FIRE ENGINES WILL GO.

New York's High Pressure System is a Success.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The most thoro test of the ne whigh water pressure fire-fighting system that has yet been made was given with remarkably satisfactory results, in West, between Bank and Gansevoort-streets.

At the conclusion Fire Chief Croker declared enthusiastically that the test had conclusively proved that fire could be fought without fire engines, and that it would be only a matter of a short time before the present engine system would be entirely replaced by high-pressure pumping stations. Chief Roran of Chicago and Chief Ryan of Boston were present at the test.

Eight hydrants each supplying four hoses were used. With the entire thirty-two hoses in operation and with a pressure of 170 pounds, over 28,000 gallons of water were discharged in one minute. This is far more than enough to combat a fire of any size within the precincts of the station.

When the tower and four new high-pressure wagons were put in operation the great docks and buildings on the river front were obscured from the view of those standing on the east side of the street. With the added pressure of slamesing two hoses to one nozzle, these fire-fighting machines were able to throw the water for a distance of two blocks.
