never treated his nephew decently, but his family pride would not permit him to leave any stone unturned that might prevent a smirch upon the family name. But it was rumored that the eminent legal light had had no better success in getting Kenneth Stockbridge to talk than had the principal's opponents.

Trying Days.

Milly Stockbridge's body had been laid to rest in the village cemetery after a garish public funeral, which all of the teachers except myself attended. I pleaded a convenient headache and sent a beautiful cluster of flowers with my card and Dicky's attached. I knew, of course, that I would never return to the Bayview school, but not even if my livelihood had depended upon it could I have attended that funeral. It took all the courage I could muster to make the formal brief call at the home that courtesy demanded.

I shall always look back upon those closing weeks of school as among the most irksome of my life. I always begrudge every moment of June that I spend indoors, anyway, and when to the discomfort of spending the long, beautiful summer days in the stuffy schoolrooms was added the unpleasantness of the queer conditions surrounding my work and the irritation of Dicky's behavior, I felt that my favorite month had turned anything but a smiling face to me.

Not that I spent much time fretting over Dicky's persistence in his plan of remaining away from home until I should explain to him the emotion he had misinterpreted upon the morning I had stolen down to get the newspaper. In the first year of my marriage, such a decision upon his part would have bowed me to the
