A CARD.

D. K. MINOR

PRESENTS his compliments to those gentlemen and friends who have thus far aided him in sustaining the publications which he has issued during the last three or four years. He feels under peculiar obligations to those who have contributed to their support, either as subscribers, or contributors to their columns; and especially so to those who have exerted their influence to extend their circulation. In return for these favors, and the indulgence with which his frequent delays and want of punctuality have been treated, he can only return his thanks and express his gratitude; and in relation to the future, say that no effort on his part will be omitted, which will tend to render the works useful to those for whom they are designed, and interesting and profitable to those who patronise them; and he assures those who may be willing to continue their patronage, that, notwithstanding the loss, by the late conflagration, of almost his entire establishment, including the back volumes of all his works, stereotype plates, and printing materials, to the amount of near nine thousand dollars.—With a view of rendering the MECHANICS' MAGAZINE more valuable to its readers, he will re-publish in it, during the ensuing year, NICHOLSON'S small treatise on ARCHITECTURE, with 41 pages of Engravings, illustrating the different orders of Architecture, which, of itself, costs three dollars a copy—together with some other rare and costly works.

In order, however, to do this he is compelled, by his recent heavy losses, to call upon all those subscribers who are now in arrears, to remit, promptly, by mail, the amount due, together with the subscription for the ensuing year, as it is only by this means, and the indulgence of friends, that he will be enabled to continue the publication in such a manner as to merit the approbation of its patrons. Circumstances beyond his control, the unparallelled conflagration of December 16th, compel him to this measure; and he trusts that every subscriber, even those who had concluded to discontinue the work, will contribute in this way, and by procuring new subscribers, who will pay in advance, for one or MORE years, to enable him to regain, by industry and devotion to business, what he has lost by the chastening hand of an over-ruling, yet just and wise, Providence.

He begs further to observe, that, notwithstanding the loss of nearly the entire amount of what he has accumulated by many years of hard labor, he still possesses a determined and unalterable resolution to persevere; which, with a tolerable share of health, and the patronage of a liberal and generous public, will, he is sure, enable him soon to regain, not only what he has lost, but even more than, until this disaster, he had hoped to attain.

This is a time, then, for all those disposed to sustain works of utility, which disseminate useful and valuable information, as well as those who may be themselves benefitted by their perusal, to aid him in sustaining the AMERICAN RAIL-ROAD JOURNAL; the MECHANICS' MAGAZINE; and the NEW-YORK FARMER, all of which are published by him, at No. 7 Wall-street, New-York.

Terms of the Mechanics Magazine $3 per annum.

☞ Remittances may be made by mail, at my risk, when mailed with the knowledge of the Post-master.
